This net cash change does not represent the 1998–99 cash increase allocated to North Wales Health Authority which, on the start position for 1997–98 (adjusted for recurrent changes and repatriations), was £12.520 million or 4.0 per cent.

Beef Sales

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his Department's efforts to promote the sale of beef produced in Wales. [41488]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Clwyd, West (Mr. Thomas) on 30 April 1998, Official Report, column 199.

Skills Shortages

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how he proposes to eliminate skills shortages in skilled manufacturing industry in Wales. [41492]

Mr. Hain: A wide range of action is in hand to tackle skill shortages in manufacturing industry, most notably the "Action Plan for Manufacturing Training in Wales" which has been drawn up by the Council of Welsh TECs with the support of the Welsh Development Agency, the Development Board for Rural Wales, the Funding Councils, the WLGA, the CBI and the TUC. An additional £3.5 million has been made available in 1998–99 for the FEFCW, working closely with the TECs, to meet locally identified skill needs and to support training in key advanced skills directly relevant to realising the Action Plan.

The Education and Training Action Group is also looking at the priority skill needs which exist in Wales and how the education and training system might adapt to meet these.

Milk Prices

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with dairy producers concerning the price of milk; and if he will make a statement. [41490]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I am conscious, through discussions with the farming unions and directly with dairy producers, that farm gate milk prices have fallen compared to last year. The latest available information suggests that in March this year, producers received on average 19.72 pence per litre. This was nearly 4 pence per litre down on the same period the previous year. This is mainly due to the effects of the strong pound which has reduced farm profitability across a range of sectors and mirrors the occasions in the past when sterling was weak and farming profitability often improved. However, the Government appreciate the present difficulties in the dairy sector and we are keeping the situation as it develops under close review.

In part, low prices are due also to the apparent lack of demand for milk for manufacturing. I am aware that farmers have concerns about the rules governing the selling system which they believe to be contributing to the low milk price they currently receive. The Monopolies and Mergers Commission is currently investigating the supply of raw milk in Great Britain following a referral by the Office of Fair Trading. The Government welcome this investigation which will examine all aspects of the current selling system.

Hill Farms

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessments he has made of the importance of hill farms to the rural economy in the uplands of Wales. [41489]

Mr. Win Griffiths: An assessment of the importance of hill farming to the rural economy is contained in a report on "LFA Policy in Wales: A Review of the Socio-Economic and Environmental Effects of the HLCA Scheme" commissioned by the Welsh Office and published by the Welsh Institute of Rural Studies on 20 April 1998. The sheep and cattle sectors predominate in the less favoured areas of Wales and the report states that using 1991 estimates for every on-farm job in the sheep sector there are 0.36 jobs in other industries in Wales. The comparable figure in the cattle sector is 0.35 jobs.

New Deal (Disabled People)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how he expects the New Deal to assist those in Wales with disabilities; and if he will make a statement. [41496]

Mr. Hain: The New Deal for People with Disabilities will help people with a disability or long-term illness who want to work to do so.

£195 million has been set aside across the UK to develop a range of initiatives to help those currently dependent on benefits to return to work; those in work to remain in work; and to help carers balance any responsibilities with work, or to take up work when their caring responsibilities come to an end.

The programme of help will include innovative projects which will test ways to help people move into work and remain in work; an information campaign; research into current and developing provision and benefit changes to remove disincentives to work.

Central to this will be personal advice to help disabled people and those with long-standing illness to identify and overcome barriers to work. This approach will enable tailored plans to be developed for each individual who participates under the New Deal. This Personal Adviser Service will be piloted from October 1998 in a number of areas. I am delighted that one of these pilots will be in Wales (covering Merthyr, Aberdare, Blackwood, Caerphilly and Ebbw Vale).

Playgroups

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what moneys he has given to pre-school playgroups in Wales; and if he will make a statement on his policy towards playgroups; [41497]

(2) what new funding he proposes for the playgroup movements in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [41651]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Playgroups have vital role in the development of both childcare and early years education for the under fives. We want to work in partnership with them to help meet the needs of children in Wales and their families. Wales Pre-school Playgroups Association and Mudiad Ysgolion Meithrin, as the principal voluntary organisations in this field, continue to receive core grant support from the Welsh Office.

We will expect the 22 early years partnerships in Wales to consider available provision in playgroups in drawing up their early years development plans. Early education places in playgroup settings identified in EYDPs will be funded from resources we have made available in the 1998–99 local government revenue settlement. The plans will take effect from 1 September. Partnerships have until 31 May to submit their draft proposals to my right hon. Friend.

I am currently considering the development of a childcare strategy for Wales. Our proposals, which will seek to build on all the diverse forms of quality provision, including playgroups, already available, will be published shortly.

New Deal (Long-term Unemployed)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will increase the proportion of money available under the New Deal for the long-term unemployed who are over 25 years old. [41493]

Mr. Hain: £3.5-£4.5 million, depending on take up, has been set aside from the windfall tax for the New Deal for people aged 25 and over in Wales. In addition, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has already announced that a further £100 million is to be made available, across the UK, to pilot an extension of the New Deal approach for this age group. An appropriate share of this will come to Wales, the exact amount being dependent upon the number, scale and nature of the pilots.

Gwent Tertiary College

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many credit cards have been issued by Gwent Tertiary College; who has been issued with a credit card; for what purpose credit cards were issued; and what was the annual cost to Gwent Tertiary College for the use of the credit cards in the last year for which figures are available. [41386]

Mr. Hain: The information requested is not held centrally, but I am copying this question and answer to the Chief Executive of the College.

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current student to teacher ratio in Gwent Tertiary College; and what were the figures in (a) 1995, (b) 1996 and (c) 1997. [41547]

Mr. Hain: The latest available student to teacher ratio for Gwent Tertiary College is for the academic year 1995/96 and is 16.4.

PRIME MINISTER

Prime Minister

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Wednesday 13 May. [41355]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with Ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I will have further such meetings later today.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the potential for extracting plutonium from exported MOX fuel for use in the production of nuclear weapons; and if she will make a statement. [40328]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 7 May 1998]: No detailed assessment has been made of the potential for extracting plutonium from exported MOX fuel for use in the production of nuclear weapons. I understand, however, that it is technically difficult to produce nuclear weapons using the reactor grade plutonium contained in MOX fuel. The potential for theft or diversion of plutonium, including that in MOX fuel, is fully taken into account in the application of internationally agreed safeguards and security measures. Plutonium, including that in MOX fuel, is exported only to countries that have provided the necessary assurances in relation to physical protection, safeguards and peaceful use.

Arms Exports

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what changes to guidelines on arms sales have been made by her Department to reflect the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's ethical foreign policy. [41158]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 8 May 1998]: Licences to export arms and other goods controlled for strategic reasons are issued by the President of the Board of Trade and the Export Control Organisation of the Department of Trade and Industry is the licensing authority. All relevant individual licence applications are circulated by the DTI to other Government Departments with an interest, as determined by them in line with their policy responsibilities. These include the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Ministry of Defence and the Department for International Development.

The criteria announced by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary on 28 July 1997, Official Report, columns 26–29, are used when considering all individual applications for licences to export goods entered in Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994. The criteria are also applied to licence applications for the export of dual-use goods when there are grounds for believing that the end user of such goods will be the armed forces or the internal security forces of the recipient country.

The criteria are not applied mechanistically and judgment is always required. Individual applications are considered case by case.

Recreational Craft Directive

Mr. Dawson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the impact of the Recreational Craft Directive on small traditional boat builders; and if she will make a statement. [41665]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 12 May 1998]: At the time that this Directive was being negotiated, the Department commissioned a Compliance Cost Assessment. This report concluded that, of those UK boat-building companies affected, the extra costs of compliance would be around 1% of the value of the industry's output. Although costs differed, dependent on the type of product, the survey concluded that there was general industry support for the principle of the Directive and that an undue burden would not exist provided that the regulations were appropriately enforced. My officials continue to liaise closely with those concerned to ensure that this is the case.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which Ministers have visited the principal applicant countries for EU membership over the past (a) six months and (b) 12 months; and if she will list the countries concerned. [41247]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 12 May 1998]: My noble Friend the Minister for Trade has visited the following principal EU applicant States: the Czech Republic, Poland, and Hungary. All the visits took place during the last six months.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list those countries other than EU member states and the principal EU applicant states which Ministers in her Department have visited in the past (a) six months and (b) 12 months. [41246]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 12 May 1998]: DTI Ministers have visited the following countries outside EU Member States and the principal EU applicant states:

	a) Last 6 months	b) Last 12 months
President of the Board of Trade	India Australia China and Hong Kong Pakistan Russia	Japan USA
Minister for Trade	Quatar UAE Yemen Zimbabwe Australia New Zealand Japan Israel	USA South Africa Thailand Malaysia Chile Argentina Korea Indonesia
Minister for Science, Energy and Industry	USA Switzerland	Canada Africa Azerbaijan
Minister of State	—	—
Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe	—	—
Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Competition and Consumer Affairs	USA	—
Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Small Firms, Trade and Industry	Egypt Kenya Uganda	Brazil

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Page: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to the oral statement of 6 April 1998, Official Report, column 123, what recent representations she has received from hon. Members representing constituencies in the South East on manufacturing industry; and what response she has issued. [41074]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 12 May 1998]: I received a representation from the hon. Gentleman and in reply acknowledged the interest he has taken in the state of manufacturing industry.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Indonesia

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what reports he has received of the abduction of Indonesian human rights activists by army units; and what representations he has made to the Indonesian authorities; [41555]

(2) what reports he has received relating to the ability of Indonesian students to exercise their rights to freedom of assembly and expression; and what representations he has made to the Indonesian authorities on this matter. [41562]

Mr. Fatchett: We have received many disturbing reports about disappearances, detentions and clashes between the Indonesian security forces and students. HM Ambassador in Jakarta has raised our concerns with the Indonesian authorities together with colleagues from the EU Troika. We have called on the Indonesian authorities to exercise maximum restraint in protecting and restoring public order; to uphold democratic rights such as freedom of expression and assembly; and to ensure that universally accepted human rights are not violated. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his recent meeting with President Suharto raised political reform and emphasised the need for respect for individual rights.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assurances he has received from the Indonesian Government regarding the end use of British-made water cannon; and what representations he has made to the Indonesian authorities regarding the recent use of water cannon. [41544]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 11 May 1998]: We continue to urge the Indonesian authorities to respond to civil unrest with restraint. We emphasise to the Indonesian Government the need for political reform and for respect for individual rights, as my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer did in Jakarta last week.

This Government have received no assurances about the use of British-made water cannon. Our records for licence applications that have been technically assessed show that we have received none for the export of water cannon to Indonesia since 1 May 1997. I would be very surprised if an application for such an export licence were to be forthcoming.

European Communities

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for New Forest, West (Mr. Swayne) of 18 March 1998, Official Report, column 611, for what reasons the Government will not incorporate Article K7 of the Treaty on European Union into United Kingdom law; and what the consequences of not incorporating Article K7 will be for the implementation of the Treaty of Amsterdam in the United Kingdom. [41753]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The European Communities (Amendment) Bill, the passage of which will allow the United Kingdom to ratify the Treaty of Amsterdam, incorporates into domestic law those parts of the Treaty of Amsterdam which give rise to Community rights and obligations. It does not incorporate the Treaty's provisions dealing with Pillars II and III (such as Article K7), since these are intergovernmental provisions which do not give rise to Community rights and obligations.

British Virgin Islands

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will indicate for each island belonging to British Overseas Territories in the Anegada Passage if it is (a) both rat and cat free and (b) possesses (i) a pier and (ii) an airfield. [41627]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Anegada and Virgin Gorda, two of the British Virgin Islands, are located on the north-western side of the Anegada passage. Both have cats and rats, and piers and an airfield.

East Timor

Dr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has for visits by himself or other Foreign Office representatives to East Timor during the United Kingdom tenure of the EU presidency; and what plans he has to investigate human rights abuses in that country. [41719]

Mr. Fatchett: HM Ambassador in Jakarta will be leading a visit of EU Troika Ambassadors from Jakarta to East Timor in early June. We continue to monitor the human rights situation in the territory with the help of information received from a wide range of sources.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Economic Development

9. Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultation she has had with business about the prospects for the economy following the Belfast agreement. [40688]

Mr. Ingram: I have had discussions with many business people in Northern Ireland since 10 April. Prospects for the local economy will be enhanced enormously if we can now secure a lasting political settlement. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor's initiative, announced by my hon. Friend yesterday, will further help in a major way to realise these prospects.

15. Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment she has made of the scope for increased cross-border co-operation on economic development. [40695]

Mr. Ingram: Significant cross-border co-operation already exists in the areas of rail and road developments, tourism, trade and energy. It offers mutual advantage and real economic benefits to both Northern Ireland and the Republic. Cross-border trade in particular has grown substantially in recent years generating greater wealth and employment in both parts of Ireland. In 1997 it was worth over £1.6 billion and has the potential for further growth.

19. Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the future prospects for economic development in Northern Ireland. [40699]

Mr. Ingram: Prospects for economic development in Northern Ireland are very encouraging. The number of people in employment is the highest on record. Unemployment has fallen to well below the EU average. Manufacturing output is outpacing the UK average. These prospects would be enormously enhanced with lasting peace and an agreed political settlement.

26. Dr. George Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment she has made of the benefits for economic development from cross-border co-operation. [40707]

Mr. Ingram: Government agencies and the private sector have been co-operating with their counterparts for a number of years on a wide range of economic activities including infrastructure, tourism, trade and energy issues. Such mutually beneficial co-operation can contribute significantly to the generation of employment and greater prosperity in both parts of Ireland.

Parades Commission

11. Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the Parades Commission. [40690]

Mr. Ingram: The Parades Commission has the statutory responsibility of encouraging and facilitating local accommodation on contentious parades and, where this is not possible, making legally binding determinations on such parades. In carrying out this difficult but important task the Parades Commission retains the Government's complete confidence in its ability to operate in a totally independent, impartial and even-handed way in the best interests of the whole community in Northern Ireland.

Security Situation

12. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is her assessment of the current security situation. [40691]

16. Mr. Savidge: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is her assessment of the security threat in the run-up to the referendum vote. [40696]

Mr. Ingram: In recent weeks, there have been a number of terrorist incidents committed by groups attempting to de-rail the peace process.

Since the signing of the Agreement on 10 April there have been two murders and several attempts have been made to detonate explosive devices. Sadly, a continuing threat exists from those terrorist groups opposed to the Agreement. The security forces remain alert to deal with this.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

13. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the proposed review of the RUC. [40693]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Ruislip-Northwood (Mr. Wilkinson).

Guardsman Shackleton

14. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will compile and publish a report on the circumstances in which Guardsman Shackleton was killed in Northern Ireland; and if she will assess the state of knowledge about the killing among the troops of the British Army at the time. [40694]

Mr. Ingram: The brutal murder of Guardsman Shackleton was fully investigated by the RUC. The circumstances surrounding his murder were also widely reported in the media at the time. The Secretary of State does not believe that publishing a report at this time would be appropriate.

With regard to the knowledge about the killing among the troops in Northern Ireland, soldiers across the command were aware of the murder of one of their colleagues.

Human Rights

17. Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the impact of the Belfast agreement on the Government's human rights policies. [40697]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I refer my hon Friend to the answer I gave earlier to my hon. Friends the Members for Slough (Fiona Mactaggart) and for Birmingham, Hall Green (Mr. McCabe).

Grammar Schools

18. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of secondary school children in Northern Ireland attend grammar schools. [40698]

Mr. Worthington: In 1997–98 some 41% of school pupils in years 8–14 attend grammar schools, ie. 35% of pupils in years 8–12 and 73% of pupils in years 13–14.

Assembly

20. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on progress in drafting legislation for the assembly and the formation of the Executive. [40700]

Marjorie Mowlam: The Northern Ireland (Elections) Act 1998, providing for the holding of elections to the new Northern Ireland Assembly, received Royal Assent on 7 May 1998. It will permit the meeting of the Assembly in shadow form, and the designation of shadow Ministers, as provided for in the Belfast Agreement.

Legislation giving further effect to the Agreement, including the discharge of Executive functions, will be presented to the House later.

Decommissioning

21. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many terrorist weapons have been handed in since 10 April; and when she expects to draw up a timetable for the decommissioning of all such weapons. [40701]

Mr. Ingram: No terrorist weapons have yet been decommissioned. The Good Friday Agreement commits all who endorse it to use all their efforts to achieve the total disarmament of all paramilitary organisations and confirmed their intention to use their influence to achieve the decommissioning of all paramilitary arms within two years following endorsement of the Agreement. As part of the Agreement the two Governments have undertaken to bring the relevant decommissioning schemes into force by the end of June.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations she has received regarding the decommissioning of illegal weapons; and if she will make a statement. [40703]

Mr. Ingram: Many representations have been made to the Government on decommissioning over the last year. It would not be possible to quantify the numerous discussions which have taken place during the Talks process, in meetings with the Independent International Commission on Decommissioning and with representatives of the Government of the Republic of Ireland.

Equality Commission

22. Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the consultation process prior to the establishment of the Equality Commission. [40702]

Mr. Worthington: The White Paper "Partnership of Equality" invited written comments on a proposal for the establishment of a single Equality Commission. Consultation on this proposal will extend to 12 June 1998, after which comments will be given careful consideration by the Government before final decisions are made.

Youth Unemployment

24. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the prospects for reducing youth unemployment in the Province. [40704]

Mr. Worthington: All 16 and 17 year olds in Northern Ireland who leave school are guaranteed a place in education or on Jobskills, a programme which gives them the opportunity to train to NVQ level II. Over 12,000 trainees participated in Jobskills during 1997/98 with some 52 per cent. gaining employment immediately after leaving the programme. As of 6 April 1998 the New Deal for 18–24 year olds who have been unemployed for over six months came into effect. It is estimated that approximately 16,000 young people will enter the programme during this financial year and New Deal Personal Advisers will help all to improve their employability and find jobs.

Gender Equality

25. Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations she has received about gender equality issues as set out in the Belfast agreement. [40705]

Marjorie Mowlam: I have not to date received representations on gender equality aspects of the Agreement. However, the role of women in the new arrangements for Northern Ireland is an important matter for all the parties to the Agreement to take forward.

Comprehensive Spending Review

27. Mr. Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress is being made on the comprehensive spending review in Northern Ireland. [40708]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Substantial progress has already been made on the Review and I expect it to be completed later this year, in line with the national timetable.

Referendum

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the role of civil servants in the referendum campaign. [42125]

Mr. Paul Murphy: During the campaign, as at all other times, civil servants are required to conduct themselves in accordance with the Civil Service Code and, in the case of the Northern Ireland Civil Service, their Code of Ethics also. To reinforce this, guidance is being issued both to the Home Civil Service members of the NIO and to the Northern Ireland Civil Service. I have arranged for a copy of this guidance to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Scallop Dredging

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the effect on the marine environment off the South Devon coast caused by scallop dredging. [41141]

Mr. Morley: Preliminary results from work conducted in 1997 off Start Bay and Salcombe indicate that in areas open to scallop dredging or other bottom fishing the seabed has a relatively uniform topography inhabited by animals able to withstand bottom fishing disturbance. Areas where that type of fishing does not take place have a wide diversity of habitats supporting animals sensitive to fishing disturbance.

It is not possible to infer that scallop dredging is the cause of the observed difference because we do not know the original state of the survey areas which are, in any event, subject to tidal effects, storm damage and other natural events.

Radioactive Waste Dumping

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the answer of 15 July 1997, Official Report, column 147–48, what further information his Department now has on dumping of radioactive waste at sea. [41364]

Mr. Rooker: I refer my hon. Friend to the replies I gave to our hon. Friends the Members for Greenock and Inverclyde (Mr. Godman) and for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours) on 30 July 1997 and 24 November 1997, Official Report, columns 322–24 and 409–10.

Quarantine Kennels

Mr. Gale: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the (a) facilities, (b) standards of care and (c) standards of inspection in quarantine kennels; if he will revoke the licences of those quarantine kennels that are below acceptable standards; and if he will make a statement. [41511]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 12 May 1998]: All authorised quarantine premises in Great Britain are inspected by MAFF Veterinary Officers at least four times a year. The inspections are carried out to check that if any animal on the premises had rabies, the disease would not be transmitted. Serious infringements could result in revocation of authorisation. The inspections also look at compliance with the Voluntary Code of Practice for the Welfare of Dogs and Cats in Quarantine Premises in respect of those premises that have agreed to abide by the Code. Should the Animal Health (Amendment) Bill, which the Government support, receive Royal Assent, this Voluntary Code of Practice will be replaced by statutory welfare standards.

A television programme on 5 May made serious allegations about disregard for the quarantine regulations and poor welfare of animals at two quarantine kennels. These are being looked into urgently by my department, and inspection visits to the premises concerned have taken place since the programme.

Common Fisheries Policy

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the Government's policy towards the Common Fisheries Policy derogations relating to six and 12 mile limits; and what action he will take to provide a basis for future investment in new boats by inshore fishermen. [41607]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 12 May 1998]: The Government are committed to the continuation of the restrictions on access by foreign vessels within the 6 and 12 mile fishery limits. This and the continued application of appropriate conservation measures will help ensure that inshore fishermen have a sound basis for future investment decisions.

Oil Spill Treatments

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which regulations and licensing arrangements apply to products used (a) to treat oil spills on (i) rocks and beaches and (ii) the sea and (b) to clean birds and animals affected by oil spills. [41603]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 12 May 1998]: Products used to treat oil spilled at sea, including any area of the shoreline (such as rocks and beaches) which is submerged at mean high water springs, must be approved by the relevant Fisheries Minister under the terms of the Deposits in the Sea (Exemptions) Order 1985 and the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985.

These regulations do not apply to products used to clean birds or animals affected by oil spills. I am not aware of any other regulations or licensing arrangements applicable to such products.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Swimming

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will ensure that the standard of attainment reached by schools in respect of swimming and water safety is recorded in OFSTED inspections. [41453]

Mr. Byers: This is a matter for HM Chief Inspector of Schools. I have asked him to write to the hon. Member and to place a copy of his letter in the Library.

New Deal Hotline

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the confidential telephone hotline established for employees under the New Deal will be accessible to deaf and hard of hearing people through the provision of a textphone service and the training of hotline staff in the use of the Typetalk telephone relay service. [41350]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The New Deal Hotline which has been established as a point of contact for participants, employers, partners or providers who have a compliment or concern about New Deal, is available to deaf and hard of hearing people through the Textline number—0113 285 8654.

The Hotline is resourced by a minimum of two operators in each Employment Service region. These operators have been trained in the use of the Typetalk telephone relay service.

Supported Employment

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much it would have cost to increase the capitation grant for supported employment placements by the same percentage as other benefit upratings for 1998–99. [41781]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Supported Employment capitation grant is not a benefit paid directly to individuals. It is a subsidy paid to employers to help them with the costs of employing disabled people. It would therefore be misleading and inappropriate to apply the benefit uprating percentage to it.

Sheltered Employment

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much is built into the budget assumptions for increasing the capitation grant for sheltered employment placements for 1999–2000. [41780]

Mr. Alan Howarth: There are no budget assumptions yet for 1999–2000.

Budgets for specific Departmental programmes will be finalised when the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review has been announced later in the year.

HEALTH

Human Placenta

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what health rules govern the use of human placenta for human consumption; what regulations cover the safe storage of human placenta for food purposes; and what advice is given to parents intending to use the placenta of their child for food purposes; [25222]

(2) what plans he has to regulate the sale of human placenta for human consumption. [25224]

Mr. Milburn: Medical and midwifery personnel are able to offer advice to mothers about this practice. We have no proposals for new regulation in this area.

Dental Services

Mr. Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS dentists practice in Lincolnshire; and what is the average number of people registered with each dental practitioner (a) in Lincolnshire and (b) nationally. [26542]

Mr. Milburn: There were 135 General Dental Service dentists on Lincolnshire Health Authority's list on 30 September 1997. At the same date the average number of registered patients per dentist was 2,597 in Lincolnshire and 1,599 in England.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the forecast (a) amount and (b) percentage level of interest liability at the end of 1997–98 for each NHS health trust in operational deficit at the end of the second quarter of the year. [32392]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 5 March 1998]: The forecast amount of interest payable for 1997–98 and the interest as a percentage of forecast income is disclosed in the table for trusts that at the end of Quarter 2 were forecasting operational deficits at the year end.

Name	Interest payable £000	Interest as a percentage of income
Countess of Chester hospital	1,886	3.33
North West London Mental Health	564	1.98
South Manchester University hospitals	3,258	2.10
St. James's & Seacroft University hospital	3,849	1.81
Swindon & Marlborough	1,505	2.21

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list (a) the amount and (b) the percentage level of interest liability and to whom that interest is payable for each NHS health trust in operational deficit at the end of the second quarter of 1997–98. [32394]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 5 March 1998]: The amount of interest payable at the end of Quarter 2 1997–98, and the interest as a percentage of income is disclosed in the table. The interest payable is almost entirely due to the Consolidated Loans Fund. National Health Service trusts are allowed to open commercial bank accounts and, subject to Departmental agreement, can use an overdraft facility. Trusts in the table marked with an asterisk have an overdraft at Quarter 2, but relevant interest payable is not separately identified in monitoring returns.

Trust name	Interest payable £000	Interest as a percentage of income
Durham County Ambulance Service	71	1.66
Epsom Health Care*	1,314	5.09
Good Hope Hospital	900	3.28

North West London Mental Health	282	1.81
South Manchester University Hospitals	1,629	2.10
Swindon & Marlborough*	796	2.31
Warwickshire Ambulance Service*	58	2.00

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the forecast (a) annual income, (b) expenditure and (c) operational surplus or deficit at the end of the year of 1997–98 for each NHS trust based on their 1997–98 second quarter returns to the NHS Executive; and what is the forecast retained surplus or deficit for each trust at the end of 1997–98 based on these returns and taking account of (i) profit or loss on fixed assets, (ii) net interest receivable or payable and (iii) public dividend payable. [32395]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 5 March 1998]: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Health Authorities

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the forecast (a) annual income, (b) expenditure and (c) operational surplus or deficit at the end of the year of 1997–98 for each NHS health authority based on their 1997–98 second quarter returns to the NHS Executive. [32393]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 5 March 1998]: Forecast annual income, expenditure and surplus or deficit at the end of the 1997–98 year based on the second quarter returns to the National Health Service Executive is given in a table, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Ambulances (Avon)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 10 March 1998, Official Report, column 115, on Avon Ambulance Service NHS Trust, if he will provide corresponding information on vehicle age for each of the other ambulance trusts for which his Department is responsible. [34562]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is not routinely collected by the Department, and can be provided only at disproportionate cost. The information given for Avon Ambulance Service National Health Service Trust was available as a result of a special exercise conducted locally.

Guardian ad Litem Service

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the cost to each local authority in England and Wales of operating the Guardian ad Litem and Reporting Officer Service in each of the last three years; [31945]

(2) what was the average cost incurred by the Guardian ad Litem and Reporting Officer Service in each local authority area for work on behalf of courts in each of the last three years. [31944]

Mr. Boateng: For 1994–95 and 1995–96, the information requested, as supplied by local authorities in England, is available in the form of computer tables on the DH World Wide Web pages (Internet reference http:// www . open . gov . uk / doh / public / pss-stat . htm) separately for groups of LAs. For convenience a collated table will be placed in the Library.

Corresponding expenditure data for 1996–97 are not yet available. Data for Wales are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Information on the average cost incurred by the Guardian ad Litem and Reporting Officer Service in each local authority is not held centrally.

Funding Deficits

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the deficits of each (a) health authority and (b) health trust for the first quarter of the financial year 1997–98. [16716]

Mr. Milburn: [holding answer 19 November 1997]: The forecast surpluses and deficits for all health authorities and National Health Service trusts for the first quarter of 1997–98 are listed in tables, together with information for the second and third quarters. Copies of the tables have been placed in the Library.

As this is fast-track management information which provides a forecast estimate of the position at the end of the year, it is normal for movements to occur during the year.

Forecast income and expenditure figures do not always reflect the underlying financial position, and a large income and expenditure deficit does not necessarily indicate financial problems. There are a number of factors which should be taken into account when looking at the underlying financial position, for example:

- an NHS trust may make a charge to the income and expenditure account for provisions such as estimated clinical negligence liabilities and early retirement costs—even though actual payments are not made at this time. In accordance with Generally Accepted Accounting Practice (GAAP), these provisions are made in respect of future liabilities; and any deficit caused by charging them to the income and expenditure account now is therefore not necessarily indicative of underlying financial problems;
- a health authority which lent (brokered) cash to another health authority in 1996–97 will be repaid this year. Consistent with GAAP, this repaid cash will not score as income on the health authority's income and expenditure account. Any income and expenditure deficit caused by spending repaid brokerage would not necessarily indicate underlying financial problems;
- a health authority or NHS trust in receipt of transitional funding may have a balanced position or even an income and expenditure surplus.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which trusts were placed on a red light status in relation to their finances in each region in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [17338]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 24 November 1997]: National Health Service trusts are placed on a red light status when the NHS Executive has concerns over their financial performance. The assessment is based on current and forecast financial positions and is subject to change throughout the year.

Information for 1996–97 Quarter 4 has previously been placed in the Library but is included here for completeness. The analysis of red lights by region is provided for Quarter 4 1995–96, Quarter 4 1996–97 and Quarter 3 1997–98 in a table, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

The criteria used for allocating red lights in 1995–96 and 1996–97 have been the subject of a previous reply I gave the right hon. Member for Flyde (Mr. Jack) on 31 July 1997, Official Report, column 617. The criteria for 1997–98 have been changed to promote consistency and objectivity across the NHS. The financial criteria used for red lights in 1997–98 is an adjusted income and expenditure deficit of more than the lower of £1 million or 1 per cent. of turnover. Adjustments are made to the reported surplus or deficit to remove items which are not within the control of the trust management. These include clinical negligence provisions, early retirement provisions and compensating adjustments for losses on the disposal of assets. Where year to date performance indicates that trusts are likely to breach the criteria by the year end, regional offices light to the trust.

The assignment of red lights in 1997–98 is more mechanistic than in previous years. This has resulted in red lights being assigned because a trust has breached the financial criteria although the NHS Executive regional office may be satisfied that the trust has sound finances, a recovery plan is in place to deliver breakeven and it is delivering the expected benefits. This will generally result in more red lights reported in 1997–98 and as a comparison, an estimate of the number of red lights at Quarter 3 under the old criteria would be around 50 instead of the 74 under the new criteria.

Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority

Mr. Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects the sixth annual report of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority to be published; and if he will announce changes in the membership of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority. [14542]

Ms Jowell [pursuant to her reply, 4 November 1997, c. 183]: I am pleased to announce the following appointments of members, until 6 November 2000, made on behalf of the United Kingdom Health Ministers:

Professor David Barlow, Nuffield Professor of Obstetrics and Gynaecology and Head of Department at the University of Oxford; and Honorary Consultant in Obstetrics and Gynaecology at the Oxford Radcliffe Hospital, Oxford;

The Right Reverend Dr. Michael James Nazir-Ali, Bishop of Rochester; previously General Secretary of the Church Mission Society;

Mrs. Moira Elaine Coath, solicitor, non-executive Director of Dorset Healthcare National Health Service Trust; previously Chair of CHILD, a registered charity which provides advice, assistance and support to those suffering from, or with an interest in, infertility.

The new appointments have been made in accordance with guidance issued by the Commissioner for Public Appointments.

Cancer Treatment

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the level of staff in oncology departments over the next two years. [41541]

Mr. Milburn: Estimating the level of staff in oncology departments is for local health service employers to determine in the light of local needs and priorities.

Tooth Extractions

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 6 May 1998, Official Report, columns 421–22, if he will rank by health authority the number of tooth extractions per 1,000 persons aged under 18 years. [41588]

Mr. Milburn: A table ranking health authorities in England in ascending order on the basis of the number of teeth extracted in the General Dental Service in 1997 per 1,000 population for children aged under 18 has been placed in the Library. Also shown in the table are the number of teeth extracted.

Antibiotics

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he proposes to reduce the use of antibiotics within the health service. [41616]

Mr. Milburn: The Standing Medical Advisory Committee is reviewing the clinical use of antibiotics. It is due to report in July. We shall also be taking account of the recommendations of the recent report of the House of Lords Committee on Science and Technology into antibiotic resistance.

Health Service Pay

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff in the National Health Service (a) are and (b) are not employed on terms set by pay review bodies; and if he will make a statement on the annual pay rises for 1998–99 to be awarded to each group of workers. [41479]

Mr. Milburn: At September 1996, there was an estimated 435,000 (whole time equivalents) staff employed by the National Health Service hospital and community health services in England whose pay is subject to recommendations of the review bodies, and 329,000 (whole time equivalents) non-review body staff.

Hospital and community health service doctors and dentists received an increase of 2 per cent. from 1 April 1998 and will receive a further 2.2 per cent. from 1 December 1998. An additional 0.35 per cent., as recommended by the Doctors and Dentists Review Body last year, was also paid from 1 April 1998.

Nurses and the professions allied to medicine have been offered 2 per cent. from 1 April 1998 with a further 1.8 per cent. from 1 December 1998.

Non-review body staff are being offered a pay rise which matches the award to nurses and the professions allied to medicine.

Methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus Aureus

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) of 5 May 1998, Official Report, columns 352–53, if he will list the hospitals in rank order of their incidence of MRSA. [41512]

Mr. Milburn: No complete records are held on incidents of methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus in individual hospitals. Data on the occurrence of MRSA, compiled by the Public Health Laboratory Service are derived from isolates submitted voluntarily by hospitals in England and Wales for specialist laboratory tests.

The number of isolates of MRSA received from individual hospitals depends on local screening policies and on the case mix of patients. Isolates arise both from cases colonised by the organism and from those suffering with an infection due to the organism.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Biodiversity Convention

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the aims of the Government at the Conference of the Parties to the Biodiversity Convention meeting in Bratislava. [41455]

Mr. Meacher: The UK, along with other Member States of the European Union, has already taken steps to implement the CBD at a national and European level. We are pressing for this Conference to agree further action at all levels in a number of areas. These include decisions on: inland water ecosystems; marine and coastal ecosystems; agricultural biodiversity; forests; benefit sharing; and the Biosafety Protocol. We are also striving to improve the operation of the Convention so that it becomes a much more effective force in the world. I represented the UK at a ministerial Roundtable at the start of negotiations which made recommendations on private sector activities, sustainable tourism, and the integration of biodiversity into policy decisions.

Rail Safety

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each year since its creation the number of warning letters issued by HM Railway Inspectorate to Railtrack plc. [41564]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Health and Safety Executive's (HSE's) Railway Inspectorate advise that the information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each year since its creation prosecutions taken by HM Railway Inspectorate against Railtrack plc. [41563]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Health and Safety Executive's (HSE's) Railway Inspectorate has initiated two prosecutions against Railtrack plc since its creation. The first followed an electrical burns incident at Hatton in Warwickshire on 24 July 1995. Railtrack pleaded not guilty but were found guilty. The second prosecution followed a derailment at Bexley on 4 February 1997. This is expected to be heard on 26 May 1998.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place in the Library a copy of the letter issued by HM Railway Inspectorate to Eurotunnel as detailed in Paragraph 63 of the Annual report of the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority 1996–97. [41560]

Ms Glenda Jackson: It is not the practice of Her Majesty's Railway Inspectorate to make public the contents of private correspondence with duty holders.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place in the Library a copy of the report produced by the Rail Safety and Technology Working Group relating to signals passed at red in the Channel Tunnel. [41559]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I am not in a position to do so.

This report was a working document produced by the Rail Safety and Technology Working Group to inform the Safety Authority and contains information supplied by Eurotunnel. Disclosure would be a breach of Clause 33 of the Concession Agreement of 1986 concerning intellectual property and confidentiality.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the main contractors employed by Railtrack to undertake maintenance work, and the names of any contractors or sub-contractors removed from any approved lists since the creation of Railtrack. [41568]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This is a commercial matter for Railtrack.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each year since its creation the number of occurrences where unqualified staff or contractors have been found undertaking work on railway property on behalf of Railtrack plc. [41566]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Health and Safety Executive has no records of the numbers of such occurrences.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each of the last five years the number of derailments officially notified to HM Railway Inspectorate and the train operating companies involved. [41567]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, West (Mr. Thomas) on 7 May 1998, Official Report, columns 441–42.

Water Quality

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to introduce a comprehensive requirement for secondary treatment to be provided for significant sewage discharges to high natural dispersion areas; and what estimate he has made of the cost. [42033]

Angela Eagle: Under the Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive, secondary treatment of sewage discharges is the norm but coastal discharges may receive primary treatment if comprehensive studies establish that there would be no adverse environmental effect. We are, however, very aware of the concerns being expressed by those who are not convinced that anything less than secondary treatment will afford the necessary level of environmental protection and are giving further consideration to the Government's policy options. Decisions will have to be taken in the context of the current Periodic Review of water company price limits, which is the process of balancing the environmental obligations to be placed on water companies in England and Wales with the consequent effect on water bills.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place in the Library the programme of development work within the terms of paragraph 6 of the Annexe to the Commission Decision 94/730/EC of 4 November 1994 in respect of GMO release consent reference 95/R13/6. [42091]

Angela Eagle: The programme of development work for GMO release consent reference 95/R/13/6, to which the hon. Member refers, is entirely covered by information which was supplied in support of that particular application for a release consent, which was made under the first simplified procedure regulated by Commission Decision 94/370/EC. This information, as with all release applications in the UK, can be viewed either on the public register at Ashdown House, Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions or at the relevant Regional Office in the vicinity of the release. Details can also always be requested from the Biotechnology Unit, Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions.

The information available includes details of the risk assessment; the sites of the releases; the conditions of the releases; and, in fact, all the other information contained on the file which has not been deemed to be commercially confidential. Therefore, as this information is freely and widely available, I do not consider it appropriate to put the programme of development work for GMO release consent reference 95/R/13/6 into the Library.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what statutory provisions govern the conduct of tests and trials in respect of genetically modified seeds; and if he will make a statement. [41517]

Angela Eagle: All releases of GMOs into the environment are subject to Part VI of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and the Genetically Modified Organisms (Deliberate Release) Regulations 1992 as amended (1995 and 1997). Accordingly, genetically modified seeds can enter trials and tests only if they have been granted a consent by the Secretary of State. The conduct of each trial is subject to the limitations and conditions of the consent in addition to the general conditions set out in section 112 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 in respect of GMOs, and the general conditions relating to National List Trials for any seed.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will prevent planting of genetically engineered maize at Hood Barton, near Totnes in Devon, to avoid possible contamination of the neighbouring organic farm. [42089]

Mr. Meacher: Even if sown now, the genetically modified crop will not be in a condition to produce pollen until July at the earliest and there is therefore no need to prevent planting. If in the light of any new information it appears necessary to terminate the trial this can and will be done before the flowers produce pollen.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if companies releasing genetically modified organisms into the environment are required to pay for post-release monitoring, including the effects within the wider biological environment. [41481]

Angela Eagle: Companies holding a consent to release a genetically modified organism are required to pay the full costs of all monitoring of the release, annual subsistence charges to cover inspection by Health and Safety specialist inspectors, and any enforcement costs.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has (a) to improve public participation in and (b) to increase the transparency of the regulatory procedure for consenting to the release of GMOs. [42090]

Angela Eagle: The Government are currently considering several options to improve public participation in, and transparency of, the regulatory procedure for consenting to the release of GMOs. First, in connection with the forthcoming quinquennial review of the Advisory Committee on Releases into the Environment, the Government will be considering how the deliberations of this Committee might be made more transparent.

Secondly, the Department of Trade and Industry is preparing to undertake a substantial public consultation exercise on the wider—including ethical—issues raised by recent advances in the biosciences, one aspect of which is likely to be the regulatory procedures.

Thirdly, the Government are also looking at improving and increasing the information they place on the Internet in relation to the regulatory procedure for consenting to the release of GMOs, and in doing so, hope to allow greater access to this information. It should also be noted that the current regulatory procedure is already extremely open, with the public able to have access to most of the information supplied in release consent applications.

Speed Limits

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Hazel Grove (Mr. Stunell), of 11 February 1998, Official Report, column 228, when he expects to (a) publish and (b) implement secondary legislation in respect of 20 mph speed limits. [42111]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Consultation on the details of a new system for making 20 mph speed limits was launched on 12 May. Copies of the paper detailing and seeking comments on the proposal have been placed in the Library of the House. Subject to the views of consultees, we will bring forward secondary legislation as soon as possible.

Parish, Beverley

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to table an order giving effect to the decision to establish a parish for Beverley. [41909]

Mr. Raynsford: We intend to consult shortly on a draft of an Order establishing a parish for Beverley. Our intention is to make the Order, which is not subject to parliamentary procedure, to enable elections for the new parish council to be held in May 1999.

Packaging Waste

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will publish the report and recommendations of the review by the Advisory Committee on Packaging of the Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997. [41851]

Angela Eagle: The Advisory Committee on Packaging will complete its review of the Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997 at the end of May. Their report and recommendations to Ministers will be available, as before, to members of the public. A copy will be placed in the Library.

Contaminated Land

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if support will be given in the current financial year to English local authorities and to the Environment Agency to meet the capital costs of dealing with contaminated land. [42344]

Angela Eagle: The Department is continuing the Contaminated Land Supplementary Credit Approval programme this financial year with a budget of £15 million. It provides support for English local authorities for the capital costs they incur in dealing with contaminated land. The programme also supports, in the form of additional grant-in-aid, the Environment Agency where it is carrying out works to deal with water pollution caused by contaminated land.

Most authorities with on-going contractual commitments for projects funded in previous years have already received notification that support will be available. The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions has decided many of the bids it has received to date for new projects and has written today to the successful authorities and to the Environment Agency notifying them of the financial allocations which are being made.

The Department is discussing some bids with the authorities concerned and expects to make some further allocations. It will also decide new bids when they are received.

The table sets out the allocations which have been made so far this current financial year.

WALES

Cattle Passports

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cattle passports are issued each week by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [40658]

Mr. Win Griffiths: On average Welsh Office Agriculture Department Divisional Offices issue 1,890 cattle passports each week.

Public Appointments

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many and what proportion of his Department's appointees to non-departmental public bodies are aged (a) under 25, (b) 25 to 30 and (c) 31 to 35 years. [40733]

Mr. Ron Davies: Of the 625 people in appointments for which I have either sole or joint responsibility none are aged under 25; 3 (0.5%) are aged between 25 and 30; and 4 (0.6%) are aged between 31 and 35 as at 5 May 1998.

I am keen to encourage applications for public appointments from a wide range of candidates who are representative of the communities they serve, which includes young people. All appointments are made on merit. Candidates must demonstrate that they meet the criteria set out for each appointment, including the relevant skills and experience.

Coal Mining

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he plans to announce the results of the review into planning policy for opencast coal in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [41645]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Responses to the 1997 Consultation Paper are currently being analysed. I should soon be in a position to announce the way in which the review of opencast coal planning policy guidance in Wales will be taken forward.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will conduct a full review of Minerals Planning Guidance Note 3, on coal mining and colliery spoil disposal, in conjunction with the present review of energy policy in Wales. [41644]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The review of UK energy policy is underway. In parallel with that review, consideration will be given to the review of Minerals Planning Guidance Note 3.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received concerning his plans to restructure NHS Trusts in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [41648]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I have received 2,843 letters and 15,114 petition signatures in respect of plans to restructure NHS trusts in Wales. In March, I announced a proposed new shape of trusts on which formal consultation will take place over the summer. Consultation documents are currently being prepared for each Health Authority area in Wales. These will explain the proposed changes in detail and the benefits for patients which are expected to arise as a result of the proposed changes. The consultation period is planned to start in early June and will last for three months. All comments received as part of this process will be considered before the Secretary of State makes his final decision in the Autumn.

National Assembly

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to appoint the Standing Orders Commission in preparation for the opening of the Assembly for Wales. [41650]

Mr. Ron Davies: I expect to appoint the Standing Orders Commission in the Summer, subject to Royal Assent to the Government of Wales Bill.

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to publish a further draft of the Transfer of Functions (National Assembly for Wales) Order; and if he will make a statement. [42425]

Mr. Ron Davies: I have published a second draft of the order today and have placed copies in the Library of the House. I will be publishing a full draft in the autumn for consultation.

Public Health

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he proposes to take to improve public health in Wales. [42216]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Today I have launched the public health Green Paper, "Better Health—Better Wales" which takes account of Government aims to tackle the underlying causes of ill-health by identifying a wide range of social, economic and environmental factors which impact on health. The paper proposes a broad range of areas where new and concerted action could make a significant difference to health and well-being. It addresses the implications of issues specific to Wales, including the significant health inequalities, the reforms proposed in the Wales NHS White Paper and the preparations for the National Assembly for Wales.

"Better Health—Better Wales" has drawn on advice from both the Welsh Office and a wide range of key organisations in the public and voluntary sectors. The purpose of the forthcoming consultation period is to engage as many as possible in debate about the best ways to improve people's health in Wales. We hope that individuals, community leaders, employers and those responsible for services will participate.

The Welsh Office will publish an Action Plan in Autumn 1998 based on the framework outlined in this document and informed by responses to the consultation.

PRIME MINISTER

Nuclear Material (Reprocessing)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the international agreements which prohibited the Government from giving advance notice to the House of the recent transport of enriched uranium to Dounreay from Georgia; and what advice was taken on the interpretation of the relevant agreements. [40644]

The Prime Minister: The Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material requires states who are parties to take measures to protect the confidentiality of information relating to the international transportation of nuclear material of the type imported from Georgia. The United Kingdom also follows the internationally agreed guidance in the document "The Physical Protection of Nuclear Material" published by the International Atomic Energy Agency. This recommends that advance knowledge of transport information should be limited to the minimum number of persons necessary. Advice on these international requirements and recommendations is routinely sought from the Director of Civil Nuclear Security who is the designated central authority for the UK on the physical protection of nuclear material, under the Convention. Furthermore, in this particular case, as I told the House on 22 April 1998, Official Report, column 818, it would have been most unwise to draw attention to the existence of this material before it could be secured and safely removed from Georgia.

Strategic Communications Unit

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister what is the purpose of the Strategic Communications Unit; if he will list the unit's employees; if he will estimate the annual cost of the unit; and if he will make a statement. [41115]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 11 May 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Erdington (Mr. Corbett) on 14 January 1998, Official Report, columns 233–34, and to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 20 January 1998, Official Report, column 484. In addition, the Unit has been responsible for the launch of the No.10 website.

Security Services (Software)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what steps are being taken to ensure that software used by the security services obtained from outside the United Kingdom does not contain trapdoors, allowing unauthorised access to sensitive information. [41193]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 8 May 1998]: In common with other Government Departments, the intelligence and security services, when procuring software to process sensitive information, evaluate it against criteria which include its ability to deny unauthorised access.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Judicial Appointments

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he intends to publish his annual report on judicial appointments. [41226]

Mr. Hoon: As indicated by the Lord Chancellor in his statement of 9 October 1997, the first Annual Report to Parliament on the operation of the judicial appointments system will cover the period April 1998 to March 1999. It will contain statistics and information about judicial appointments made during that period and will be published in the summer of 1999.

Magistrates

Helen Jones: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to review the level of compensation for loss of earnings provided to magistrates. [41862]

Mr. Hoon: The payment of financial loss allowances to magistrates is governed by the provisions of Section 10 of the Justices of the Peace Act 1997 and the Justices' Allowances Regulations 1976. The rates are reviewed annually and new rates will be introduced in September 1998. Responsibility for decisions on individual claims rests with the local paying authorities.

Helen Jones: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will conduct an assessment of the ways in which magistrates can be assisted with child care costs; and if he will make a statement. [41863]

Mr. Hoon: Under Section 10(1)(b) of the Justices of the Peace Act 1997, magistrates are entitled to receive payments by way of Financial Loss Allowance for loss of earnings and any other expenditure incurred as a result of performing the duties of a Justice of the Peace. This can include claims for the cost of child care. Allowance is subject to the specified maximum limit.

Helen Jones: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he is taking to ensure that employers give support to employees who wish to become magistrates. [41864]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor's Department is working with the Magistrates Association on a project directed at encouraging employers to release staff to serve as magistrates. In addition, the Lord Chancellor has commissioned the Central Office of Information to advise him on ways in which he may secure the support of employers in releasing staff to serve as magistrates.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Portcullis House

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee how the building of Portcullis House has been funded; to which Vote on Account the expenditure is being charged; what was the original estimated cost of this building; and what is the estimated final outcome cost. [41080]

Sir Sydney Chapman [holding answer 11 May 1998]: The House of Commons Commission approved the final sketch design estimate in 1993 at the prices then prevailing with an allowance forecasting the possible rate of inflation in construction costs until the work is completed. Since 1993 changes to the brief and the cost of the delayed handover of the site by London Underground Ltd. have accounted for the difference between the 1993 forecast of £219m and the current figure of £250m. The work is funded from Class 18A Vote 2, House of Commons Works Services.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Security Facilities Executive

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he has made a decision on the future of the Security Facilities Executive. [41926]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I have decided that SAFE is no longer a financially viable organisation, and that it should cease to be an executive agency from 1 July. From that date, its services will be provided from within the Cabinet Office (Office of Public Service), with a view, thereafter, to transferring SAFE's essential functions and associated staff to the other Government Departments as soon as it is practicable to do so. I also propose that over the next three years its remaining services should be run down. This process will be completed no later than 31 March 2001.

This decision is, I believe, the one which best meets my three criteria of:

maintaining the security requirements of customers; safeguarding the interests of staff; and ensuring that the principle of value for money is maintained.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

British Library

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will publish the memoranda negotiated by the then Secretary of State of the Department of National Heritage relating to the purchase of the freehold property near Chancery Lane formerly known as the Great Seal Patent Office and Library by the British Library. [40144]

Mr. Fisher: The Minute which transferred the freehold of 25 Southampton Buildings, London WC2, from the Department of National Heritage to the British Library was laid before the House by the then Secretary of State on 4 July 1996. It is available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the costs of the development of the British Library's INSIDE CD-ROM products have been since 1984; and how much sales revenue has been generated from these products. [40112]

Mr. Fisher: A series of four inside current awareness CD-ROMs have been published since 1993. The total development costs and revenues relating to them are:

Total development costs: £127,000

Total revenue: £684,125.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the contracts with publishers which the British Library has entered into (i) by value and (ii) by publisher in the last 10 years. [40135]

Mr. Fisher: I have placed in the Library of the House a list of such contracts which the British Library has entered into over the last ten years and their respective values.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the costs of the British Library's digital library programme are for the current year; what they are estimated to be in future years; and how many British Library staff are presently engaged in the programme. [40131]

Mr. Fisher: The cost of the British Library's digital library programme for the current year is planned at £639,000. The costs for future years are projected to decline as follows:

2001–2002: £388,000.

There are eight staff dedicated to the digital library programme.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Visitor Visas

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received on visitors' visa applications and the introduction of an appeal procedure. [41594]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have received no recent representations on visitors' visa applications and the introduction of an appeal procedure. We are committed to introducing a streamlined right of appeal for visitors refused a visa.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his timetable is for the introduction of an appeal procedure in relation to visitors' visa applications; and if he will make a statement. [41595]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Our manifesto commits us to introducing a streamlined right of appeal for visitors refused a visa. We are considering the options for achieving this and we will make an announcement as soon as possible.

Firearms

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many handguns are held as personal protection weapons in each region of the United Kingdom. [41797]

Mr. Michael: In England, Scotland and Wales there are no handguns held as personal protection weapons. Handguns are prohibited under the terms of section 5 of the Firearms Act 1968 (as amended) and as such may be held only with the express authority of the Secretary of State. It is not the policy to issue that authority for firearms for personal protection.

In Northern Ireland, handguns for personal protection may be held on certificates issued by the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary. Currently, there are some 9,800 handguns so held. Certificates are granted only to those people the chief officer believes to be under serious threat of terrorist attack and are not granted for the protection of money or property. As the threat of terrorist violence recedes, the number of firearms held for this purpose is expected to decline.

Drugs

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the current level of repeat offending for drug offences involving (a) possession of cannabis, (b) dealing in cannabis, (c) possession of ecstasy, (d) dealing in ecstasy, (e) possession of heroin and (f) dealing in heroin. [41618]

Mr. George Howarth: The most recently available relevant information relates to reconvictions in samples of prisoners discharged from prison in 1994 and of offenders commencing community penalties in 1994.

The source of this information on reconvictions is the Home Office Offenders Index. This does not contain information on cautioning of offenders. It should be borne in mind that this information relates to reconviction rather than reoffending and is restricted to offenders who have been sentenced to custody or a community penalty.

Original offence[1,2]	Total sampled	Percentage reconvicted for any offence[3]	Percentage reconvicted for any drugs offence
Numbers and two year reconviction rates for drug offences for prisoners discharged in 1994
Dealing in cannabis	678	34	18
Dealing in ecstacy (MDMA)	120	28	13
Possession of heroin	172	64	32
Dealing in heroin	125	35	18
All drugs offences	2,722	37	17
Numbers and two year reconviction rates for drug offences for offenders commencing community penalties[4] in 1994
Other drugs offence	511	49	27
Dealing in cannabis	190	41	25
Possession of heroin	250	65	33
All drugs offences	1,000	51	28

[1] Figures are given only for categories of offence where there were at least 50 offenders in either sample whose original offence was possession of cannabis. Possession with intent to supply has been included in dealing offences

[2] The original offence is based on the most recent offence recorded prior to discharge from prison. The data for the detailed categories of drugs offence relate to those sentenced from 1 January 1993, the date on which the categories presented here were first used

[3] Reconviction for a standard list offence. This includes all indictable and some of the more serious summary offences

[4] This sample was drawn from offenders commencing probation, community service and combination orders

Licensing Hours

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the advantages of harmonising licensing hours across continental Europe. [42038]

Mr. George Howarth: I have not considered such a proposition. On 5 May, I announced a review of liquor licensing law for England and Wales. This will take appropriate account of experience elsewhere in Europe.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 6 April 1998, Official Report, column 26, what were the exceptional and specific justifications established for the use of wild-caught baboons in regulated procedures since 1996. [42113]

Mr. George Howarth: The wild-caught baboons are used in important heart xenotransplantation research. Baboons are used because of their physiological similarity to humans and because primates of a particular size (over 6kg) are essential. Extensive efforts have been made, by the research team, to find suitable sources of captive-bred baboons, but captive-bred animals are not available in sufficient quantities.

All applications to use wild-caught primates are referred to the Animal Procedures Committee. In this case, the Committee advised in 1994 that there was justification for allowing their use. The Committee has closely monitored and reviewed the work involving these baboons since the licence was granted.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he discharged the transgenic pigs exported by their owners Imtran for use in experimentation in Holland from the protection of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement; [42076]

(2) how many animals intended for use in experiments were exported, and to which countries, for the latest year for which figures are available; [42112]

(3) what controls his Department exercises in the regulation of the export of animals for intended use in experiments. [42075]

Mr. George Howarth: The export and transportation of animals is primarily a matter for the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. The Home Office does not keep central records of the number of animals exported, nor the purpose for which they were exported.

Animals which have been used in scientific procedures must be discharged from the controls of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 before they can be exported. We have authorised the discharge of transgenic pigs from the controls of the Act so that they might be exported to Holland. This authorisation was contingent upon a number of conditions, aimed at ensuring animal welfare, being met. These required, inter alia, that a veterinary certificate of fitness to travel be obtained and that only those animals which are unlikely to suffer adverse effects be exported. Any unexpected adverse effects experienced by the animals must also be reported to the Home Office.

WPC Fletcher

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his oral answer of 11 May 1998, Official Report, column 3, what response he has received from the Foreign Secretary in response to his letter relating to the latest position on the police investigation into the death of WPC Fletcher. [42086]

Mr. Straw: I minuted my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary on 20 April. The purpose of my minute was to inform him of the latest position on the police inquiries and to bring to his attention those concerns raised by my hon. Friend on 30 March 1998, Official Report, column 887, which relate to the Foreign Secretary's responsibilities. As such, my minute did not require a reply.

Police Surgeons

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 24 February 1998, Official Report, column 181, if he will make a statement on his discussions with ACPO and the BMA on the problem of police surgeons refusing to carry out intimate body searches on those suspected of carrying drugs. [41884]

Mr. Michael: On 17 April representatives from the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) Drugs Committee, the British Medical Association, the Association of Police Surgeons and the Medical Defence Union met Home Office officials to discuss the difficulties encountered by some police forces in getting doctors to carry out intimate body searches for concealed drugs. It emerged that information and understanding on all sides needs to be improved: the information from police forces about the number of times they would like an intimate search to be carried out but encounter problems is unreliable; but also the understanding of many police surgeons about the full legal and ethical issues involved is unclear. A number of helpful action points aimed at taking matters forward were agreed at the meeting. These include ACPO asking police forces to review their statistics of intimate searches to provide fuller information and the medical bodies reviewing their current guidance and reconsidering the ethical issues. A further meeting to take stock of progress is planned for the autumn.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioner households received double the proper payment under the Pensioner Fuel Bills Special Payment Scheme. [39853]

Mr. Denham: Winter Fuel payments are one of a number of initiatives the Government have taken to help vulnerable people, especially the elderly, keep warm in the winter. A total of £400 million has been committed for two years (97/98 and 98/99), to help pensioners with fuel bills to pay. This is the first time any Government have provided additional help with heating costs to all pensioners living in the United Kingdom who receive a Retirement Pension or one of a number of other qualifying benefits.

The making of this year's payments has been an enormous and unprecedented exercise. In order to establish all eligible pensioners, correctly identify pensioner households, and determine the amount each should receive, it was necessary to correlate data in around 15 million computer records, involving 15 qualifying benefits, across nine computer systems. Overall, almost ten million pensioners, in over seven million households, have received a payment.

The administration of Winter Fuel Payments is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Desmond Swayne, dated 13 May 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent parliamentary question asking how many pensioner households received double the proper payment under the Winter Fuel Payment Scheme.

The making of Winter Fuel Payments to almost ten million eligible pensioners, in over seven million households, before the end of March 1998 has been a challenging task for the Benefits Agency (BA). This was achieved whilst maintaining normal benefit business.

Around one and a half million of the poorest pensioners, those receiving Income Support (IS) or income-based Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA(IB)), received their payment of £50 during January. Almost eight and a half million other eligible pensioners, for example those in receipt of state Retirement Pension, were issued with a payment of £20 or £10. The issue of these payments was completed by 24 March 1998.

So far we are aware of 645 eligible pensioners who received two £50 payments. This includes 211 who erroneously received two payments due to being in receipt of both Income Support and income-based Jobseeker's Allowance for at least one day in the qualifying week. In accordance with the legislation only one payment should have been made. A further 434 pensioners cashed both an invalid and a replacement girocheque. Due to a computer operator error, 40,801 invalid girocheques were sent out with an incorrect date of issue. The error was quickly identified and all the invalid payments were replaced within 72 hours. The letter which accompanied the replacement apologised for the error and advised the recipient to destroy the invalid girocheque or if they had managed to encash it, to return the replacement to the nearest Benefits Agency office. It appears that in a small number of instances both the invalid and replacement girocheque were cashed. Action will be taken to write to each of those eligible pensioners who received £100 instead of £50 informing of the position and inviting repayment. In the case of the 434 invalid girocheques cashed by the Post Office, where repayment is not offered by any of the eligible pensioners, in accordance with agreed contractual obligations and responsibilities, any balance will be sought from the Post Office.

No information is presently available on the other eligible pensioners who received either a £10 or £20 payment. To determine whether £20 or £10 was due it has been necessary to establish whether the pensioner lived alone. Where we identified they were the only eligible pensioner in a household they received £20; where they lived with other eligible pensioners each received £10.

Legislation requires that the decision whether £10 or £20 is due is based on information held within official Departmental records. All the £20 and £10 payments issued have therefore been based on information which originated from pensioners and is held within these official records.

We are aware from subsequent enquiries from some pensioners that the official records available and used by my Agency did not always accurately reflect the correct, current address details. For example, two eligible pensioners living at the same address have differing address details held in official records and despite expecting to receive £10 each, have received £20 each. Similarly, there will be pensioners who receive £10 but believe £20 is due. This will be because official records show the pensioner living at the same address as at least one other eligible pensioner, but they in fact are the only eligible pensioner in the household. In these circumstances they can apply to the BA for a review of the decision to pay £10.

However, even though we have subsequently updated the address details the payments themselves remain correct in accordance with the legislation. They have been made using official records which were in place at the time eligibility was determined. The legislation is framed in such a way that providing the payments made are supported by records held then there has not been an incorrect payment.

We are therefore not aware of any £10 or £20 payments that have been made in error.

Thank you for the opportunity to explain the position.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Commonwealth Development Programmes

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has held about the proportion of (a) the Commonwealth Fund for technical co-operation and (b) other Commonwealth activity financed by the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement. [41807]

Clare Short: The Government are a strong supporter of the Commonwealth, contributing an annual total of some £18 million from the aid programme to a wide range of Commonwealth development programmes, including the Commonwealth Fund for Technical Co-operation. We are the largest contributor to these programmes traditionally providing 30 per cent. of all contributions. In addition, we pledged an extra £4 million at the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting for Commonwealth Secretariat programmes.

Crown Agents Foundation

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development for what social and developmental purposes the Crown Agents Foundation will use profits derived from the Crown Agents; and under what guidelines. [41747]

Clare Short: Ownership of the Crown Agents transferred from Her Majesty's Government to an independent Foundation in March 1997. The right hon. Gentleman may wish to pursue this matter with the Foundation.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when Mr. Peter Pursglove was employed by the Crown Agents; and on what terms he was seconded to the Government of Trinidad and Tobago. [41348]

Clare Short: Ownership of the Crown Agents transferred from Her Majesty's Government to an independent Foundation in March 1997. My hon. Friend may wish to pursue this matter with the Foundation.

Departmental Expenditure

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of her Department's expenditure through non-governmental organisations in 1997–98 was applied to (a) the Joint Funding Scheme, (b) emergency relief, (c) volunteers and (d) other areas; and what are the comparable planned figures for 1998–99. [41365]

Clare Short: Details of bilateral development assistance are published each year in the British Aid Statistics. The next issue, which will include final expenditure figures for 1997–98, is due for publication in December 1998.

Information on planned spending through UK non-governmental organisations for 1998–99 is not held centrally in the format requested. I regret that a full answer to the question could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much of the bilateral development assistance programme was channelled through United Kingdom non-governmental organisations for development activities in 1997–98; and what is the planned figure for 1998–99. [41366]

Clare Short: The information requested for 1997–98 will not be available until later this year. Details of bilateral development assistance are published each year in the British Aid Statistics. The next issue, which will include final expenditure figures for 1997–98, is due for publication in December 1998.

Information on planned spending through UK non-governmental organisations for development activities for 1998–99 is not held centrally in the format requested. I regret that a full answer to the question could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much her Department spent under the Joint Funding Scheme in 1997–98; on how many projects; and what are the planned figures for 1998–99. [41368]

Clare Short: My Department spent £36,139,087 on development projects through the Joint Funding Scheme in 1997–98. This involved some 1,700 projects managed by 128 UK NGOs. Our planned figure for 1998–99 is £36,156,000. It is expected that the number of projects and agencies will be equivalent to last year.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much her Department spent on the Volunteer Programme in 1997–98; how many volunteers were sent; to how many countries; and what are the planned figures for 1998–99. [41367]

Clare Short: In 1997–98 my Department provided £23,932,580 to the four main volunteer sending agencies Voluntary Service Overseas (VSO), International Co-operation for Development (ICD), United Nations Association for International Service (UNAIS) and Skillshare Africa. This helped to fund the work of approximately 2,080 volunteers in around 60 countries.

Our planned figure for 1998–99 is £25,533,124. It is expected that the number of volunteers will be maintained at the current level in the same number of countries.

Western Sahara

Ms Kingham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans her Department has over the next year to provide (i) aid and (ii) assistance for de-mining projects, to the people of Western Sahara with particular reference to Saharawi refugees. [39981]

Clare Short: The majority of UK assistance to the Sarahawi is provided via the European Community Humanitarian Office (ECHO) and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR). A proposal from ECHO for a 7.2 mecu (£4.8m) programme of assistance to the Saharawi refugees in Southern Algeria for 1998 has recently been approved—the UK share of this will be approximately £670,000. Under this programme, funding will be provided to NGOs, UN agencies and the Red Cross for food aid, medical and sanitary assistance and improving drinking water supply. For UNHCR, the UK recently announced a £10m package of support for 1998, of which £7m will go to general programmes which include assistance to Saharawi refugees.

We are also supporting some NGO programmes directly—my Department is providing £50,000 to War on Want for the improvement of food storage facilities for the refugees, and £30,000 to Action Water to improve water supply and distribution in the refugee camps.

We understand from the UNHCR that there are problems with mines in the vicinity of the refugee camps. Mines awareness training is carried out by the UNHCR. De-mining is the responsibility of the UN Department of Peace Keeping Operations but no demining operations have been carried out to date. DFID has not been approached to provide any funds for demining but we are ready to look sympathetically at any such requests.

Bosnia

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations she has received on the diverting of humanitarian aid to Bosnia to Swiss bank accounts. [41459]

Clare Short: I have not received any representations about the diverting of humanitarian aid to Bosnia to Swiss bank accounts. The Government's humanitarian aid to Bosnia is subject to strict financial controls.

International Monetary Fund

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations she has made to the International Monetary Fund in connection with the recent external review of the external structural adjustment facility; and if she will make a statement. [41745]

Clare Short: The International Monetary Fund (IMF) has an important role to play in helping to eradicate poverty in developing countries, and I have taken a close personal interest in the external evaluation of the IMF's Enhanced Structural Adjustment Facility (ESAF). I have discussed the report with the Managing Director of the IMF, and other senior Staff on a number of occasions, and pressed them to ensure that key recommendations are adopted. The recommendations include the development of a closer working relationship with the World Bank in the design of ESAF programmes, encouragement of stronger local ownership of such programmes through national consensus building and by offering different policy options, and better monitoring of the impact of ESAF programmes on the poor. We have already taken a leading role in promoting greater collaboration between the World Bank and the IMF. The IMF will shortly be setting out how it plans to operationalise these recommendations.

South Africa

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many joint ventures the British Investment in South Africa scheme helped and at what cost to her Department during 1997–98. [41744]

Clare Short: The British Investment in South Africa Promotion Scheme helps to promote investment in South Africa by making available Pre-Investment Feasibility Study (PIFS) grants to small and medium sized British and South African companies. Training grants are also available but have not yet been used. In 1997–98 the scheme disbursed grants worth £296,761 to seven applicants, with a projected investment value of more than £13 million. A further £473,933 was committed to 13 new applicants during the year but this has not yet been spent. The cost of administering the scheme during the year was £74,951. Since the start of the scheme, a total of 29 grants have been awarded and a further five are at an advanced stage of consideration.

Indonesia

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps her Department is taking to provide for the basic needs of the urban poor affected by the economic crisis in Indonesia. [41743]

Clare Short: The most immediate need in limiting the impact of the crisis on the poor is to restore confidence in the Indonesian economy. To help achieve this the Government of Indonesia must implement the programme now agreed with the IMF. In addition, the UK is contributing £5 million to the Asia Europe Meeting (ASEM) Trust Fund which will help affected Asian Governments, including Indonesia, to design interventions to combat the social effects of the crisis as well as to reform their financial sectors. We are exploring urgently other possible opportunities for effective help to those poor in Indonesia suffering the effects of the crisis.

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps her Department will take to assist in ensuring an adequate food supply in Indonesia following the shortfall in this year's rice crop. [41742]

Clare Short: Our normal practice is to provide food aid through international agencies, and we stand ready to provide help if needed. We have received a food situation report from the World Food Programme and the Food and Agriculture Organisation and are awaiting a further report from the European Commission which is due shortly. It is possible that the real problem is one of logistics and markets, rather than absolute food shortage. Food aid can damage local production; it is therefore important that we make a proper assessment. Once we have full details we shall take a decision on whether and how best the UK can assist.

African Development Bank

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations she has made in connection with a possible increase in the capital of the African Development Bank; and if she will make a statement. [41749]

Clare Short: Negotiations on a fifth general capital increase for the African Development Bank have been in progress since February 1997 and were virtually concluded at a meeting on 23–24 March in Abidjan. The increase is not required for lending purposes but to strengthen the Bank's financial base. For non-regional shareholders, such as the UK, the capital increase will provide greater influence in the Bank through an increase in the non-regional shareholding from 33 1/3 per cent. to 40 per cent., and changes to the voting rules. Governors will be invited to adopt a draft Resolution on the capital increase at the Bank's Annual Meeting on 27–29 May. The capital increase will then come into effect in 1999.

Mongolia

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance her Department is currently providing to Mongolia. [41356]

Clare Short: We provide bilateral assistance to Mongolia under the Department for International Development (DFID) Small Grants Scheme, administered by the British Embassy in Ulaanbaatar. Support is currently going to a range of small-scale, poverty-related initiatives in education, social welfare and income generation. Expenditure in the current year is likely to be of the order of £250,000. Assistance is also provided through multilateral channels, including the European Union, the World Bank and the Asian Development Bank.

Sombrero Island

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what consultations her Department has held or plans to hold with ICF Kaiser on the scope of their environmental assessment of Sombrero Island in the Caribbean; and if she will make a statement on the scope and content of the assessment. [41624]

Mr. Battle: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him today.

TREASURY

Savings Accounts

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the change in the proposals for PEPs, TESSAs and ISAs in the Budget on the Government's target of attracting six million new savers. [36801]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson [holding answer 30 March 1998]: At present half the adult population has less than £200 saved. The new account will provide savers with an attractive tax-free savings opportunity which will be more widely available, will have no minimum investment requirement and will not lock up their money. Savers will have an unprecedented guarantee of stability as the scheme will run for at least ten years. We anticipate that these features will make the new account very attractive to those who are new to tax-free saving, as well as providing ample reason for existing savers to continue and increase their savings.

Petroleum Products (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidance he has given to district councils, Department of Environment Planning and Road Services and Customs and Excise regarding control of diesel-only supply outlets reselling illegally imported diesel fuel from the Irish Republic. [41378]

Dawn Primarolo: It would not be appropriate for the Chancellor of the Exchequer to issue guidance to district councils or the Department of Environment. However the Government, Customs and Excise and the other authorities in Northern Ireland are aware of the problem of smuggling of duty paid fuel across the border into Northern Ireland for onward sale.

Customs are deploying resources and actively mounting investigations against those involved to counter the threat posed to the revenue and to the Northern Ireland business community. Customs are taking the lead on this issue but are acting in conjunction with other authorities, including the Royal Ulster Constabulary, to make seizures of oil tankers and vehicles carrying oil tanks filled with illegally imported fuel for resale. Wherever possible, cases are progressed with a view to criminal prosecution of the individuals concerned.

Mr. Moss: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from the Petrol Retailers Association about the illegal importation of petroleum products into Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [41549]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chancellor has received representation from the Petrol Retailers Association via Northern Ireland MPs. The letters have received replies explaining the measures which are being taken to counter the threat posed by this illegal trade.

There is evidence of smuggling of duty paid fuel across the border into Northern Ireland for onward sale. The Government recognise that this is a serious problem which disadvantages legitimate traders. Customs are aware of the problem and are active in mounting investigations against those involved.

Mr. Moss: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with HM Customs and Excise about the illegal importation of petroleum products into Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [41554]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government and Customs are aware of the problem of smuggling of duty paid fuel into Northern Ireland for onward sale and recognise that it is a serious problem which disadvantages legitimate traders. Customs are deploying resources and actively mounting investigations against those involved to counter the threat posed to the revenue and to the Northern Ireland business community.

Mr. Moss: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated loss of revenue through the illegal importation of petroleum products into Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [41535]

Dawn Primarolo: There are no estimates available of this illegal activity.

There is a problem with illegal importation of duty paid fuel across the border into Northern Ireland for resale. Both the Government and Customs are aware of this situation and recognise that it seriously disadvantages legitimate traders. Customs are deploying resources and actively mounting investigations against those involved to counter the threat posed to the revenue and to the Northern Ireland business community.

Mr. Moss: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the pump price per litre of (a) unleaded petrol and (b) derv in (i) Northern Ireland and (ii) the Republic of Ireland, indicating the percentage of duty and VAT in the total cost of each. [41534]

Dawn Primarolo: The pump prices of unleaded petrol and diesel in Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland are as follows:

Pence per litre

	Northern Ireland	Republic of Ireland
Unleaded petrol	66.4	55.73
Diesel	66.4	54.87

Duty (and VAT) represent the following percentages of these prices.

Percentage

	Northern Ireland		Republic of Ireland
	Duty	VAT	Duty	VAT
Unleaded petrol	66.25	(14.88)	43.57	(17.35)
Diesel	67.76	(14.88)	38.55	(17.35)

Leagues of Hospital Friends (VAT)

Mr. Willis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will exempt from VAT charitable gifts from the National Association of Leagues of Hospital Friends to NHS hospitals; and if he will make a statement. [41362]

Dawn Primarolo: If a League of Hospital Friends is not VAT registered, any gift it makes to a NHS Trust will be VAT free. Where a VAT registered organisation makes a gift of an asset that has not been used in its business, then the gift is outside the scope of VAT. A gift made for business purposes, where the cost to the donor was not more than £15, is also outside the scope of VAT, but not gifts which form a part of a 'series or succession' of gifts from time to time.

It is also possible for Leagues of Hospital Friends to buy specific categories of goods VAT free for donation to NHS Trusts when using funds, provided either by a charity or from voluntary contributions. The list of goods covered by this relief includes ambulances and medical, scientific, computer, video, sterilising, laboratory and refrigeration equipment used for medical research, training, diagnosis or treatment.

Economic and Finance Ministers Council

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Council meetings of the Economic and Finance Ministers of the European Union held on 1 and 3 May. [41657]

Mr. Gordon Brown: I chaired the Economic and Finance Council—ECOFIN—of the European Union in Brussels on 1 May, and again on 3 May. The Council also met (in the composition of Heads of State or Government) on Saturday 2 May. The Prime Minister has already reported on this to the House in his statement of 5 May 1998, Official Report, columns 563–65. The Economic Secretary represented the UK.

On 1 May, the Council began by considering the Commission's Recommendations on the abrogation of excessive deficits. The Council concurred with the Commission's Recommendations, and agreed unanimously to decisions abrogating the deficits of Austria, Belgium, France, Germany, Italy, Spain, Sweden, Portugal and the UK. These decisions were then formally notified to the relevant delegations, to allow the Council to move to its next business.

As laid down in Article 109j(2), the Council then discussed its Recommendations on those countries fulfilling the necessary conditions for the adoption of the single currency. We agreed without dissent that Austria, Belgium, Finland, France, Germany, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Spain and Portugal met those conditions. We agreed to attach to our Recommendation a declaration on the importance of fiscal consolidation and structural adjustment.

On 3 May, we approved two important A-points (on the technical specifications of euro coin, and the legal framework for the euro). Finance Ministers from the participating Member States then went on to sign formal receipts of the notification of the Heads' decision on those countries which fulfilled the necessary conditions for the adoption of the single currency.

ECOFIN then formally adopted its recommendation on initial appointment of the members of the ECB Executive Board, which will go back to Heads for formal approval, after consultation with the European Parliament and European Monetary Institute.

The Council also appointed the three of the six members of the committee which proposes the terms and conditions of employment of the ECB Executive Board that it falls to them to nominate. My colleagues Mr. Ciampi, Mr. Juncker, and Mr. Sousa Franco were agreed by the Council.

The Council adopted conclusions on the Commission's Recommendations on the practical aspects of the euro, welcoming the Commission's initiative, but noting their non-binding nature.

We adopted conclusions welcoming the progress the Greek Government have made towards the convergence required for participation in stage 3 of EMU, and their objective of joining in 2001, while noting that the requirements of the Treaty would have to be met in full.

Amusement Machine Licence Duty

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much, in each year since 1990, has been raised by the amusement machine licence duty on (a) club machines and (b) amusement with prize machines; and how much he estimates will be raised in each category after the announced increases are implemented. [41506]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 11 May 1998]: The government do not have a breakdown of actual receipts from particular types of machine. The Government have full official data only on total receipts from machine licence duty. Amusement Machine licence duty was introduced in 1995. Prior to that, the figures relate to Gaming Machine Licence Duty.

Year	Receipts
1990	98,491
1991	97,187
1992	93,844
1993	95,347
1994	104,372
1995	113,014
1996	129,719

The announced increases in duty rates are expected to yield an additional £15 million in 1998–99 and £20 million per annum thereafter.

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in each year since 1990, how many (a) club machines and (b) amusement with prize machines were subject to amusement machine licence duty; and what estimate he has made of the impact of his proposed tax increases on the number of machines which will be operated in future years. [41505]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 11 May 1998]: The Government do not hold official data on the number of machines of a particular type subject to amusement machine licence duty. Although any tax increase is likely to have some impact on demand, our calculations suggest that there is not likely to be a significant effect on the number of machines made available for play. This is particularly so as those machines which the industry claim to be most price sensitive—those in the lower duty band—have not been subjected to any increase.

Wildlife Trade

Mr. Randall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about funding to continue HM Customs and Excise work to enforce legislation controlling wildlife trade; and what plans he has to expand this area of work. [41623]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Customs and Excise do not fund enforcement activity specifically in this area. Frontline anti-smugglers, investigation and intelligence staff tackle a wide range of prohibited and restricted goods, both at import and export, including species covered by the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of wild fauna and flora (CITES). The detection of commercial smuggling of endangered species, and goods derived from them, is a priority for Customs, and this will continue to be so.

There are no plans to expand Customs activity in this area of work.

Financial Services Authority

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what requirements in respect of the protection of individual consumers will be placed on the Financial Services Authority. [41390]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 12 May 1998]: The Government intend that the Financial Services Authority's statutory objectives will include the protection of consumers by ensuring that firms are competent and financially sound and that they give customers confidence in their integrity, while recognising consumers' own responsibility for their financial decisions. Draft statutory objectives will form part of the draft legislation which the Government plan to publish for consultation in the Summer.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from the National Consumer Council regarding the establishment of the Financial Services Authority. [41391]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 12 May 1998]: The Government have received a number of representations from the National Consumer Council covering a number of different matters.

Harmful Tax Competition

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the meeting of the EU Committee on Harmful Tax Competition held on 8 May. [42052]

Dawn Primarolo: The first meeting of the EC Code of Conduct Group on 8 May covered the chairmanship of the Group and initial plans for a work programme to review Member States' business tax measures which may be harmful within the meaning of the Code.

I am pleased to report that I received unanimous support from the members of the Group and was consequently appointed Chair for an initial two-year period. This is yet another example of the Government's determination to play a central role in Europe.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the impact on Exchequer revenue of the one per cent. reduction in the main rate of corporation tax after taking into account the introduction of quarterly corporation tax payments. [41847]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated costs of 1 per cent. cut in the main rate of corporation tax from 1 April 1999 after taking account of quarterly payments are:

Year	£ million
1998–99	negligible
2000–01	900

In table C1 of the 1998–99 "Financial Statement and Budget Report", the costs of the rate change are estimated before allowing for the introduction of quarterly instalments. The overall revenue effects of the changes to corporation tax remain the same.

Savings (Taxation)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 8 April 1998, Official Report, columns 241–42, on the taxation of savings, if he will break down the total yield from taxes on savings for the last three years into the yield from (a) bank and building society interest and (b) dividends. [41371]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 13 May 1998]: Estimates for the last three years are given in the table. Taxpayers over retirement age include women aged 60 and over and men aged 65 and over.

Full year yield from taxing savings income

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99
All taxpayers
Bank and building society interest	2.3	2.5	3.0
Dividends	3.2	3.8	3.6

NORTHERN IRELAND

Irish Language

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on her plans for an increase in the number of Irish language schools. [40663]

Mr. Worthington: Any increase in the number of Irish Language Schools will be determined by parental choice. The Government will continue to support proposals for new Irish language schools provided they are viable, provide effective education and are cost effective.

Training Schools

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in what circumstances her Department may place a child in a training school other than the one recommended by the court; in how many cases this power has been used in the past five years; and for what reason. [41075]

Mr. Ingram: The courts do not recommend the Training School in which a child is to be placed.

When a Training School Order is made under section 74 of the Children and Young Persons Act (Northern Ireland) 1968, the School in which he is to be detained is determined by the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the 1973 classification for the reception of non-Roman Catholic boys changed; and for what reason. [41076]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave him on 27 February 1998, Official Report, column 414.

However, I would add that Lisnevin was "approved" as a non-denominational training school on 24 September 1973 and there has been no change to its status since then.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the statutory basis for the secure custody provisions in Lisnevin, and what criteria her Department uses in directing the courts to (a) use Lisnevin for placement and (b) use the other training schools when transferring from Lisnevin. [41077]

Mr. Ingram: A Training School Order (made under section 74 et seq of the Children and Young Persons Act (Northern Ireland) 1968 and defined by Article 2 of the Criminal Justice (Northern Ireland) (Order 1996) provides authority for the detention in custody in secure accommodation of a child who has been found guilty of serious or persistent offending and can be made only by a court. Nevertheless, it is policy to use 'open' accommodation if practicable. However, a child will be placed in, or returned to, secure accommodation if the seriousness or nature of his offending, or absconding or other behaviour while in 'open' accommodation, indicates that he may present a risk to himself or others.

My Department does not direct the courts to use a particular Training School for the placement or transfer of any child within the Training School system.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Standard Assessment Tests

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what were the average total National Curriculum levels, rounded to 3 decimal places, attained by all 11 year old (a) male, (b) female and (c) male and female pupils in all maintained schools in each LEA at Key Stage 2 in (i) English, (ii) Maths,

(iii) Science and (iv) English, Maths and Science for (1) 1995, (2) 1996 and (3) 1997, on the basis of teacher assessment of the numbers of pupils attaining each level from level 1 upwards; and if he will list the number of pupils for each LEA area. [38418]

Ms Estelle Morris: The information requested is shown in tables, copies of which have been placed in the Library. It is not possible to present information for English, mathematics and science together as matching of pupils' results across subjects is not possible.

Beacon Schools

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the beacon schools. [41621]

Mr. Byers: There are no beacon schools at present. I have invited those schools identified by HMCI as 'best performing' to consider beacon school status. Most of these are listed in HMCI's Annual Report for 1996–97.

Project Charlie

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children were involved in Operation Charlie; over what period it was conducted; and how its value was assessed. [41619]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Project Charlie (Chemical Abuse Resolution Lies in Education) programme was evaluated soon after its implementation in two primary schools in Hackney over the period 1990–1992. The children who were involved in the programme at this time were followed-up in 1996 and compared with children who did not receive Project Charlie. A number of different comparisons were made involving more than 300 pupils and, among the findings of the evaluation study highlighted in a recent Home Office Drug Prevention Initiative study paper, are the positive effects the programme appears to have on pupils' skills, attitudes and reported drug use.

Independent-State School Partnerships

Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he expects to respond to the interim report of the advisory group on independent/state school partnerships. [42399]

Mr. Byers: I am writing today to the Chairman welcoming the interim report of the Advisory Group. The full report, including my response, will be published tomorrow. Copies will be placed in the Library.

I am also laying before Parliament tomorrow the Education (Partnership Grant) Regulations 1998 and announcing the allocation of grant for 1998–99.

New Deal

Mr. Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has for the private sector to lead partnerships for the organisation and delivery of the New Deal to those unemployed adults covered by the pilot initiatives due to commence in November. [42545]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Government wish to build on the experience gained from New Deal for 18–24-year-olds in taking forward the pilots of enhanced provision for those aged 25 and over, which were announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the budget and which are due to start in November.

Accordingly we have decided that around a third of the pilots which we intend to establish later this year should be taken forward by private sector led partnerships and that these should be in the areas where the private sector has been invited similarly to lead on the New Deal for 18–24-year-olds. The areas concerned are, Bridgend and Glamorgan Valleys, Colchester, Exeter and East Devon, Forth Valley, Hackney and City, Leicestershire, Solihull, South Humber, Tyneside North and West Lancashire.

Advertisements seeking expressions of interest in these pilots will appear in the national and local press shortly. We aim to announce the successful bidders in each locality by the end of August.

The remainder of the pilots will be led by local New Deal partnerships. We will be announcing plans to select these areas in due course.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Investment

16. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on levels of investment in the United Kingdom relative to those elsewhere in the EU. [40968]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: In 1996, fixed investment accounted for 15½ per cent. of Gross Domestic Product in the United Kingdom and almost 19 per cent. in the rest of the EU.

Productivity

17. Mrs. Heal: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action her Department is taking to improve productivity in British companies. [40969]

Mr. Battle: Improving productivity is at the heart of the Government's drive to improve the competitiveness of UK companies.

Responsibility for this lies largely with business itself. But Government are ready to work in partnership with business. My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade set up six business-led Working Parties last year to make recommendations about how such a partnership can help to remedy these specific failings. Now she is co-hosting, with the Chancellor of the Exchequer, a series of seminars on the productivity gap over the Summer and Autumn.

The conclusions of this process will contribute to a White Paper on competitiveness to be published in the Autumn.

Engineering (West Midlands)

18. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she is taking to improve the export opportunities for engineering companies in the west midlands. [40970]

Mr. Battle: West Midlands engineering companies have local access to all national export assistance programmes which draw on the expertise of DTI officials.

Local partners, including Business Links and the Government office, are also working together to help deliver the new Market and Trade Fair Explorer programmes designed especially for those companies who have had limited experience of selling overseas. This, together with a range of new schemes under the SME Initiative, will provide more opportunities for West Midlands firms.

Industrial Relations and Employment White Paper

19. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what meetings she has had with and representations she has received from trade unions in the past three months in relation to the forthcoming White Paper on industrial relations and employment law; and if she will make a statement. [40971]

Mrs. Beckett: I have met the TUC on several occasions to discuss union recognition and associated issues. My Department has also received a large number of letters from trade unions on these matters. The Government will announce their proposals on recognition in the forthcoming White Paper on fairness at work.

32. Mr. Barnes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on progress in respect of the fairness at work White Paper. [40986]

Mrs. Beckett: The Government will publish the White Paper shortly.

National Minimum Wage

20. Mr. Watts: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she now expects the Low Pay Commission to report its recommendations for a national minimum wage to her Department. [40972]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I expect the Low Pay Commission to make its recommendations to Government by the end of this month on the level at which the national minimum wage might be introduced.

27. Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects the Low Pay Commission to report its recommendations for a national minimum wage to her Department. [40980]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, East (Mr. McNulty).

Inward Investment (Yorkshire and Humberside)

21. Shona McIsaac: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she is taking to encourage inward investment in the Yorkshire and Humber region. [40973]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Yorkshire and Humberside Development Agency (YHDA) co-ordinates the region's inward investment promotion effort. The Agency works in partnership with DTI's Invest in Britain Bureau, the Government Office for Yorkshire and the Humber, Local Authorities and the private sector to encourage inward investment in the Region.

Small and Medium Enterprises

22. Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action her Department is taking to encourage new sources of long-term capital for small and medium enterprises. [40974]

Mrs. Roche: The Government are very keen to ensure that small and medium enterprises have access to appropriate finance for their needs. We continue to work in partnership with the private sector providers of finance, including the banks, venture capitalists and the business angel market, to explore new ways of providing long-term finance.

31. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she last met representatives of small and medium British businesses to discuss competitiveness; and if she will make a statement. [40984]

Mrs. Roche: Competitiveness is at the heart of the department's policies. My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade meets small business representatives to ensure that their needs are fully taken into consideration when formulating new policy.

As part of this process my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade established an Advisory Group on Competitiveness, whose members include representatives of the small business community.

36. Mr. Coaker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action she is taking to encourage EU support for small and medium enterprises. [40990]

Mrs. Roche: The Government recognise the important contribution that SMEs make to EU competitiveness and support effective action at European level to provide an environment in which SMEs can compete and grow. To help ensure this I maintain close contact with the Commission and with my counterparts in other EU Member States on a range of issues affecting SMEs.

SMEs have been a key feature of the UK's Presidency of the EU. We have secured agreement on the package of financial measures for job-creating SMEs adopted at the Luxembourg Job Summit, held a discussion at the Industry Council on the Commission's proposals for a Directive on late payment and hosted the Enterprising Europe Conference at which delegates from all Member States considered ways of promoting entrepreneurship in the EU. The Cardiff European Council will consider the report of the Business Environment Simplification Taskforce which the Commission set up at the request of the Amsterdam European Council to identify barriers to growth and job creation faced by SMEs.

Post Office

23. Mrs. May: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the timetable for the second phase of the Post Office review. [40975]

Mr. Ian McCartney: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade announced the second phase of the inter-departmental review on 6 April 1998, Official Report, column 63. We plan to present our proposals to Parliament in the Autumn.

25. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the Government's plans for the future of the Post Office. [40977]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government plan to give the Post Office greater commercial freedom so that it can meet changes in the domestic and international markets. The Government have commissioned a review of public sector options for achieving this.

34. Mr. Page: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps are being taken to facilitate the international competitiveness of the Royal Mail. [40988]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government have commissioned a review of possible public sector options for giving the Post Office greater commercial freedoms to help meet changes in the domestic and international markets and enhance its international competitiveness. Our conclusions will be presented to Parliament in the Autumn.

Manufacturing

24. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the balance of payments in manufactured goods for the first quarter of 1998. [40976]

Mr. Battle: In the three months to February compared with the previous three months, excluding erratics, the volume of manufactured exports rose by 1.5 per cent. while the volume of manufactured imports was unchanged.

Economic and Monetary Union

26. Dr. George Turner: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the preparedness of UK business for EMU; and what progress her Department has made in assisting business to plan effectively. [40979]

30. Yvette Cooper: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment her Department has made of the preparedness of British companies for economic and monetary union. [40983]

37. Mr. Efford: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress her Department has made in working with business to prepare for the launch of EMU. [40991]

Mrs. Beckett: The best large British firms have already begun to prepare but many small and medium businesses have not thought about the issue. To help them do so, the Government have a communications strategy to raise awareness and provide information, including a dedicated telephone line and website supported by a range of literature.

Oil Installations

28. Dr. Godman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent representations she has received concerning the dismantling and abandonment of redundant offshore structures and pipeline networks. [40981]

Mr. Battle: I have not received any recent representations under the terms of the Petroleum Act 1987. My Department is currently considering Shell's revised proposals for the Brent Spar and has had preliminary discussions with a number of operators about their decommissioning plans.

Business Burdens

29. Mr. Ruffley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received regarding financial burdens on business. [40982]

Mrs. Roche: I receive many representations as part of the Government's extensive dialogue with business, including on issues that might place burdens on business. The Government's aim is to minimise such burdens, for example by ensuring long-term economic stability and adopting good regulatory practice.

Innovation

33. Dr. Iddon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she is taking to raise the profile of innovation among British firms. [40987]

Mr. Battle: The Department has a special Innovation Unit which works to spread best practice in and awareness of innovation through events such as the Audience with Innovation recently given by Richard Branson, through publications such as Partnerships with People and through networking both regionally and nationally with companies, with public and private sector bodies and with other parts of DTI.

In addition, last year my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade set up six business-led Working Parties, including one on innovation which I chaired, to make recommendations about how the UK could be made more competitive.

Miners (Compensation)

35. Mr. Rowlands: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a further statement on the handling of compensation claims from former miners suffering from respiratory diseases. [40989]

Mr. Battle: At a High Court hearing on 27 March 1998 the solicitors acting for the plaintiffs requested a three month adjournment to allow further discussions to take place with the Department's agents about our settlement proposals for dealing with the many thousands of claims expected. The court granted an adjournment and discussions continue. We trust that agreement can be reached quickly so that valid claims can be paid in full.

I also refer my hon. Friend to my previous answer to him of 30 April 1998, Official Report, columns 235–36, which explained that, as a further three month delay may be unwelcome to some claimants, particularly those who are severely disabled, we are continuing to make interim payments of £2,000 to miners seeking compensation for emphysema who are also in receipt of DSS PD.D12 benefit. Initially offers were made to those over 80 on receipt of PD.D12 certificates from claimants' solicitors. But we are also making offers to claimants below 80 (in descending order) wherever practicable, to ensure that we reach our minimum target of 5,000 offers. Ideally we wish to reach this point by the end of June but, to enable us to do this, we need the co-operation of the plaintiffs' solicitors to submit evidence of receipt of benefit. Unfortunately, PD.D12 certificates are not being sent in to us as quickly as we expected and we trust that plaintiffs' solicitors will do all they can to speed the process up.

Export Credits

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) of 27 November 1997, Official Report, column 645, if she will list the assessments made by (a) ECGD and (b) other relevant agencies on the risks of extending the export credits against which claims have been made by manufacturers and not recovered from the Governments of (i) Venezuela, (ii) Jordan, (iii) Kenya, (iv) Egypt and (v) Algeria. [39267]

Mrs. Roche: (a) All ECGD's risk assessments are based on analysis of the economic and political factors which influence an individual country's ability and willingness to meet its external debt commitments. Any vulnerability to political risks, such as civil wars, coups, etc., is also taken into account. In the cases of Algeria, Egypt, Jordan, Kenya, and Venezuela the risk assessments made prior to the issue of the guarantees led us to take the view that these countries had the capacity and willingness to pay, and the decision was taken to issue the guarantees. However, despite best endeavours at judging the long-term risk some countries can still default on their commitments for reasons which are outside ECGD's control (for example unforeseen economic shocks such as oil price falls).

(b) ECGD considers a wide variety of country information and risk assessments from other relevant agencies such as the International Monetary Fund, The World Bank, and Export Credit Agencies. Information from these agencies helps to inform ECGD's own assessment of the economic and political risks.

Research Councils

Dr. Starkey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of applications, in relation to each of the research councils were from women, for (a) project grants, (b) programme grants, (c) special grants intended for new investigators, (d) studentships and (e) fellowships, in 1997 and each of the two previous years. [40879]

Mr. Battle: The available data are shown in the table.

1. The EPSRC and PPARC do not distinguish project from programme grants. In addition, the EPSRC figure for these grants and for the special grants is the percentage of applications by women in applications where the gender is known
2. NERC figures for project grants represent NERC non-thematic (responsive) grants, and for programme grants NERC thematic (directed) grants
3. Some Councils do not run special grants intended for new investigators, or are only in the first year of doing so
4. There are no data for studentship applications because, with the exception of the ESRC research studentships, the Research Councils allocate studentships by quota to institutions which are responsible for the subsequent award. The figures given are the percentage of studentships awarded to women, with the exception of the ESRC which shows the percentage of applications for research studentships for women.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of applications from women, in relation to each of the research councils, were successful for (a) project grants, (b) programme grants, (c) special grants intended for new investigators, (d) studentships and (e) fellowships, in 1997 and each of the two previous years. Small Businesses

Mr. Breed: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if her Department will give additional assistance to small businesses to assist in exports to take account of the current strength of sterling. [40965]

Mrs. Roche: The vast majority of our overseas trade services are geared towards helping small firms export, independent of the strength of sterling. We have recently announced a number of new schemes which will improve this support further.

Coal Industry

38. Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to conclude her review of the coal industry. [40992]

Mr. Battle: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Ogmore (Sir R. Powell) on 11 May 1998, Official Report, column 36.

Sustainable Development

Dr. Tonge: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assistance her Department offers to British companies investing abroad to promote the OECD's national sustainable development strategies. [41040]

Mrs. Roche: The Government believe that outward investment can make a significant contribution to sustainable development. As part of the DTI's response to the Export Forum report, a new Directorate has been established in DTI to review and strengthen our support for UK companies making such strategic investment overseas. The Department also continues to run the Technology Partnership Initiative, which seeks to promote technology co-operation with developing countries, and which can facilitate the transfer of the environmental technologies, which are crucial to the achievement of sustainable development.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. White: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what support the Government are giving to small businesses to deal with the threat of Year 2000 computer bugs. [39795]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 6 May 1998]: This Government's support to small businesses to help them deal with the Millennium Bug falls under two headings: informed advice, guidance and signposting to sources of help through DTI's new initiative—Action 2000—and a Department for Education and Employment scheme to subsidise training in IT skills for staff of small businesses.

Government support for Action 2000 now amounts to £17m. The main focus of the Millennium Bug campaign is on ensuring that small businesses take action now to address the problem by signposting practical help and guidance and available information on tools and services. DTI's network of Business Links and similar organisations in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, working with Action 2000, are training staff to provide advice to businesses, including advice on the best programmes and consultants to use.

In March, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced that £26m was being made available for DfEE to help employers in small businesses train up to 20,000 people to tackle the Millennium Bug.

Faxes

Barbara Follett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what powers she has to prevent the misuse of fax machines for transmitting unsolicited material; [41499]

(2) if she will legislate to prevent the sending of unsolicited faxes. [41501]

Mrs. Roche: Measures are already in place to deal with the problem of unsolicited faxes. The telecommunications and telephone selling industries have established a Fax Preference Service to help residential customers reduce the number of faxes they receive. Customers who have a fax machine in their residential premises may register for inclusion in a database against which companies selling via fax 'clean' their mailing lists. Moreover, under the Telecommunications Act 1984, UK companies using fax marketing are subject to a class licence which contains measures aimed at limiting the nuisance which can be caused by unsolicited faxes. Anyone sending unsolicited faxes must cease doing so to any particular person on receipt of a written request from them, or face possible enforcement action, including the removal of their right to operate a telecoms system, by Oftel.

The Government are addressing the question of additional measures to protect businesses and residential consumers from unwelcome faxes in the forthcoming consultation paper on the European Union Telecoms Data Protection Directive, which the Government will implement later this year.

Petroleum Products (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action is being taken by Her Majesty's Government to protect legitimate petrol and diesel fuel retailers in Border areas and throughout Northern Ireland from disadvantageous trading conditions arising from (a) the difference in value of sterling and the punt, (b) fuel duty differentials between the United Kingdom and the Irish Republic and (c) bulk fuel deliveries into Northern Ireland from the Irish Republic. [41389]

Mr. Battle: The main problem affecting legitimate retailers of petrol and diesel in Northern Ireland is smuggling of duty paid fuel across the border for onward sale. The Government, Customs and Excise and the other authorities in Northern Ireland are fully aware of the problem.

Customs are deploying resources and actively mounting investigations against those involved to counter the threat posed to revenue and to the Northern Ireland business community. Customs are taking the lead on this issue but are acting in conjunction with other authorities, including the Royal Ulster Constabulary, to make seizures of oil tankers and vehicles carrying oil tanks filled with illegally imported fuel for resale. Wherever possible, cases are progressed with a view to criminal prosecution of the individuals concerned.

Sombrero Island (Environmental Assessment)

Mr. Randall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to conserve the Sombrero black lizards of the Sombrero Island, Anguilla. [41628]

Mr. Battle: I am informed that ICF Kaiser are producing an Environmental Impact Assessment on behalf of Beal Aerospace. This assessment will examine the impact of Beal Aerospace's proposed development of a satellite launch facility on all flora and fauna on Sombrero Island, including the Sombrero Black Lizard.

Mr. Randall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what consultations her Department has held or plans to hold with ICF Kaiser on the scope of their environmental assessment of Sombrero Island in the Caribbean; and what alternative sites for building a rocket launching pad have been considered; [41625]

(2) what consultations her Department has held or plans to hold with ICF Kaiser on the scope of their environmental assessment of Sombrero Island in the Caribbean; and if she will make a statement. [41626]

Mr. Battle: ICF Kaiser is an adviser to Beal Aerospace which proposes to develop a satellite launch site on Sombrero Island in the UK dependent territory of Anguilla. Officials in the British National Space Centre (BNSC) have held a number of discussions with Beal Aerospace over the past three months to discuss a formal application to develop the site and conduct launches. BNSC officials have also contributed to defining the scope of an environmental assessment of the proposal. This contribution has reflected advice from a number of Government Departments including the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, and the Environment Agency.

The scope and content of the Environmental Assessment have been prepared such that they fulfil a series of requirements including those laid down by the UK's Town and Country Planning (Assessment of Environmental Effects) Regulation 1988, the US National Environmental Policy Act, and the World Bank.

Beal Aerospace investigated a number of alternative sites before making a commercial decision to select Sombrero Island, the only UK territorial site investigated.

North West London Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what steps she has taken to establish the precise financial status of North West London TEC and the proposed withdrawal of its partnership contribution to Business Link London North West; and what effect such withdrawal may have on the future viability of the Business Link; [41465]

(2) if she will publish (i) the committed partnership contributions, (ii) the actual contributions made, (iii) the funding disbursed by her Department and (iv) the generated income of Business Link London North West for the fiscal years (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (c) that projected for 1998–99; [41464]

(3) what action she will take to safeguard the sums paid by her Department to North West London TEC as pump priming funding for Business Link London North West in a view of the TEC's withdrawal of its previously committed partnership contribution for 1998–99 as partial matched funding for her Department's funds. [41466]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 11 May 1998]: The information is based on the data held by the Government Office for London and is also available in the North West London TEC's Business Plan:

	Generated income	Committed partner income	Actual partner contribution	DTI funding
1996–97	40,000	n/a	255,000	834,240
1997–98	112,000	111,888	150,000	1,126,939

[1] Forecast

The Government Office for London carries out regular financial audits of all its TECs. North West London TEC was audited in April 1997 and was assessed as being financially viable, and classified in the low risk category. The next financial audit of the TEC is planned for this summer.

North West London TEC has been instrumental in developing and enhancing a successful local Business Link partnership in its area. The TEC is committed to playing its part in the development of quality business and enterprise support services in line with my vision statement announced in October last year, and to enhancing its strategic role in this respect. I understand that the TEC has not reached any conclusions about its contribution to the Business Link for 1998–99. If the TEC were to withdraw its partnership contribution, the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry would have the right, at her discretion, to withhold pump-priming funding and to recover the pump-priming funding already paid. In addition, concerns about operational and financial viability that may result as a consequence of any of the partners' proposals to withdraw contributions would be subject to a thorough review by the Government Office for London. This is done in the normal course of business so as to ensure that the TEC has an operational Business Link in the area.

Patent Office

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment the prior options review of the Next Steps agencies for the Patent Office has made of the advantages of the agencies expanding their work into areas of activity undertaken by (a) trade mark agents and (b) patent agents. [41614]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The nature of the functions of the Patent Office is defined by Statutes which in practice preclude it from expanding its work into areas of activity undertaken by patent and trade mark agents. In the context of a prior options review in 1994, the previous Government considered in general terms whether legislation should be introduced to alter this arrangement. In the event, they decided not to proceed with legislation.

Motor Trade (EMU)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the effects of European Monetary Union on the motor vehicle retail sector. [42047]

Mr. Battle: European Monetary Union will affect the business environment for firms in all sectors. The setting of inflation targets and interest rates by the European Central Bank will affect the macroeconomic situation, and barriers to trade between member states will be removed by the elimination of exchange rate barriers and currency transaction costs. EMU should also increase the transparency of prices across the euro zone, a point of particular interest to the vehicle sector. Businesses in all sectors should be considering their marketing and pricing strategies in the light of this new environment, as well as the practical implications of the change for the way in which they do business.

World Trade Organisation Conference

Barbara Follett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the United Kingdom's objectives for the second Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organisation in Geneva from 18 to 20 May. [42573]

Mrs. Beckett: The United Kingdom sees this as a significant meeting for further strengthening the rules-based multilateral system and its dispute settlement mechanism. We will be looking to secure:

(i) affirmation of the continuing importance of trade liberalisation to economic growth, improving living standards, and new job creation across the world;

(ii) a pledge to maintain open markets and resist protectionism;

(iii) a renewed commitment to meeting deadlines to implementation of existing commitments and recognition that technical assistance will be made available to assist countries which are encountering difficulties;

(iv) a strengthened commitment to achieving greater integration of the least developed countries into the multilateral system by reducing further trade barriers against their exports;

(v) recognition of the need for a major step forward in the liberalisation of goods and services on a comprehensive basis;

(vi) the setting in train of wide-ranging groundwork so that decisions can be taken at the 1999 Ministerial on the substance, modalities, and timetable for broad-based negotiations beginning from 2000.

I will attend the conference in my capacity as President in Office of the Council of the European Union. As such, I will be guided by the conclusions of EU Ministers which reflect the consensus among EU trade Ministers for the Ministerial Conference. Copies of these conclusions will be deposited in both Houses. My noble Friend the Minister for Trade will represent the United Kingdom. The United Kingdom's objectives are fully reflected in the EU's objectives for the conference after which we will want, along with the Commission and other EU member states, to begin a process of communicating the benefits of trade liberalisation and the role of the WTO in that process.

Internet

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to protect children from harmful material on the Internet. [40978]

Mrs. Roche: We are determined to ensure that children can access the many benefits the Internet brings, without fear of encountering harmful material. We support the work of the Internet watch Foundation (IWF) to uphold the law on line through its hotline and notification service and to lead development of an international approach to rating and filtering of content. But we are not complacent and I have announced a review of IWF to assess its progress to date and help us to establish its future priorities. IWF is now providing a model for action internationally, and we hope to reach agreement on a European Action Plan for Safe use of the Internet during our Presidency, to promote the safe use of the Internet, and protect children from harmful material.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Flood Defences

Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will provide a breakdown of the projects aided by the £.05 million grant aid provided by his Department towards the Agency's flood warning arrangements. [41786]

Mr. Morley: In my reply to my hon. Friend's question on 6 May 1998, Official Report, column 418, I stated that in the past two years the Department had contributed some £0.5 million (not £0.05 million) of grant towards the Environment Agency's flood warning arrangements. This understated the contribution, which I now correct to £0.75 million. The breakdown is as follows:

Agency Region	Project	Grant paid
(a) National projects
North East (on behalf of all regions)	New national flood warning dissemination—purchase of capital equipment and contribution to publicity costs	241
(b) Regional projects
	Local improvements associated with national project and with telemetry systems:
Anglia		343
Thames		35
Southern		19
South Western		30
North West		21
North East		59

In addition, the Agency has met the balance of costs of these flood warning arrangements and will have incurred expenditure on other flood warning arrangements for which grant aid has not been sought.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many studies commissioned or evaluated by his Department have been completed into the effectiveness of inland flood warning systems since March 1996. [41788]

Mr. Morley: No such research has been commissioned directly by the Ministry. The Environment Agency has commissioned independent annual surveys of public response to assess the effectiveness of their flood warning arrangements. The results of the first survey have been supplied to the Ministry.

My officials have also discussed with the Agency the results of the Agency's independent technical review of new flood warning dissemination systems. This has informed prioritisation of future developments.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 6 May 1998, Official Report, columns 417–18, which local authority areas are covered by inherited arrangements for flood warnings. [41784]

Mr. Morley: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The arrangements for dissemination of flood warnings were mainly inherited from the police and the Environment Agency now provides a flood warning service in some one thousand locations.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many meetings his officials held with the Environment Agency to discuss the flood warnings systems (a) in March 1996 to March 1997, (b) in March 1997 to March 1998 and (c) since March 1998. [41785]

Mr. Morley: The number of meetings wholly or mainly relating to flood warning systems in these periods is (a) 9, (b) 12 and (c) 1. Flood warning arrangements were also discussed in regular liaison meetings with the Environment Agency and were the subject of detailed discussions with the Agency prior to the Ministerial Direction in March 1996.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 6 May 1998, Official Report, columns 419–20, if he will list (a) the local authorities, (b) the value of the respective grants and (c) the title of the application for each of the applications by local authorities for capital grants for flood and sea defences set out in his answer; and which of these applications were approved. [41782]

Mr. Morley: I will write to my hon. Friend with the information requested at (a) to (c) above, and approval status.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 6 May 1998, Official Report, columns 419–20, if he will list (a) the local authority area, (b) the value of the respective grants and (c) the title of the application for the applications by the Environment Agency and the Inland Drainage Board from 1995 to 1997 set out in his answer; and which of these applications were approved. [41783]

Mr. Morley: I will write to my hon. Friend with the information requested at (b) and (c) above, and approval status. Information on (a) is not readily available and could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what flood warning dissemination plan has been developed for Northamptonshire since March 1998. [41787]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency's flood warning dissemination plan for Northamptonshire was drawn up in consultation with the local authorities and the Police in September 1996. The plan was reviewed by the Agency in May 1997 and a further review is planned shortly. A copy of the current Plan is being submitted to the Agriculture Committee and placed in the House Library.

Pesticides

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has for new regulations under section 16(2) of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985. [41525]

Mr. Rooker: We have plans to amend the Control of Pesticides Regulations 1986 and the Plant Protection Products (Basic Conditions) Regulations 1997 by means of new regulations. If the Pesticides Bill passes into law, as the Government hope, the existing Regulations will be amended to improve the arrangements for public access to information and also to extend to local authorities certain powers to seize and dispose of pesticides. In addition, the Government intend to remove the age exemption from the requirement for users of agricultural pesticides to hold a certificate of competence.

We shall consult widely on these proposals.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy in respect of the photocopying of information relating to pesticides, in cases where that information may be inspected by the public. [41526]

Mr. Rooker: The Government's policy is to make as much information about pesticides available to the public as possible. Constraints are therefore kept to the minimum necessary to protect personal information, commercial secrets and intellectual property rights.

Documents detailing the evaluation of pesticide compounds carried out by the Advisory Committee on Pesticides are available for inspection or purchase by the public. The individual scientific studies underlying these documents are available for inspection but we do not allow photocopies to be taken because of the potential for such material to be misused for the purpose of gaining a pesticide approval.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many products containing glufosinate ammonium he has (a) approved and (b) refused to approve; and if he will place a copy of all approvals and any extensions in the Library. [41523]

Mr. Rooker: 44 products containing glufosinate-ammonium have been granted one or more approvals by Ministers; and Ministers have refused to approve the uses requested for 1 product containing glufosinate-ammonium.

I have placed a list of all the 44 products which have gained one or more approvals in the Library of the House. Individual approvals include the application documents and any subsequent correspondence from the applicant. As such, they contain commercially sensitive data and, therefore, we do not publish them.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many of the approvals he has given or extended for products containing glufosinate ammonium allow use near to, or in connection with, the production of edible crops. [41524]

Mr. Rooker: There are 60 extant approvals allowing use near to, or in connection with, the production of edible crops which relate to the 44 glufosinate-containing products which have been approved by Ministers.

Seed Listings

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will specify those tests and trials conducted in respect of genetically modified seeds, which fall under (a) Regulation 11(1) of the Seeds (National List of Varieties) Regulations 1982, (b) Regulation 11(2) of those Regulations, (c) Regulation 11(3) of those Regulations, (d) Regulation 11A of those Regulations, (e) Regulation 12(2) of the Plant Breeders' Rights Regulations 1978, (f) any other specified statutory provision and (g) no statutory provision. [41516]

Mr. Rooker: Plant Varieties are tested for Distinctness, Uniformity and Stability (DUS) for the purposes of National Listing and plant breeders' rights. The main agricultural species are also trialled, for National List purposes only, to establish whether they have Value for Cultivation and Use (VCU). These requirements apply to all varieties, regardless of whether they are genetically modified or not, although genetically modified varieties cannot be entered in tests and/or trials unless a consent to release has been granted by the Secretary of State in accordance with the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and the Genetically Modified Organisms (Deliberate Release) Regulations 1992, as amended. The tests and trials must also comply with any conditions imposed in release consents.

Tests and trials conducted on plant varieties under the provisions specified are:

(a) DUS tests and VCU trials are conducted pursuant to Regulation 11(1) of the Seeds (National Lists of Varieties) Regulations 1982 (the 1982 Regulations).

(b) No tests or trials are conducted pursuant to Regulation 11(2) of the 1982 Regulations.

(c) Regulation 11(3) of the 1982 Regulations requires applicants to submit the results of their own value trials on varieties with their National List applications. However, experience has shown that this information is of little value in assessing National List applications and the Department has not required applicants to comply with these provisions since 1995.

(d) Ministers have licensed the British Society of Plant Breeders Ltd. to conduct VCU trials for National List purposes for varieties of the main species of cereals, fodder plants, legumes and winter oilseed rape and linseed, under Regulation 11A of the 1982 Regulations. Similarly, Ministers have licensed the British Sugar Beet Seed Producers Association to undertake VCU trials in respect of sugar beet varieties entered for National Listing.

(e) The Controller of Plant Breeders' Rights has not required any applicant for plant breeders' rights in respect of a genetically modified variety to undertake his or her own tests or trials, pursuant to Regulation 12(2) of the Plant Breeders' Rights Regulations 1978 (as amended). (These Regulations were repealed by the Plant Breeders' Rights Regulations 1998 on 8 May 1998).

(f) There are no other statutory tests or trials conducted pursuant to the 1982 Regulations or plant breeders' rights legislation. However, Regulation 32 of the 1982 Regulations enables plant breeders to undertake their own tests and trials before submitting a National List application. It also enables National List applicants to undertake their own tests and trials and to multiply seed varieties while a National List application is under consideration. These are commercial matters for the applicant, provided he or she complies with the 1982 Regulations and (in the case of a genetically modified variety) with all conditions attached to the release consent.

(g) As part of the normal co-operation between testing authorities, the United Kingdom Plant Variety Rights Office is undertaking tests for Distinctness, Uniformity and Stability on behalf of the Belgian authorities in respect of 11 genetically modified oilseed rape varieties.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the tests and trials which have been or are being conducted in respect of genetically modified seeds; and if he will place the results in the Library. [41515]

Mr. Rooker: The Department undertakes statutory tests and trials on plant varieties in respect of applications for plant breeders' rights or addition to the National List. Tests for Distinctness, Uniformity and Stability (DUS) are undertaken in respect of applications for plant breeders' rights under the Plant Varieties Act 1997 (the Plant Varieties and Seeds Act 1964, which preceded the 1997 Act, also required DUS tests). Tests for DUS and trials to establish Value for Cultivation and Use (VCU) are undertaken in respect of applications for National Listing. The Department is currently considering 13 applications for plant breeders' rights, 11 applications for addition to the National List and 9 combined plant breeders' rights/National List applications in respect of plant varieties which are genetically modified organisms.

The species concerned are as follows:

	Varieties
Plant breeders' rights only
Oilseed Rape	13
National List only
Oilseed Rape	5
Sugar Beet	5
Maize	1
Combined plant breeders' rights/National List applications
Oilseed Rape	9

As yet, no reports of tests or trials have been finalised. When a DUS test undertaken for the purpose of assessing an application for plant breeders' rights is completed, a proposed decision on the variety concerned will be published in the Plant Varieties and Seeds Gazette. At the same time, a description of the variety will be placed on the public register and a copy of the DUS report will be publicly available in accordance with Regulation 12 and 13 of the Plant Breeders' Rights Regulations 1998 (the first DUS reports are expected to be publicly available in July of this year).

Reports of DUS tests undertaken solely for the purposes of assessing National List applications, and results of VCU trials, will be available on request to my Department, once tests and trials are complete for a variety and a proposed decision on whether or not it should be added to the National List has been published in the Plant Varieties and Seeds Gazette.

I am taking steps to ensure that the Plant Varieties and Seeds Gazette is placed in the Library of the House on a regular basis. Hon. Members may then obtain copies of reports in respect of any variety which is of interest to them.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if seed trials and tests in connection with national seed listing applications are also regarded by his Department as seed trials and tests in connection with plant breeders' rights applications, and vice versa. [41522]

Mr. Rooker: Varieties entered for plant breeders' rights under the Plant Varieties Act 1997 (and the legislation which preceded it) are tested for Distinctness, Uniformity and Stability (DUS). Varieties entered for National Listing are also tested for DUS. A DUS test undertaken for plant breeders' rights purposes is acceptable for National List purposes. In most circumstances, a DUS test initially undertaken for National List purposes is also acceptable for plant breeders' rights. There may, however, be isolated instances when a DUS test undertaken initially for National List purposes is not entirely acceptable for assessing an application for plant breeders' rights. This is because Distinctness must be established in an international context for plant breeders' rights, whereas for National List purposes, it needs to be established only in comparison with varieties on a National List of another Member State or on the Common Catalogue.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if applicants for national seed listings must submit the results of seed trials and tests to his Department in connection with applications for national seed listing. [41521]

Mr. Rooker: No.

SCOTLAND

Deafness

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what targets he has set for delivering deaf awareness training to general practitioners; and if he will make a statement. [41633]

Mr. Galbraith: There are no set targets for delivering deaf awareness training to general practitioners. However, my Department has recently issued guidance to all Health Boards and NHS Trusts reminding them of their responsibilities for having appropriate arrangements in place to ensure that deafblind people are afforded the services of a guide/communicator when they attend hospital or GP surgery. This is now part of a wider agenda concerning people with disabilities which flows from the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, and in particular the provisions within the Act governing access to services and employment. I intend shortly to issue guidance to NHS Trusts in Scotland on applying this part of the Act, including specific reference to treatment of deaf and deafblind people.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what resources have been made available for the provision of services for young deaf adults in each year since 1987; and if he will make a statement. [41634]

Mr. Galbraith: The information required to answer this question is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the current length of waiting lists for the provision of (a) a hearing test and (b) a hearing aid in each Scottish health board area. [41632]

Mr. Galbraith: Information on waiting lists at audiometry and hearing aids clinics is not collected centrally.

Pesticides

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many products containing glufosinate ammonium he has (a) approved and (b) refused approval; and if he will place a copy of all approvals and extensions in the Library; [41513]

(2) how many of the approvals he has given or extended for products containing glufosinate ammonium allow use near to, or in connection with, the production of edible crops. [41514]

Mr. Macdonald: I refer the hon. Member to the answer he received today from my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Genetically Modified Seeds

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list the tests and trials conducted in respect of genetically modified seeds; and if he will place the results in the Library; [41518]

(2) if he will specify those tests and trials conducted in respect of genetically-modified seeds, which fall under (a) Regulation 11(1) of the Seeds (National List of Varieties) Regulations 1982, (b) Regulation 11(2) of those Regulations, (c) Regulation 11(3) of those Regulations, (d) Regulation 11A of those Regulations, (e) Regulation 12(2) of the Plant Breeders Rights Regulations 1978, (f) any other specified statutory provision and (g) no statutory provision. [41519]

Mr. Macdonald: I refer the hon. Member to the answer he received today from my hon. Friend, the Minister of State, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what statutory provisions govern the conduct of tests and trials in respect of genetically modified seeds; and if he will make a statement. [41520]

Mr. Macdonald: I refer the hon. Member to the answer he received today from the Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, my hon. Friend the Member for Wallasey (Angela Eagle).

Further Education

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the value of the fixed element cost of grant-in-aid for the Scottish further education sector for 1998–99. [41732]

Mr. Wilson: I refer to the answer given to the hon. Member on 12 May 1998, Official Report, column 87.

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many weighted standard units of measurements there were in the Scottish further education sector for academic years (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96 and (c) 1996–97; [41731]

(2) what was the value of the weighted standard units of measurement in the Scottish further education sector in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (c) 1998–99. [41671]

Mr. Wilson: Weighted Student Units of Measurement (WSUMs) are used in the funding methodology which determines the allocation of recurrent grant to further education colleges. The numbers of WSUMs and the average value per WSUM are set out in the tables for the years in question. The average value has been determined by dividing the amount of funding allocated by the number of WSUMs used in the funding methodology for the appropriate year.

Year	Number of WSUMs
1995–96	1,667,042
1996–97	1,843,665

Year	Average 'value' per WSUM
1996–97	151
1998–99	125

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the sector average unit cost per weighted standard unit of measurement of Scottish Office Education and Industry Department fundable activity for the Scottish further education sector for (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97. [41733]

Mr. Wilson: The sector average unit cost per weighted student unit of measurement of Scottish Office Education and Industry Department fundable activity within the Scottish further education sector was £195 in 1995–96 and £180 in 1996–97. Over this period activity in the sector increased by an average of 10.6 per cent., and an efficiency gain of 10.57 per cent. in real terms was achieved.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each NHS trust in Scotland the projected deficits or surpluses, excluding the write down in value of trust assets, itemised in the monthly monitoring returns for 31 December 1997, indicating the total of the projected deficits or surpluses. [41812]

Mr. Galbraith: The table provides the information requested, as well as the most up to date figures available from the Trust monitoring returns.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Indonesia

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps have been taken to implement the six-point plan for co-operation on human rights with Indonesia announced in August 1997; and what are the estimated total costs of the plan. [41537]

Mr. Fatchett: We shall shortly be purchasing computer equipment for the Indonesian National Human Rights Commission (KomnasHam). Further work is in hand to assist the Indonesian Legal Aid Foundation (LBH) in the development of their computer system; £25,000 budgeted for so far on computer projects. A substantial collection of books on good governance, democracy and public administration was recently presented to KomnasHam; cost £2,000.

Twenty scholarships for studies relating to human rights and good governance will be awarded this year under the Chevening Scholarship Scheme; estimated cost £300,000. We have identified three Indonesians working in areas related to human rights to attend the Oxford University Course on International Human Rights Law starting this July; estimated cost £14,000. Training under the current Government's police training initiative has not yet begun; costs will be subject to a needs assessment visit which is due to take place shortly. This will take account of the circumstances prevailing at the time.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the results of his Department's provision of training for Indonesian police officers; and what is the estimated cost to his Department. [41662]

Mr. Fatchett: Training under the current Government's police training initiative has not yet begun. A needs assessment visit to Indonesia will take place shortly. This will take account of the circumstances prevailing at the time. An estimate of the cost of this training will be easier to make in the light of the conclusions of this visit.

Classified Information

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Mr. Mathieson has access to classified information within his Department. [42095]

Mr. Robin Cook: My letter of appointment to Mr. Mathieson states that I do not envisage him having access to classified papers; and that he is required to exercise care in the use of official information acquired in the course of his duties and not to disclose without my prior authorisation information which is held in confidence.

East Timor

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those who will be present on the Troika mission to East Timor on 6 to 10 June; and if their report will be made public. [41916]

Mr. Fatchett: HM Ambassador in Jakarta will be accompanied by the Austrian Ambassador, the Netherlands Ambassador (representing Luxembourg), the Commission Representative in Jakarta and a member of the EU Council Secretariat. Their report will be submitted to the General Affairs Council for consideration.

Papers and Correspondence

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the average time taken by him to sign off (a) policy papers and (b) correspondence from the date they are first submitted. [41845]

Mr. Robin Cook: I deal with policy papers and correspondence as soon as practicable. Whether that is as soon as the documents are submitted, or shortly thereafter, depends on my other commitments, including absence from the office overseas.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what papers, telegrams and correspondence submitted to him by his Department and placed in his red boxes are currently awaiting a decision after a period of two weeks. [41822]

Mr. Robin Cook: None.

Arms Exports

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will draw up and publish an ethical code concerning arms exports, with particular reference to UN resolutions. [41834]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I refer to the answer my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary gave my hon. Friend the Member for East Ham (Mr. Timms) on 28 July 1997, Official Report, columns 26–29, announcing the criteria to be used when considering licence applications for the export of conventional arms. These criteria specify that an export licence should be refused if approval would be inconsistent with the UK's international obligations and commitments to enforce UN arms embargoes.

The UK takes seriously its obligations to implement UN Arms Embargoes and expects other countries to do the same. Within the EU, we are working towards an EU Code of Conduct that will set high common standards for arms exports from all EU Member States. The latest draft of the Code contains similar wording on Member States' international obligations and the commitments to enforce UN arms embargoes.

HEALTH

Cosmetic Surgery

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received concerning the private sector cosmetic surgery industry. [23005]

Mr. Boateng: Since 1 May 1997 we have received 14 letters and hon. Members have asked ten Parliamentary Questions relating to private cosmetic surgery.

Nurses

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many vacancies for qualified nurses are currently notified (a) in England and (b) in the constituency of North Shropshire; [29969]

(2) how many people are currently undertaking training for nursing qualifications. [29975]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested on training is in the table. Information on vacancies for qualified nurses is not collected centrally.

Contraceptive Pills

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women used the contraceptive pill in each year since 1993. [32089]

Ms Jowell: The information is not available in the format requested. The General Household Survey (GHS) conducted by the Office for National Statistics estimated that in 1993 and 1995, 25 per cent. of women aged 16 to 49 in Great Britain used the contraceptive pill. Information is not available for the other years requested because the GHS only asked the specific question on contraception in 1993 and 1995.

Cancer Services

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he has taken to implement the recommendations of the Calman report on the provision of cancer services in the NHS (a) nationally and (b) in the North Thames region; and if he will make a statement. [38377]

Mr. Boateng: We remain committed to improving cancer care, and achievement of the cancer targets within The New NHS and Our Healthier Nation will be set firmly within the ongoing implementation of the Calman/Hine recommendations. Nationally, a great deal of work has already been undertaken to agree the provision and standard of cancer services at each individual potential cancer centre or cancer unit. To support the implementation, commissioning guidance is being produced on the commoner cancers to help health authorities, hospitals, primary care and community services focus on areas most likely to make a difference to the outcomes of treatment. The first guidance document "Improving Outcomes in Breast Cancer" was published in July 1996. The second "Improving Outcomes in Colorectal Cancer" was published on 24 November 1997. Guidance on lung cancer and the gynaecological cancers is planned for 1998–99.

In the North Thames region, the majority of health authorities have focused initially on breast cancer services and have agreed standards of care for their cancer units based on the best guidance. Progress has also been made on the designation of those units that will provide services for colorectal, lung and gynaecological cancers.

Designation status for cancer centres was agreed after a process of review jointly by clusters of relevant health authorities using standards drawn from the Calman/Hine report and agreed by all the health authorities. This process resulted in five centres being designated by November 1997. The centres are located at the following trusts: the Hammersmith Hospitals, Mount Vernon and Watford, the Royal London Hospitals/Havering Hospitals (joint centre), Southend Health Care, and the University College London Hospitals/Royal Free Hampstead (joint centre). A further two aspiring centres are exploring how they could collaborate with other trusts to strengthen their position in the cancer network. All the designated centres were required to produce action plans to set out how they would address issues and service gaps identified during the designation process and these are being closely monitored by the health authorities.

The designated centres are starting work on protocols of care for each cancer. Health authorities and trusts across the Region have also developed a pan-regional audit process for breast cancer so that feedback can be given to providers on their comparative performance against key standards. A similar audit is being developed for colorectal cancer.

Departmental Reviews

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the costs of each of the reviews currently in progress in his Department; when the reviews are expected to report; and if he will make a statement. [40890]

Ms Jowell: Information requested about the reviews currently in progress in the Department is set out in the table.

Primary Care Groups

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the new primary care commissioning groups will be able to use their budgets to purchase specialist services from independent providers. [41542]

Mr. Milburn: Existing guidance to the National Health Service, issued for the 1998–99 commissioning round, is that health authorities and NHS trusts should explore the scope to make maximum cost-effective use of local NHS capacity before contemplating recourse to private sector hospital provision. Where care is nonetheless commissioned from private hospitals, the reasons must be reported to the Regional Office of the NHS Executive.

In the White Paper The New NHS we promised to introduce new arrangements for commissioning specialised services for 1 April 1999. We have issued a draft guidance document for wide consultation, with responses due by 1 June 1998. Further guidance on Primary Care Groups will be issued in due course.

Incontinence

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in respect of how many people Dudley Health Authority currently provides continence services; and what budget it has allocated to continence care in real terms in each year since 1990–91. [41750]

Mr. Milburn: This information is not routinely collected by the Department, but local information provided shows that the number of Dudley Health Authority residents currently provided with incontinence pads and other similar methods is 3,021.

Expenditure from 1992–93 to 1998–99 is as follows:

1997–98	[1]503
1996–97	407
1995–96	357
1994–95	345
1992–93	242

[1] Includes £30,000 winter pressures money

Note:
It is not possible to obtain data prior to 1992–93

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what funding his Department has given to voluntary organisations providing support for incontinent people in each year since 1990–91; [41912]

(2) what research his Department has undertaken into the number of incontinent people in the UK seeking advice and products outside the NHS; [41911]

(3) when the NHS will issue national guidance on the treatment of incontinence. [41913]

Mr. Milburn: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Belfast, South (Rev. Martin Smyth) on 5 May 1998, Official Report, column 349.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have been on waiting lists in (a) Winchester and (b) North and Mid Hampshire for continence pads from the NHS for more than (a) one month, (b) three months and (c) six months. [41910]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Ms Frances Sheldon, Chairman of North and Mid Hampshire Health Authority, for this information.

Ambulances

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to reply to the question from the hon. Member for Northavon tabled on 11 March 1998 [34562] regarding ambulance vehicle ages. [42307]

Mr. Milburn: I replied to the hon. Member on 13 May 1998.

EC Health Council

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the outcome of the EC Health Council meeting on 30 April. [42426]

Ms Jowell: I chaired the meeting of the European Community Health Council on 30 April in Luxembourg, on behalf of the United Kingdom Presidency of the European Union.

In an open debate on the future framework for action in the field of public health, the Council explored three strands for future action: improving information for the development of public health; reacting rapidly to threats to health; and tackling the determinants of health through health promotion and disease prevention. The Council also discussed the limitations of the present disparate funding programmes, and the importance of improved efforts to ensure that health protection requirements form a constituent part of other Community policies. The Council agreed common positions on the proposed programmes of Community action on rare diseases and on pollution-related diseases. Agreement was also reached on a Council Recommendation on the suitability of blood and plasma donors and the screening of donated blood. The Council agreed conclusions on Transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathies, and on the integration of health protection requirements in Community policies. Progress was noted on the Community's role in combating tobacco consumption, on the Commission proposal for a programme of action on injury prevention, and on the European Union-United States Task Force on communicable diseases.

NHS Employees (Health)

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to tackle ill-health among NHS employees; and if he will make a statement. [41850]

Mr. Milburn: We are committed to improving the health, safety and welfare of National Health Service staff. Our priorities are to reduce sick absence, organisational stress, accidents and violence and to increase staff control over the hours they work.

Action being taken includes: the publication on 18 May of new guidance on "The Management of Health, Safety and Welfare Issues for NHS Staff"; the production of a model for the management of organisational stress; the organisation of 8 health and safety roadshows to be held in the autumn as a forum for the exchange of good practice; research to identify good practice examples of ways in which violence against staff working in the community can be reduced, for publication in the summer; and an evaluation of self-rostering pilots to be published later this year.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the sickness absence levels for each grade of staff in (a) Warrington Hospital NHS Trust and (b)Warrington CHC Trust for each of the past five years. [41855]

Mr. Milburn: This information can be obtained from the two National Health Service trusts. Therefore my hon. Friend may wish to contact Mr. Norman Banner, Chairman of Warrington Hospitals NHS Trust and Mr. John Gartside, Chairman of Warrington Community NHS Trust for further information.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the relative incidence of ill-health among the NHS workforce compared to levels in other occupations; and if he will make a statement. [41853]

Mr. Milburn: Statistics of the incidence of ill-health among the National Health Service workforce are not currently collected centrally, but we are looking at the feasibility of doing this. Guidance has been issued to help NHS managers locally to collect and act upon sickness absence data.

Research and Development

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the amounts of research and development support funding allocation to each NHS trust in the North West Region for each of the past five years. [41849]

Ms Jowell: The table lists the research and development support funding to National Health Service trusts in the north west region.

A/B/C—Research element of "Service Increment for Teaching and Research" (SIFTR). Increases year on year due to a number of factors including additional funding made available and the incorporation of capital charges.

D—Results of Culyer Declaration of actual R&D costs in 1996–97 uplifted by inflation. N.B. Difference between R&D Allocation in 1996/97 and 1997/98 was transferred from purchaser baslines to provide "steady-state" funding to providers for 1997/98.

E—Result of first competitive bidding round of the New Funding System.

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Drugs

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Council how many and what percentage of those aged under 25 years she estimates have used (a) cannabis, (b) ecstasy, (c) heroin and (d) cocaine. [41611]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: The British Crime Survey gives estimates of drug use among people aged 16 to 24 living in private households in England and Wales. The most recent estimates are from the 1996 survey, when 39 per cent. of people in this age group said they had used cannabis at some time. 11 per cent. had used ecstasy; 1 per cent. had used heroin; and 4 per cent. had used cocaine.

The estimates of heroin, cocaine and ecstasy use should be treated with great caution, partly because they are subject to very large sampling error, and partly because a household survey such as the BCS is likely to under-represent current users.

The table gives the range, together with the mid-point estimate. The estimates for cannabis use are fairly precise, while those for the other drugs are not.

Number of 16 to 24 year olds using named drugs (95 per cent. confidence intervals)

Thousand

Named drugs	Lower estimate	Higher estimate	Mid-point
Cannabis: ever used	2,100	2,400	2,300
Ecstasy: ever used	540	770	650
Cocaine: ever used	170	320	240
Heroin: ever used	30	110	60

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Council what estimate she has made of the average age of those in the United Kingdom first using (a) cannabis, (b) ecstacy, (c) heroin and (d) cocaine. [41610]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: This information is not currently available. However, one of the performance indicators set out in the new Government drugs strategy, "Tackling Drugs to Build a Better Britain" is "to delay age of first use of illegal drugs".

During this year we will commission research to determine baseline indicators of current age of first use of illegal drugs. The UK Anti-Drugs Coordinator's first Annual Report and Plan of Action, to be published in March, will then set out the targets towards which we will be working.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Council what assessment she has made of the impact on ecstasy use of the Sorted campaign. [41613]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: The 'Sorted' anti-drugs campaign was not a Government campaign and has not to our knowledge been evaluated.

DEFENCE

Gulf War Veterans

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on fertility levels among service men who participated in the Gulf War. [41502]

Dr. Reid: The question of whether service in the Gulf has affected the fertility of male Gulf veterans is being addressed as part of a MOD-funded epidemiological study currently being conducted by a team led by Dr. Patricia Doyle of the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine. This study is examining the reproductive health of Gulf veterans, both male and female, and the health of their children. Dr. Doyle's team will shortly begin sending out questionnaires for the main phase of this study to all Gulf veterans and to a control group of Service personnel who did not deploy to the Gulf. We expect that results will begin to emerge from this study by mid-2000.

NATO Expansion

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from serving and retired military personnel cautioning against the expansion of NATO to include Poland, Hungary and the Czech Republic. [41587]

Mr. George Robertson: I and other Ministers regularly receive representations relating to European security issues from individuals and groups in all walks of life, expressing a variety of views. I am confident that the accession to NATO of the Czech Republic, Hungary and Poland is in the best interests of the Alliance and of European security as a whole.

Visiting Forces

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what agreements are in place in respect of the cost of, and timetable for, removal of polluted matter from RAF bases, where that matter can reasonably be assumed to have been caused by visiting US forces. [41777]

Dr. Reid: In the case of returned sites, under the terms of the confidential UK/US bilateral cost sharing arrangement, responsibility lies with the Ministry of Defence for rectifying any contamination caused by defence activities which may subsequently be discovered. United States Visiting Forces are expected to observe and abide by environmental protection standards at least equal to UK legislative requirements. If environmental pollution were discovered at a base made available to the United States Visiting Forces, they would normally be responsible for ensuring that the appropriate remedial action was carried out. The timescales for the removal of polluted matter would have to be set on a case by case basis.

RAF Menwith Hill

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the new space based infra-red system under construction at RAF Menwith Hill will be operated by US forces personnel. [41779]

Dr. Reid: I confirm that the system will be operated by US personnel.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total cost of employing Ministry of Defence Police at RAF Menwith Hill in the most recent year for which figures are available; and what proportion of the cost was met by (a) his Department and (b) the US Government. [41776]

Dr. Reid: The Ministry of Defence Police is a civilian police force constituted under statute by the Ministry of Defence Police Act 1987. The Chief Constable of the Ministry of Defence Police is independent of Ministerial, Departmental and political influence in the exercise of his constabulary powers. The total cost of policing RAF Menwith Hill for financial year 1997–98 was £1,915,122 of which £1,762,263 was recovered from the US Government. The US Government refund my Department all Ministry of Defence Police costs, other than overtime occasioned by the activities of protesters, in respect of RAF Menwith Hill.

Holy Loch

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total estimated cost of the operation to remove debris and waste from Holy Loch. [41778]

Mr. Spellar: £5m.

Strategic Defence Review (Cadets)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received in respect of the impact on cadet services of the Strategic Defence Review. [41670]

Dr. Reid: A number of inquiries have been received by my Department concerning the possible impact of the Strategic Defence Review on the Cadet Forces. No decisions have yet been taken on the Strategic Defence Review but the Government fully recognise the contribution made by the Cadet Forces to national life, and Defence Ministers have made their support for the cadets clear on several occasions.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Brown-field Sites

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to ensure there are no procedural delays in the contracting of decontaminated brown-field land sites. [39497]

Angela Eagle: Contractual arrangements are a matter for the parties concerned and it is their responsibility to take account of compliance with any regulatory requirements in their project planning. In cases where a waste management licence is required for the remediation of contaminated land, the effect of section 36(9) of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 is to provide the Environment Agency with a basic period of four months in which to carry out statutory consultations and to determine an application. The Environment Agency is committed to providing an efficient and effective service and its Customer Charter includes the following commitment:

"We will make decisions on applications for waste licences within four months of receiving a full filled-in application, with all supporting information. For example, we may need proof of planning permission and financial guarantees. We will decide on any modifications to licences within two months of receipt and will deal with licences you send back to us within three months of receiving them. Complicated cases may take longer and we will agree upon a period when we will get back to you."

Air Traffic Control

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the capacity of NATS in terms of aircraft movements per hour over all of the peak hours at (a) City, (b) Southend and (c) Biggin Hill airports; and on what evidence this estimate was based. [39769]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I understand that discussions between National Air Traffic Services Limited and the airport operators are on-going. I have asked the Chairman of the Civil Aviation Authority to write to the hon. Gentleman on their completion.

Channel Tunnel

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each year of its operation the number of incidents where drivers of trains using the Channel Tunnel have passed signals at red, broken down by (a) Eurostar, (b) freight and (c) car shuttle services. [41558]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The information requested is as follows:

Signals passed at red

(a) Eurostar	2	0	0
(b) Freight	0	0	1
(c) Car shuttle	3	6	6

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each year of its operation the number of incidents where trains have been routed on to tracks where works were in progress in the Channel Tunnel. [41565]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The information requested is as follows:

Trains routed on to tracks where works were in progress

Year	Number of incidents

All these incidents occurred on tracks within terminals.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each year of its operation the number of incidents involving staff working without protection on tracks in or approaching the Channel Tunnel. [41561]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The information requested is as follows:

Staff working without protection on tracks in or approaching the Channel Tunnel

Year	Number of staff

Nuclear Deterrence

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his oral answer of 8 April 1998, Official Report, column 349, on nuclear deterrence, on what basis he asserted that the question asked by the hon. Member for New Forest, East was not truthful; and for what reasons he has not replied to the letter from the hon. Member for New Forest, East on this matter. [41661]

Mr. Prescott: My reply to the hon. Gentleman on 8 April 1998, Official Report, column 349, was based on the following:

> I do not consider it "deplorable" to support unilateral nuclear disarmament
> I have no difficulty in the approval of nuclear deterrence > neither I nor my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has ever emulated "evasive and slippery techniques".

The hon. Gentleman should also be aware that CND supported unilateral and multilateral disarmament.

Regional Development Agencies

Sir Raymond Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if ministerial advisers are eligible for consideration as members of the proposed regional development agencies; and what sources of advisers Ministers are using in respect of such appointments. [41713]

Mr. Caborn: Civil servants, and special advisers holding temporary Civil Service status, are not eligible to be considered for membership of Regional Development Agency Boards. The selection process will be subject to independent scrutiny as required by the Commissioner for Public Appointments.

Lorries

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if the United Kingdom's obligations to allow 40 tonne lorries onto the roads after 1 January 1999 apply to lorries other than those involved in carrying international traffic; [41900]

(2) what plans he has to allow 44 tonne lorries onto United Kingdom roads; [41899]

(3) if he will ensure that drivers of 40 tonne lorries will be required to demonstrate to enforcement officers that they are engaged in an international journey by producing appropriate documentation. [41901]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The obligation to allow 40 tonne, 5 axle lorries on UK roads from 1 January 1999 applies only to international movements. We are considering whether or not 40 tonne vehicles should also be allowed for domestic movements and will announce the outcome in the White Paper on Integrated Transport. Enforcement issues will be taken into account in reaching our decision. 44 tonne, 6 axle vehicles have been allowed in the UK since 1994 for certain road/rail movements. We are considering whether or not to allow any wider use of these vehicles and will announce the outcome in the White Paper on Integrated Transport.

Refrigeration

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to encourage the development of sustainable refrigeration technologies. [41904]

Angela Eagle: The DETR, through its Energy Efficiency Best Practice Programme, encourages the development of sustainable refrigeration technologies by the dissemination of independent, authoritative information such as Guides and Case Study material, on energy efficiency best practice. Also, through the future element of the Programme, it is able to offer financial assistance to those companies who are interested in researching and developing the energy efficiency technologies and techniques of the future.

There are other programmes under which proposals of this type could be considered, for example LINK, SMART, and research funding through the relevant Research Councils. Consideration is also given to such technologies under the Partners in Technology scheme.

The Government also encourage the refrigeration industry to sign up to the declaration of intent which it has agreed with the industry. This discourages the use of hydrofluorocarbons (HFCs) for any application where a risk of high emissions exists, by promoting the use of safe, reasonably practical, environmentally acceptable and energy efficient alternatives where available.

Hydrofluorocarbons

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to implement the recommendations of the 4th report of the British Government Panel on Sustainable Development published in February in respect of the use of hydrofluorocarbons. [41903]

Angela Eagle: The Government welcome the Fourth Annual Report of the Government Panel on Sustainable Development. The Panel's recommendations in respect of the use of hydrofluorocarbons are currently being considered along with the Panel's other recommendations and the Government aim to publish their response shortly.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each local authority (a) the amount collected as national non-domestic business rates, (b) the amount paid back to the local authority via Government grant and (c) the net gain or loss in the current financial year. [41906]

Ms Armstrong: I have today placed in the Library of the House a table showing (a) the amounts calculated by English billing authorities as their provisional contribution to the non-domestic rates pool for 1998–99, and (b) the amounts of redistributed non-domestic rates payable to each receiving authority in England for 1998–99.

The two amounts cannot be compared directly because (i) contributions to the non-domestic rates pool are made by billing authorities (eg London boroughs and district councils), whereas redistributed non-domestic rates are paid to all receiving authorities (including preceptors such as county councils and police authorities); (ii) the total redistributed from the pool includes amounts other than those received from billing authorities—ie payments in lieu of rates from Crown properties, payments from properties on the Central List, and Exchequer contributions to compensate the pool for income forgone as a result of transitional schemes.

Road Traffic Reduction Act

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress by local authorities towards implementing the provisions of the Road Traffic Reduction Act 1997. [41949]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Guidance to local authorities on implementing the provisions of the Road Traffic Reduction Act 1997 was issued in draft on 15 January for public consultation. The consultation closed on 20 April, and we are now considering the responses received with a view to issuing the final version of the guidance later this year.

Local authorities will need to take account of this guidance in deciding how they intend to meet their duties under the Act. However, they have been asked to report on the broad approach they envisage taking, and the role they see for traffic reduction targets in their area, as part of their bids for Transport Policies and Programme funding, to be submitted by 31 July 1998.

Liquefied Petroleum Gas

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review standard spending assessment formulae with a view to including incentives for local authorities to use vehicles which use liquid petroleum gas. [41950]

Angela Eagle: Proposals for changing standard spending assessment (SSA) formulae should be brought to the SSA Sub-Group of the Settlement Working Group, where possible changes to formulae are discussed by central and local government representatives. It should be noted, however, that SSAs are a measure of what an authority would need to spend in order to provide a similar level of service as other authorities, taking account of its demographic, social, economic and geographical characteristics. SSAs are not intended to provide incentives for local authorities to behave in any particular way. We seek to achieve this by using measures which do not depend upon the policies of local authorities.

A number of local authorities have benefited from grants from the Energy Saving Trust towards the purchase of vehicles which use liquefied petroleum gas and other alternative fuels. These grants, which are made through the Trust's Powershift programme, are funded by my Department.

Air Pollution

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list those local authorities which have adopted strategies to reduce air pollution by (a) five per cent., (b) 10 per cent., (c) 15 per cent., (d) 20 per cent. and (e) over 20 per cent. [41951]

Angela Eagle: This information is not held centrally. Under the new Local Air Quality Management (LAQM) system, which came into effect at the end of December 1997, district and unitary local authorities are currently reviewing the quality of the air within their area assessing it against statutory objectives for seven key pollutants. These objectives are based on those in the UK National Air Quality Strategy.

Localities must be designated Air Quality Management Areas where the review and assessment show that national measures will not ensure the objectives are achieved by the end of 2005. The relevant local authority must then prepare an action plan in pursuit of the objective(s).

The LAQM guidance which we have published to assist local authorities is listed in Environment Circular 15/97 (Welsh Office Circular 63/97) and is available in the Library.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in what circumstances it is permitted to proceed with road-widening schemes where the consequential PM10 pollution levels exceed 50 microgrammes per cubic metre of air as a 24-hour running average; and if he will make a statement. [41791]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 13 May 1998]: The objectives contained in the National Air Quality Strategy for achievement for 2005, including the one for PM10 would be taken into account in the appraisal of a proposed road scheme against the Government's five criteria of integration, accessibility, environment, economy and safety.

Where an exceedence of a National Air Quality Strategy objective is forecast, whether or not as a consequence of the scheme proceeding, the local authority would be required to declare an air quality management area covering the area of anticipated exceedance. An action plan would then have to be prepared by the local authority, in consultation with the highways authorities, the Environment Agency and other stakeholders. The action plan would identify a range of measures, to be applied either locally or further afield, aimed at securing the achievement of the objectives throughout the air quality management area. Such measures might include enhanced traffic management, the application of more stringent emission limits to industrial processes or increased domestic smoke control.

Water Quality

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimates his Department has evaluated from (a) North West Water and (b) Ofwat of (i) the total cost and (ii) the impact of average annual household bills in the period 2000 to 2005 of meeting EU bathing water standards on the Fylde coast. [42037]

Angela Eagle: The open letter of 30 April from the Director General of Water Services, "Setting the quality framework", includes assessments of the costs of meeting a wide range of potential obligations, including measures under EU Directives, based both on cost estimates provided by companies and on the preliminary challenge of that information by OFWAT. The letter expresses those costs both as total capital costs and as illustrative impacts on average household bills.

The Environment Agency and North West Water estimated a cost of £100 million for their plans, announced in February this year, for work in the Fylde coast area to improve compliance with Directive bathing water standards. My Department, in consultation with OFWAT, is now considering the plans, their cost and the effect on customer bills.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance he will be giving the Director General of Water Services under the periodic review of water price limits to apply from 1 April 2000, on (a) the scope for water companies to transfer the costs of meeting mandatory EU bathing water standards onto their customers and (b) the Government's priorities for improvements in water and environmental quality. [42035]

Angela Eagle: In response to the open letter of 30 April from the Director General of Water Services ("Setting the quality framework", a copy of which is in the library), my right hon. Friends the Deputy Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for Wales will publish in the summer their guidance on the environmental obligations which they will expect the water and sewerage companies to meet, including their EU obligations. This guidance will take into account the advice of the Environment Agency and the views of other interested persons, and will reflect the Government's priorities for improvements in water quality and the water environment. It will then be for the Director General, in setting price limits, to ensure that companies are able to meet these obligations.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what assessment he has made of North West Water's record in meeting mandatory EU bathing water standards along the Fylde coast; and what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of their recent bathing water improvement scheme in this area; [42034]

(2) what undertakings he has received from North West Water that the latest investment programme to improve bathing water quality along the Fylde coast will result in compliance with EU Directive standards; and what reports he has received from the Environment Agency on this matter. [42054]

Angela Eagle: My right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment announced the 1997 bathing water quality results in December and said that the results in the North West were especially poor and that this was particularly disappointing given that major bathing water improvement schemes had been completed in the area. In February this year, the Environment Agency and North West Water announced plans for further work in the Fylde coast area which they regard as necessary to improve compliance with the Directive standards. My Department has received a detailed report from the Environment Agency on these measures and the progress made.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what reports he has received from the Director General of Water Services, under part of the periodic review of water price limits for the period 2000 to 2005, on the scope for further improvements in efficiency by North West Water to offset the cost of meeting EU bathing water standards on the Fylde coast. [42036]

Angela Eagle: The Director General has outlined his proposed approach to assessing the efficiency of the water companies at the next periodic review in "Assessing the scope for future improvements in water companies' efficiency—a technical paper" published in April 1998, a copy of which is in the Library.

Fuel Poverty Working Group

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects the Fuel Poverty Working Group to report its findings; what plans he has to make the group's conclusions publicly available; and what opportunity there will be for external agencies and individuals to respond to the group's findings. [41907]

Angela Eagle: The inter-departmental group of officials is providing internal analysis and policy options for Ministers, and it is not proposed to make its findings and recommendations public. However, I launched a national debate on this subject in my speech on 14 May to the National Right to Fuel Campaign's conference on fuel poverty and invited interested parties to contribute. We will consult on any proposals for developing policies and programmes for tackling fuel poverty which flow from this process.

London Government

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the Government will legislate to provide in the election for the Mayor of London for the option of voting for "none of the above" candidates and for a further round of nominations and voting, if those voting in that way constitute the largest vote. [41896]

Mr. Raynsford: No.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his policy towards the proportion of the total London electorate required to vote in the elections for a mayor and assembly for the result to be binding. [41898]

Mr. Raynsford: The results of elections for the Mayor and Assembly will be binding irrespective of turnout, as is the case for all parliamentary, European and local government elections.

Sellafield

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress in reducing discharge into the sea from nuclear installations at Sellafield. [42259]

Angela Eagle: The Environment Agency have recently completed a two month public consultation into applications for variations to the discharge authorisations for the Sellafield site and are now considering the responses received. The Government have reiterated to the Environment Agency that they wish to see progressive reductions in discharges and discharge limits at Sellafield. There have been requests for Ministers to 'call-in' these applications and decide the matter for themselves and these requests are being considered.

Insulin-dependent Drivers

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for what reasons the British Government do not allow in special circumstances the exemption of insulin-dependent drivers from the EU Driving Licence Directive as provided for under the Directive. [41372]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 14 May 1998]: The Directive provides for licences to be issued to or renewed for those whose diabetes is treated by insulin for driving passenger-carrying and goods vehicles (minibuses, medium-sized lorries, buses, coaches and large goods vehicles) "only in very exceptional cases", and subject to further conditions. The Secretary of State's Honorary Advisory Panel on Diabetes and Driving has hitherto advised that, in their opinion, there are no exceptional cases. That is because treatment by insulin can lead to hypoglycaemic attacks which may occur suddenly and unpredictably, and which can lead to loss of consciousness without warning. A number of collapses at the wheel have been found to be associated with insulin treatment. UK legislation has therefore reflected the Panel's advice. However, in the light of evidence from the British Diabetic Association and other which claims that modern treatment and control methods minimise the risks, the Advisory Panel have, at the request of Ministers, been re-examining the issues in respect of the driving of minibuses and medium-sized lorries. The outcome of that re-examination will be made public shortly.

Elections (Purley)

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish the percentage turnouts in each of the polling districts in Purley, Croydon, for (a) 1994 and (b) 1998. [42237]

Ms Armstrong: A record of local election returns is not kept centrally by any Government Department. Inquiries relating to the turnout in an individual local authority should be directed to the Returning Officer for that authority.

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the experimental polling station location at Tesco's in Purley, Croydon. [42238]

Ms Armstrong: Improving turnout in local elections is an important part of the Government's modernising local government agenda. The London Borough of Croydon should be congratulated on their efforts to make voting more convenient. We will be looking at the lessons from Croydon's initiative, as well as the responses to our consultation papers as we work up our Local Government White Paper to be published this Summer.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress has been made in securing the future of the channel rail link; and if he will make a statement. [42137]

Ms Glenda Jackson: In his answer of 27 March 1998, Official Report, columns 295–96, to my hon. Friend the Member for East Ham (Mr. Timms), my right hon. Friend said that the cure period under the CTRL Development Agreement within which London and Continental Railways (LCR) could bring forward their improved proposals to the Government had been extended to 29 May 1998. Discussions with LCR are continuing and we await their final proposals. My right hon. Friend will make a statement in due course.

London Underground

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the different options for restructuring London Underground put forward by London Transport; and if he will make a statement. [42363]

Ms Glenda Jackson: London Transport presented their evaluation of options for the future of London Underground to the Deputy Prime Minister in September 1997. In the following months, there were numerous meetings, with different Departments, at Ministerial and official level, with LT and their advisers at which all the issues were debated. We fully considered London Transport's proposals in reaching our decisions on a Public/Private Partnership.

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of who will be liable in the case of a serious infrastructure failure on London Underground after concessions for managing the infrastructure of London Underground have been awarded to private companies; and if he will make a statement. [42365]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Under our proposals, the private sector will be responsible for financing, maintaining and modernising the Underground's infrastructure. The contractor, or contractors, will be subject to a tough performance regime with penalties for failure or poor performance. We will be working with London Transport and expert advisers to establish the details of the division of specific risks and liabilities between the public sector operating company and infrastructure contractor(s).

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the potential impact on London Underground fares of a fall in net revenues after concessions for managing the infrastructure of London Underground have been awarded to private companies; and if he will make a statement. [42364]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government's financial advisers looked at a range of assumptions about passenger revenues. Their analysis showed that the option announced by the Deputy Prime Minister on 20 March 1998, Official Report, columns 1539–56, is robust against a fall in revenues, and that substantial fare increases would therefore not be necessary to pay infrastructure contractors or meet the operating costs of the London Underground operating company. Once the GLA is established, London Underground fares will be a matter for the Mayor.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what controls there will be on the charges contractors can make to London Underground for use of track, signals and stations under his proposals; what estimate he has made of the likely impact on fares; and if he will make a statement. [42394]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The infrastructure contractor, or contractors, will be responsible for financing, maintaining and modernising the Underground's infrastructure, and will be paid by London Underground according to their contract. We will be working with London Transport and expert advisers to establish the details of the contractual payment mechanism, which will be based on paying the contractor according to performance.

There is no reason to expect large increases in fares, which, once the GLA is established, will be a matter for the Mayor.

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the transitional costs and ongoing costs of (a) keeping London Underground in the public sector,

(b) privatising the whole of London Underground as a single unit and (c) creating a number of concessions to take over the London Underground infrastructure; and if he will make a statement. [42362]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government's financial advisers made assessments of the transitional and ongoing costs of keeping London Underground in the public sector, and of awarding a contract, or contracts to finance, maintain and modernise the Underground's infrastructure. These assessments, along with other important factors such as safety, were fully considered by the Government in reaching our decision on a Public/Private partnership for London Underground. The financial comparisons showed that the Government's preferred option is likely to represent better value for money than retaining London Underground in its current form. No assessment was made of privatising the Underground, which was ruled out in the Manifesto.

Minibus Drivers (Medical Tests)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to compensate car licence holders over the age of 70 years for the fee of £55 for the medical test which is required to enable them to drive minibuses. [41854]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 14 May 1998]: It is not the Government's practice to reimburse or compensate for the cost of medical examinations required for obtaining or renewing a driving licence, and we have no plans to do so for licence holders over the age of 70 years who wish to drive minibuses.

Priority Estates Project (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of the Priority Estates Project in Coventry. [41918]

Mr. Caborn: I am not aware of any Priority Estates Project in Coventry. If the question is a reference to the Willenhall Estate in Coventry then I understand that satisfactory progress is being made in its refurbishment through Estate Action and English Partnerships and private sector investment.

Planning Applications

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many planning applications were made in England in each year from 1992 to 1997. [42152]

Mr. Raynsford: The number of applications for planning permission and other related consents in England is shown in the table. Figures include 'county matters' applications, which are predominantly concerned with minerals extraction and waste disposal developments.

Year	All applications received (thousand)
1992	473
1993	474
1994	485
1995	459
1997	496

More detailed information is published quarterly by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions in its Statistics of Planning Applications Information Bulletin. Copies are available in the House of Commons library.

LTS Rail

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what are the terms of the franchise granted to LTS Rail in respect of the times for the opening of booking offices. [42414]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The franchise agreement requires LTS Rail to comply with the terms of the Ticketing and Settlement Agreement (TSA), which is overseen by the Rail Regulator. The TSA sets out the ticket office opening hours which each operator has agreed to as a signatory to the agreement. These hours may be varied only with the approval of the Rail Regulator (any short-term issues affecting station opening, such as staff shortage, are for the operator to manage in the light of its other business commitments). The table shows the ticket office opening hours set out in the TSA for stations managed by LTS Rail.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many sites of special scientific interest there were in England on 31 March; and what was their total area in hectares. [42441]

Angela Eagle: At 31 March, there were 3,987 Sites of Special Scientific Interest in England covering 967,365 hectares.

Mobile Homes

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he proposes to take on pitch fees for owners of mobile homes. [42361]

Mr. Raynsford: My Department has established a working party to examine a number of concerns facing mobile home residents, including pitch fees. It comprises representatives from national residents' groups, the two main trade associations, local authorities and officials from my Department. The group is aiming to present its recommendations to Ministers by Spring 1999.

WALES

Agricultural Grants Department

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the availability of Welsh speakers in Cardiff with suitable qualifications to staff a centralised agricultural grants department. [40912]

Mr. Ron Davies: On 16 March 1998, Official Report, column 459, I announced my plans to engage consultants for a study to assess the options for securing improved administration of Common Agriculture Policy payments in Wales.

At this stage, the consultants have been asked to consider all feasible options. These could include options for centralising the service, for transferring responsibility for administering payments to MAFF or the Intervention Board, or for developing the service using the existing office structure.

All options will be assessed in terms of the costs, benefits and risks they represent for the Welsh Office, including their ability to deliver a local bilingual service to farmers.

60 per cent. of Welsh Office staff who have expressed an ability in the use of the Welsh language are Cardiff-based.

Inward Investment

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many times he has met the Wales TUC to discuss (a) inward investment and (b) the prospects for industry in Wales. [41647]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friend and I are in frequent touch with the Wales TUC and constituent unions on a wide variety of issues and both attended the Wales TUC conference last month.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last met the CBI to discuss (a) inward investment and (b) the prospects for industry in Wales. [41646]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friend has not met the CBI. However, I have met them on several occasions, most recently on 27 April. Welsh Office officials are also in regular contact with the CBI on a wide variety of issues.

Local Government Boundaries

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many responses from Wrexham community and town councils to his letter of consultation on the proposed boundary review of Llangollen dated 22 August 1997 he had received prior to the reminder letter sent from his Office on 2 October to Denbighshire town and community councils extending the deadline for replies to 18 October 1997; [41793]

(2) how many responses from Denbighshire community and town councils to his letter of consultation on the proposed boundary review of Llangollen dated 22 August 1997 he had received prior to the reminder letter sent from his office on 2 October 1997 extending the deadline to 18 October. [41795]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Prior to 2 October 1997, 4 responses were received from community and town councils in Wrexham and 8 from those in Denbighshire.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what criteria he uses to establish the need to request a review of local government boundaries. [41796]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Under section 54(1) of the Local Government Act 1972, when making proposals to the Secretary of State, the Local Government Boundary Commission needs to be able to demonstrate that any changes are judged by the Commission to be desirable in the interests of effective and convenient local government.

Consequently, the Secretary of State, in considering whether to request a review, will also have regard to any relevant information that could suggest that the existing boundary may no longer provide for effective and convenient local government.

The Secretary of State would give careful consideration to the nature and level of representations from local councils, other elected representatives and the community at large.

Given the diversity of local government areas, each request would be considered on its merit.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales for what reasons no letter of reminder was sent to community councils in the Wrexham area following his request to them for their views on the boundary review of Llangollen and Llantysilio wards on 22 August 1997. [41794]

Mr. Win Griffiths: On 22 August 1997, consultation letters on the proposed boundary review were sent to all local councils in both counties.

On 28 September 1997, the Denbighshire Association of Local Councils sought an extension of the time allocated for responding to the consultation as it had information that the letter of 22 August had not reached all councils in the country. Community councils in that area were therefore given a further 2 weeks to respond.

No representations were received then or since from community councils in the Wrexham area to indicate that they had not received the consultation letter or been denied the opportunity to make representations before the Secretary of State announced his decision in February 1998.

Responses to the consultation from individuals and organisations received up to February 1998 were taken into account by the Secretary of State in reaching his decision on this matter.

Gwent Tertiary College

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 8 May 1998, Official Report, column 513, on Gwent Tertiary College, if he will place copies of the letters from the Chairman of Gwent Tertiary College Further Education Corporation in the Library. [42147]

Mr. Hain: As the Chairman of Gwent Tertiary College Further Education Corporation has written to me on an in confidence basis, I think it would be better if my hon. Friend approached the College directly for a copy of his letters.

SCOTLAND

A848

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made in upgrading the A848 Salen to Tobermory Road since 1992; when the upgrade is expected to be completed; and if he will make a statement. [41631]

Mr. McLeish: Since 1992 there have been 4 schemes to upgrade specific sections of this local road. The current project which upgrades 4.8km of single track road to 2 lane carriageway from Tobermory is expected to be largely completed by the end of May. Further improvements are a matter for Argyll and Bute Council as local roads authority for Mull.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people in Scotland had been on waiting lists for NHS treatment for (a) 0 to 3 months, (b) 3 to 6 months, (c) 6 to 9 months, (d) 9 to 12 months and (e) over 12 months on 31 March. [42337]

Mr. Galbraith: Information on the number of patients with a guarantee, and the time spent on waiting lists for NHS treatment in Scotland at 31 March 1998, is provided in the table:

NHS patients on waiting list in Scottish hospitals: Number and time spent on waiting list at 31 March 1998

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Over-the-counter Medicines

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to review resale price maintenance on over-the-counter medicine prices. [41578]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 12 May 1998]: None. This is a matter for the Director General of Fair Trading, who has already brought proceedings before the Restrictive Practices Court asking it to review the matter.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she had received in respect of the future of resale price maintenance in the field of over-the-counter medicines; what proposals she has to safeguard the position of local pharmacies and to protect the supply of such medicines to consumers; and if she will make a statement. [42108]

Mrs. Beckett: I have received a number of representations from right hon. and hon. Members and from pharmacists and their representatives about resale price maintenance on over-the-counter medicines. Proceedings before the Restrictive Practices Court have been initiated by the Director General of Fair Trading and I would expect the Court to examine fully all the issues which might arise from the retention or abolition of resale price maintenance in this sector, including the effect on local communities of the possible closure of pharmacies.

Genetically Engineered Animals

Mr. Etherington: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the United Kingdom patents which have been published since 1 June 1997 in respect of genetically engineered animals and processes for creating such animals. [42273]

Mr. Battle: There have been a total of three patent applications under the Patents Act 1997 published since 1 June 1997. Two of these are Patent Co-operation Treaty Applications which have entered the national phase and have been published as applications Nos. GB 2318792 and GB 2318578. They relate to the manipulation of animal embryos and the animals produced therefrom. The third, GB 2312899, relates to transgenic animals encoding an agent involved in the regulation of bone marrow. None of these applications has yet been granted. This information does not include applications filed at the European Patent Office and which may have the legal effect of UK patents if granted by that office.

Mobile Telecommunications Networks

Ms Hewitt: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the preparations for issuing licences under the Wireless Telegraphy Acts for operators of third generation mobile telecommunications networks. [42794]

Mrs. Roche: The UK has been at the forefront of developing mobile telecommunications in Europe, and I am determined that it should retain that position. Third generation mobile—also known as UMTS or Universal Mobile Telecommunications Systems—offers exciting prospects for new jobs, new services and new investment, and I aim to ensure that the UK benefits fully from this new technology.

To that end, we intend to hold an auction of UMTS licences in the summer of 1999, subject to market and other developments and to final decisions nearer the time. This timetable takes account of responses to the Government's consultation document 'Multimedia Communications on the Move', further discussions with industry, and advice from N M Rothschild and Sons.

In offering through an auction licences to use specified frequencies for the delivery of UMTS, the Government's overall aim is to secure, for the long-term benefit of UK consumers and the national economy, the timely and economically advantageous development and sustained provision of UMTS services in the UK.

Subject to this overall aim, the Government's objectives are to (i) utilise the available UMTS spectrum with optimum efficiency, (ii) promote effective and sustainable competition for the provision of UMTS services, and (iii) subject to the above objectives, design an auction which is best judged to realise the full economic value to consumers, industry and the taxpayer of the spectrum.

In developing detailed auction proposals, my Department will continue fully to consult industry.

Motor Vehicles

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the pricing structure for the sale of motor vehicles in the UK relative to that in other EU countries; and what plans she has to review the pricing structure for the sale of motor vehicles in the UK. [42046]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Following an initiative by the Government at the meeting of European Union Finance Ministers at York in March, the European Commission has been asked to carry out an investigation into price disparities between different EU markets of a range of products and services, including cars.

I propose to await the outcome of this investigation, before considering whether it would be appropriate to take any further action.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the export from the UK of second-hand cars which do not meet environmental standards in the UK. [42048]

Mr. Battle: All vehicles sold in the UK must meet EU environmental standards for emissions. Any vehicle being exported outside the EU will have to meet the standards of the importing country, which may differ significantly from EU standards.

It is not possible from Customs and Excise export figures to identify separately those used motor vehicles which do not comply with UK environmental standards.

Nuclear Materials (Georgia)

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on how many occasions she sought to prevent the importation of nuclear materials from Georgia. [42087]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 14 May 1998]: The issue of whether the UK should accept approximately 5 kg of high enriched uranium from Georgia was considered in the normal way through consultation among relevant Government departments and discussion by the appropriate Cabinet committee. Following these discussions, all departments involved, including the Department of Trade and Industry, agreed that, given the non-proliferation and nuclear safety arguments, the UK should agree to accept the material.

Medical Isotopes

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to the oral statement of the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, North (Mr. Henderson), of 22 April 1998, Official Report, column 821, if she will list the locations at which the UKAEA makes medical isotope targets. [42088]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 14 May 1998]: The UKAEA manufacture targets, for use in the production of medical isotopes, at their Dounreay site in Caithness.

Oil Platforms

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how many oil platforms there are in British waters; what is the estimated date of decommissioning for each; what decommissioning options are currently being considered for each oil platform in operation in British waters; and what is the Government's preferred option for disposing of oil platforms in British waters; [41123]

(2) what estimate she has made of the potential cost to public funds of tax reliefs for the decommissioning of oil platforms in the North Sea over the next 10 years; [41124]

(3) what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the disposal of oil platforms at sea. [41125]

Mrs. Beckett: There are approximately 250 offshore oil and gas installations currently located on the UK Continental Shelf. The majority will reach the end of their useful lives during the next 25 years but the peak years for decommissioning activity are expected to be between 2003 and 2012.

Our policy is based on a presumption in favour of land disposal except where, taking account of the environment as a whole, such a course is neither safe nor practicable. Generic studies have demonstrated that the great majority of existing installations will be brought onshore for re-use, recycling or disposal. These studies have also shown that the current generic solution for large concrete installations is to leave them in place. There is no single generic solution for heavy steel installations located in deeper water and we consider that these structures should be assessed on a case-by-case basis with decisions based on solid analysis and in the light of open and transparent consultations.

Gross decommissioning costs over the next 25 years are estimated to be in the range of £7 billion to £10 billion at current day prices. The Inland Revenue estimates that around 50 per cent. of the costs will be met by the Exchequer through tax relief. Decommissioning costs generally qualify for tax relief under the normal Petroleum Revenue Tax and Corporation Tax rules. Royalty relief is currently available where royalty has been paid on that licence.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Security Clearance

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what account her Department takes of criminal records consisting solely of homosexual activity engaged in prior to 1982, where such activity has been decriminalised, in determining (a) security clearance and (b) employment within the RUC; and what changes to regulations have taken place since 1994. [41156]

Mr. Ingram: A candidate must meet the recruiting criteria in every respect. The RUC will take into account convictions for any and all criminal offences. The fact that an offence may have been decriminalised is not considered relevant.

There have been no changes in policy relating to sexual orientation since 1994.

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in what circumstances (a) non-criminal homosexual activity and (b) sexual orientation would debar a candidate from security clearance to become an RUC officer; and what changes in the regulations have occurred since 1994. [41157]

Mr. Ingram: A candidate must meet the recruiting criteria in every respect. There is nothing to debar a person who had engaged in non-criminal homosexual activity or to debar a person because of their sexual orientation.

There have been no changes in policy relating to sexual orientation since 1994.

Petrol Stations

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many petrol stations have closed in Northern Ireland in (a) 1997 and (b) in 1998 to date. [41532]

Mr. Ingram: This information is not held by NI Departments.

Petroleum Products (Smuggling)

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions she had held with the RUC about the illegal importation of petroleum products into Northern Ireland; and if she will make a statement. [41533]

Mr. Ingram: I have not held any discussions with the RUC about the illegal importation of petroleum products into Northern Ireland. This is a matter for HM Customs and Excise.

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations she has received from the Petrol Retailers Association about the illegal importation of petroleum products; and what response she made. [41531]

Mr. Ingram: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State received a letter from the Petrol Retailers Association concerning these issues. As importation of products across UK national boundaries is a matter for Customs and Excise and HMT, the letter was passed to HMT for answer.

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action she is taking to prevent the illegal importation of petroleum products into Northern Ireland; and if she will make a statement. [41536]

Mr. Ingram: Illegal importation of products across UK national boundaries is a matter for Customs and Excise and HMT and I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by the Financial Secretary on 14 May 1998, Official Report, columns 174–75.

Castle Buildings Agreement

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the new commissions and other bodies that will be brought into being under the Castle Buildings Agreement, stating the estimated (a) annual running costs and (b) number of staff to be employed by each entity. [42161]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The new commissions and other bodies which will (or may) be brought into being under the Agreement are listed. No reliable estimates for annual running costs and the number of staff to be employed by each entity are yet available.

Northern Ireland Assembly

Civic Forum

North/South Ministerial Council

North/South Implementation Bodies

British/Irish Council

British/Irish Intergovernmental Conference

Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission.

In addition an independent Commission on policing for Northern Ireland will be established with the aim of publishing a final report by summer 1999.

Assembly Members (Pay)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what salary and expenses she proposes to pay to (a) each member of the Northern Ireland Assembly and (b) each Minister. [42163]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The salary and expenses payable to members and Ministers in the New Assembly (depending on whether Section 1 of the Northern Ireland (Elections) Act 1998 is brought into force) are under consideration and I am not therefore in a position to reply.

Civil Service

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement about the decision concerning the number of graduate management trainees to be recruited to the Northern Ireland Civil Service in 1997. [42167]

Mr. Paul Murphy: No trainees were recruited into the Management Trainee programme in 1997 but it is proposed to recruit a minimum of 10 trainees in 1998.

Additionally, 20 trainees were recruited in 1996, the first year of operation of the scheme. This pattern of recruitment reflects Departmental manpower requirements.

Election Personation

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement about the implications of the use of forged medical cards for election personation; and what recent progress has been made in eliminating this form of fraud. [42166]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Government are aware of concern over forged medical cards for election personation. While the medical card cannot be withdrawn from the list of specified documents without an adequate replacement, the hon. and learned Gentleman is aware that my own Election Review is currently looking at every part of the polling process, both to enhance polling station procedures and accessibility, but also to consider alterations to present identity requirements.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Court Centres

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the court centres to which (a) he and (b) the Lord Chancellor have paid official visits since 1 May 1997, and the date of each such visit. [41714]

Mr. Hoon: Since 1 May 1997, the following visits to court centres have been undertaken by the Lord Chancellor and by me.

Legal Aid

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list (a) the sums of money and (b) the proportions of the total legal aid budget for each of the last five years for which figures are available taken up by (i) personal injury cases, (ii) contractual disputes, (iii) judicial review cases, (iv) criminal cases and (v) family law cases. [41503]

Mr. Hoon: Gross expenditure in cases closed as a proportion of total expenditure in cases closed in each of the last five years for (i) personal injury cases, (ii) contractual cases, (iii) judicial review cases, (iv) criminal cases and (v) family law cases was as follows:

	Total legal aid budget (£ million)	Personal injury cases (£ million)	% of total	Contractual disputes (£ million)	% of total	Judicial review cases (£ million)	% of total	Criminal cases[1] (£ million)	% of total	Family law cases[2] (£ million)	% of total
1992–93	646.9	85.1	13.16	29.1	4.49	5.0	0.78	283.9	44	272.4	42.10
1993–94	813.9	121.2	14.89	40.2	4.94	6.7	0.82	321.6	40	332.0	40.79
1994–95	922.5	151.5	16.42	44.1	4.78	7.9	0.86	362.1	39	351.2	38.06
1995–96	1,071.5	189.4	17.67	56.0	5.23	10.1	0.94	384.3	36	373.5	34.86
1996–97	1,178.0	219.8	18.66	60.3	5.12	10.5	0.90	411.1	35	392.5	33.32

[1] The category Criminal cases includes details of criminal higher, criminal magistrates, duty solicitors and green form scheme

[2] The category family law cases includes divorce, divorce injunction, ancillary relief, residence and contract, nullity, domestic violence, Child Support Act 1995 and the Children Act 1989.

Note:

These figures are based on cases closed within each year.

Harassment

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department which sections of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 have been implemented; and what are his plans for the implementation of outstanding sections. [42288]

Mr. Hoon: So far as England and Wales are concerned, all relevant parts of the Act have been commenced with the exception of section 3 sub-sections 3–9. These sub-sections will be commenced as soon as rules designed to facilitate the operation of the Act have been approved. The final consultation process on the rules is under way at present and will be completed as quickly as possible.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Drivers (Leaflets)

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what powers he has to act against individuals distributing (a) leaflets and (b) other items to those in vehicles on the highway. [41792]

Mr. Michael: The situation described would be an operational matter for the police. Police officers could deal with it by a verbal warning and moving those distributing the material from the roadway. Alternatively, if they thought it appropriate, they could charge the offenders under a number of different statutes ranging from those concerned with obstruction of the highway to possible public order offences. The offences charged would depend on the precise circumstances of the incident.

Foreign Nationals

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals were charged with (a) possession of a false instrument and (b) attempting to obtain services by deception; how many were subsequently sentenced to a term of imprisonment; and what was the average sentence length in the last year for which figures are available. [41816]

Mr. Michael: Under section 26(1)(d) of the Immigration Act 1971, a foreign national is guilty of a criminal offence if, without lawful authority, he alters any certificate of entitlement, entry clearance, work permit or other document made under or for the purpose of the Act; or if he has in his possession any passport, certificate of entitlement, entry clearance, work permit or other document which is known (or he has reasonable cause to believe) to be false. However, it is also possible that other legislation, which although not referring exclusively to passports, may be used to deal with foreign nationals arrested for this type of crime.

Detailed information on persons charged by offence is not collected centrally. Information held on the Home Office Court Proceedings database for 1996 (latest available) shows nine prosecutions and five convictions under section 26(1)(d) of the Act. Only one offender was given a custodial sentence which was for the period of one month.

The Court Proceedings database does not record a person's nationality and is unable to identify all benefit fraud cases, as the majority are dealt with under section 1 of the Theft Act 1968, which covers a multitude of circumstances.

Police Vehicles

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what directions he has given to police authorities on the conversion of vehicles in existing fleets to (a) liquid petroleum gas and (b) compressed natural gas. [42066]

Mr. Michael: No directions have been given, but a number of police forces are currently engaged in trials of alternative fuels, the results of which will be disseminated by the National Association of Police Fleet Managers.

CS Gas

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines his Department issues on the use of CS gas against individuals being restrained by police officers. [41980]

Mr. Michael: The Home Office has not issued guidelines to the police on the use of CS spray. This is an operational matter and the responsibility of individual chief police officers. A copy of the guidance issued by the Association of Chief Police Officers, has been placed in the Library.

Animal Care (Universities)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the letter of Lord Williams of Mostyn AP/981/10/207, what assessment he has made of the quality of animal care in British universities. [41121]

Mr. George Howarth: All designated establishments are regularly inspected, on both an announced and unannounced basis, by members of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate.

I am satisfied that the quality of animal care in British universities generally attains the high standards required under the terms of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 and the Codes of Practice issued under the Act. Where unexpected problems do occur, it is important that, in addition to any action taken by the Inspectorate, local controls are in place to ensure appropriate remedial action is taken.

We announced on 6 November 1997, Official Report, column 285, that local ethical review processes would become mandatory in all establishments. These will play an important role in promoting the care and welfare of animals within each establishment.

Firearms Compensation

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how his Department has disposed of the guns and ancillary equipment surrendered under the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997. [42241]

Mr. Michael: The majority of guns and ancillary equipment surrendered will be destroyed in accordance with local police force arrangements. Some will be retained by the police for training purposes or acquired by suitably authorised museums.

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements he has made to handle disputes over levels of compensation under Category C claims of the Firearms Compensation Scheme. [42310]

Mr. Michael: The arrangements are set out in paragraphs 26 and 27 of the booklet on the original Scheme. Under the terms of Option C, claimants must submit valid documentary evidence of the value of the items claimed as at 16 October 1996. Where that evidence supports the amount claimed, then the claim will be paid. If the evidence is unsatisfactory, then the Firearms Compensation Section will request further evidence from the claimant. If that evidence is satisfactory, then the claim will be met. Where no additional evidence is submitted or the additional evidence remains unsatisfactory, the claim will be paid at the listed value or, where appropriate, the police force involved will be asked to obtain a further valuation from an independent source, selected at the discretion of the chief officer. Where this is obtained, the valuation will normally be used to calculate the payment to the claimant.

This final independent valuation stage provides a last resort arrangement to ensure that no claim should be incapable of being resolved satisfactorily.

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects claim reference HER 13040 to be settled under the firearms compensation scheme; and if interest will be paid on this claim. [41983]

Mr. Michael: The claim with the police reference number HER 13040 was received in the Firearms Compensation Section on 15 October 1997, and the Option A and B elements are now being processed. The Option C elements, which will require individual consideration of the evidence of value provided, will be dealt with at a later date.

There is no provision in the compensation scheme for the payment of interest if claims are not dealt with in a particular time. As I have said to the House on many occasions, this is a complex and generous compensation scheme which Parliament approved, and which is being implemented as quickly as possible, having regard to the need for close scrutiny of claims to guard against fraud and incorrect payment.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the dates in the last 12 months on which members of the Association of Chief Police Officers Administration of Firearms and Explosives Licensing Sub-Committee attended the Home Office Working Groups on (a) the Reference Panel on Historic Firearms, (b) the Firearms Forms, (c) the Approved Club Criteria and (d) the Home Office Memorandum of Guidance on the Administration of Firearms revision; and if he will list the names of the (i) committee members, and (ii) others attending each of these meetings. [42412]

Mr. Michael: Details of those attending each meeting of the first three Working Groups (including members absent) for each date on which the Groups met in the last 12 months are set out in the table. There is no working group on the revision of the Home Office Memorandum of Guidance to the Police.

Everthorpe Prison

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of recent measures to remove drugs and alcohol from Everthorpe Prison on discipline at that prison. [42062]

Mr. George Howarth: Everthorpe has 96 prisoners in units reserved for those who are committed not to use drugs. These units were introduced three years ago. Places in them are available only to prisoners whose general behaviour also qualifies them for the enhanced regime, and the standard of behaviour in the units is good. On average, two prisoners per month are removed from the drug-free units, either for failing a drugs test or for failing to maintain the standard of behaviour required of prisoners on the enhanced regime.

An alcohol counsellor has recently been re-engaged after a nine month gap, so it is too soon to comment on the effects of her work. However, there are no indications that alcohol is a particular problem at Everthorpe.

Prisons (Drugs)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the current numbers and percentages of the prison population using (a) cannabis, (b) ecstasy and (c) heroin. [41639]

Ms Quin: Our best estimate of the numbers of prisoners using illegal drugs is drawn from the results of random mandatory drug testing (MDT). While it is recognised that, for a number of reasons, MDT results cannot be a complete measure of prevalence of drug misuse in prisons, the results do provide for the first time a reliable and statistically valid way of measuring patterns and trends of drug misuse across establishments and over time.

Laboratory screening does not differentiate ecstasy from the amphetamine group as a whole, or heroin from other opiates, so it is not possible to provide figures specifically for ecstasy or heroin.

There were 45,613 random tests in total during the first three quarters of 1997–98. Of these, 7,754 (17 per cent.) were positive for cannabis; 91 (0.2 per cent.) for amphetamines; and 1,870 (4.1 per cent.) for opiates. Final figures are not yet available for the fourth quarter.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of prisons he forecasts will be free of the use of illegal drugs by 2002. [42060]

Mr. George Howarth: Our best estimate of the numbers of prisoners using illegal drugs is drawn from the results of random mandatory drug testing (MDT). A number of prisons do return entirely negative results of drug testing. But, because random testing involves the testing of only a proportion of a prison's population each month and, for a number of reasons, MDT results cannot be a complete measure of prevalence of drug misuse in prisons, it would not be safe to claim that a prison is free of drug misuse.

We are committed to the aim of enabling all prisoners to have access to voluntary testing units in order to demonstrate that they are drug free.

Over 4,000 places can now be provided in voluntary testing units and the Prison Service is working to expand this number to achieve our aim.

It would be unrealistic to put a figure on the future number of drug free prisons, since there are too many unpredictable variables. However, we aim through measures already underway and those planned for the future to reduce the number of prisons where illegal drugs are misused.

Cannabis

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the (a) longest and (b) shortest jail sentence handed down to a person convicted of growing cannabis other than for his or her own use since 1980. [42138]

Mr. George Howarth: Information is not available as to whether people convicted or cautioned for growing cannabis were cultivating it for their own use.

Information on the length of jail sentences imposed for offences of the cultivation/production of cannabis is not available before 1986. Information for the period 1986–92 could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Available data for 1993–95 are given in the table; similar data for 1996 are not yet available.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Equestrian Establishments

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the most appropriate way to support small equestrian establishments. [41667]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 12 May 1998]: None directly. However, the Government recognise the importance of sport and we want to ensure access to a wide range of facilities, including equestrian, for the many not the few. The English and UK Sports Councils continue to work with local authorities and governing bodies on the best way of meeting this aim.

Swimming

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to ensure that the teaching of swimming is eligible for funding under the New Opportunities Fund. [41454]

Mr. Banks: Swimming teaching will be eligible for funding under the New Opportunities Fund, particularly under the out of school hours activities initiative which will include sporting activities which aim to assist the social development of children and young people. The healthy living centres initiative could also raise awareness of the importance of healthy physical activity such as swimming since centres will be designed to provide information, advice and support to help people improve their health and wellbeing. Future initiatives supported by the New Opportunities Fund could also potentially provide funding for swimming. Swimming is, of course, already eligible for Lottery funding from the four national Sports Councils.

Heritage Lottery Fund

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps he is taking to ensure equity of distribution between metropolitan and non-metropolitan areas in the distribution of Heritage Lottery funds. [41450]

Mr. Banks: The Government are determined to ensure that Lottery money is allocated more fairly and equitably in the light of need across the whole of the United Kingdom and between different groups in society. The National Lottery Bill requires the Heritage Lottery Fund and the other Lottery distributors to demonstrate in their strategic plans how they will achieve this. The Bill also gives distributors new powers to encourage specific applications which do not come forward spontaneously. In addition, proposed new Policy Directions, drafts of which are in the Libraries of the House, emphasise the need to ensure that all parts of the country have equal access to Lottery funds. These measures should help areas that have benefited less in the past.

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what criteria the Heritage Lottery Fund uses to decide whether an application has outstanding merit. [41451]

Mr. Banks: The Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF) uses seven main criteria to assess applications. These are as follows:

Importance of the project to the heritage

Conservation benefits of the project

Access benefits of the project

Additional public benefits

Quality of design of the project

Financial need and viability

Strengths of the organisation.

Further information on the assessment process is set out in the HLF's application pack, which has recently been updated. Copies are available in the House Libraries.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Regional Grand Committees

38. Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Council what proposals she has for regional Grand Committees. [41335]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: Standing Order No. 117 already provides for the establishment of a Standing Committee on Regional Affairs.

Back Benchers' Debates

39. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the President of the Council what plans she has to improve opportunities for debates for Back Benchers. [41336]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: I am prepared to listen to any suggestions, but it will not be easy to find extra time for such debates within the current sitting hours of the House.

Ministerial Replies

41. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the President of the Council if she will make a statement on her progress in ensuring earlier replies to hon. Members from her ministerial colleagues. [41338]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: Further to my comments in the House on 12 March 1998, Official Report, column 752, I wrote to my Ministerial colleagues on 31 March 1998 asking them to take action where necessary and Sir Richard Wilson has written to all Permanent Secretaries asking them to make every effort to ensure high quality and timely replies.

Modernisation Committee

Mr. Skinner: To ask the President of the Council what representations she has received on the reports of the Select Committee on the Modernisation of the House of Commons. [41331]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: Almost all the representations I have received support the recommendations of the Committee. The House will be able to consider the third and fourth reports in a debate after the Whitsun recess.

Parliamentary Working Hours

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Council what plans she has to alter the working hours of the House. [41334]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: The Modernisation Committee will shortly be considering the parliamentary calendar, including the working hours of the House.

Number of Members

Mr. Viggers: To ask the President of the Council if she will undertake a review of the total number of hon. Members of the House. [41337]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: The Scotland Bill, currently before the House, provides for some reduction in the number of Members of the House after the next Boundary Commission report is implemented. I have no other plans to review the size of the House.

Recycling Sacks

Mr. Brake: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee how many recycling sacks were distributed around the Palace of Westminster last year. [41330]

Mrs. Roe: In Financial Year 1997–1998, 100,000 paper recycling sacks were issued over the Parliamentary Estate.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

India

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans her Department has to review aid contributions to the Indian sub-continent. [42563]

Clare Short: The British development programmes in India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka and Nepal are being reviewed this year in the light of the new policies set out in the Government's White Paper on International Development.

Pakistan

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what aid programmes her Department is currently supporting in Pakistan and at what costs; and what was the comparable figure for 1997–98. [42232]

Clare Short: The main focus of our development co-operation with Pakistan is improving basic social services, such as elementary education and reproductive health. We are also helping to create better basic infrastructure and livelihoods for poor communities, in both rural and urban areas; and we are supporting various initiatives by Pakistan to enhance the quality of its governance. Final disbursement figures for the 1997–98 UK Financial Year are not yet available, but are expected to maintain the present pattern of spending on our bilateral programme of around £25 million annually.

Montserrat Building Society

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what actions she has taken and what actions she proposes to assist the Montserrat Building Society. [41805]

Clare Short: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary on 11 May 1998, Official Report, column 21. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary is responsible for co-ordinating HMG's policy in respect of the Montserrat Building Society and other matters.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with (a) the Building Societies Association and (b) the Bank of England about the Montserrat Building Society. [41804]

Clare Short: None. HMG's policy towards the Montserrat Building Society is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office have been in close contact with the Bank of England. The Bank has offered advice but neither it nor the Building Societies Association has regulatory power in this case.

Sri Lanka

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what aid programmes her Department is currently supporting in Sri Lanka and at what cost; and what was the comparable figure for 1997–98. [42234]

Clare Short: We provided around £6 million of bilateral development assistance in 1997–98 to Sri Lanka, and expect to maintain this level of expenditure in the current year. The programme focuses on two major issues: raising the quality of primary education and helping those affected by civil conflict.

We are working closely with the World Bank in improving education, concentrating on management and planning, and Maths and English. We are financing a relief and rehabilitation programme for families displaced by the civil conflict in the North and East, and contributing to parallel programmes of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) and the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC). In addition, we are developing participatory management techniques with the Forest Department, raising the environmental management capacity of the Mahaweli Development Authority and improving the management of Colombo's sewers.

Afghanistan

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what aid programmes her Department is currently supporting in Afghanistan and at what cost; and what was the comparable figure for 1997–98. [42258]

Clare Short: In March 1998, the Department for International Development (DFID) announced a £7.5 million humanitarian aid package for Afghanistan. This assistance will be disbursed over the 1997–98 and 1998–99 financial years as follows:

- £2 million to the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) for medical relief;
- £4.4 million in response to the UN consolidated appeal for Afghanistan:
- £2 million for demining
- £1.9 million to help international agencies function in Afghanistan; support for strengthening co-ordination between aid agencies and for communications, logistics and aircraft to deliver essential supplies and personnel
- £500,000 for UN Food and Agriculture Organisation for improving livestock production;
- £1.1 million to non governmental organisations for education, health water and sanitation project.

We do not yet have the final figures for expenditure during 1997–98; however, the expected outturn will be approximately £8 million.

Consultation Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the consultation papers published since 1 May 1997 giving the date of publication, closing date for submissions and the number of respondents. [42242]

Clare Short: No consultation papers have been published by the Department for International Development.

British Council

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what measures she proposes to take to ensure that the work funded by the grant in aid to the British Council reflects her Department's aims of eliminating poverty in poorer countries; and if she will make a statement. [41806]

Clare Short: As part of the Departmental Spending Review, we are looking at the present funding arrangements of the Grant-in-Aid and the uses to which the funds are put. The outcome of the Reviews will be known by the summer.

Sudan

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has held with (a) UNICEF, (b) the Red Cross and (c) representatives of the World Food Programme about humanitarian assistance for Sudan; and if she will make a statement. [41870]

Clare Short: I met UNICEF representatives on 29 April. My officials are in close contact with the Red Cross and other international non-governmental organisations about the humanitarian situation in Sudan. We are also in regular contact with the World Food Programme in Rome, Khartoum and Nairobi.

The World Food Programme believes that there are now sufficient resources available and enough flights to deliver the supplies through until August, when the harvests are due to start. But we stand ready to provide more funds if needed.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what representations she has made to the Government of Sudan about restrictions on flights to Bahr al Ghazal since 9 March; and if she will make a statement; [41873]

(2) what representations she has made to the Government of Sudan about the opening of relief corridors in Bahr al Ghazal since 9 March; and if she will make a statement. [41872]

Clare Short: We have pressed all parties to the conflict bilaterally and in our EU Presidency role for greater access to those in need. At our instigation, Sudan was discussed at the United Nations Security Council on 5 May.

Commonwealth Development Corporation

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will publish the Commonwealth Development Corporation's new code of conduct. [41746]

Clare Short: The Commonwealth Development Corporation (CDC) existing statement of business principles refer to the annual report. CDC is currently working on a more detailed code of conduct which will be developed during 1998 based on a process of close consultation with interested parties. The new code of conduct will be published.

UN Convention on the Rights of the Child

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations she has made about changes to the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child; and if she will make a statement. [42229]

Clare Short: My Department has not made representations about changes to the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child. We support international efforts to enhance children's well-being through implementation of the Convention. We also promote children's protection and participation alongside the provision of effective and sustainable services.

Indonesia

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much her Department spent in (i) 1996–97 and (ii) 1997–98 on programmes in Indonesia for (a) forestry management, (b) assistance to trade unions and (c) developing non-Governmental organisation activities in East Timor; and what plans she has for comparable expenditure in 1998–99. [42277]

Clare Short: Actual and forecast expenditure figures are as follows:

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99
Forestry	4,038	2,378	[1]1,350
Trade Unions	0	0	[1]250
NGOs in East Timor	0	0	[1]350

[1] Forecasts

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance her Department is giving to the Indonesian Human Rights Commission; and at what cost. [42276]

Clare Short: My Department is not currently assisting the Indonesian Human Rights Commission.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which assistance programmes in Indonesia have been discontinued by her Department in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–9. [42275]

Clare Short: All commitments inherited from the previous administration, some of which run to the year 2000, are running their full course. The Aid and Trade Provision is discontinued. We no longer support Police Training. Future assistance will centre on three areas; forestry management with stronger emphasis on the needs of the poor, trade unions and NGOs in East Timor.

UN Agencies

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what was the financial contribution made by her Department to UN agencies during 1997–98; and what is the planned figure for 1998–99. [41748]

Clare Short: The Department for International Development (DFID) provided an estimated £123 million through multilateral programmes in 1997–98. In 1997, we also provided a further £30 million to UN agencies through our bilateral and emergency programmes in response to specific appeals.

In 1998–99, we plan to provide at least £117 million to the UN through our multilateral programmes. In addition, we expect to provide further assistance under our bilateral and emergency aid programmes.

DEFENCE

Army Recruitment

1. Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the latest recruitment figures for the Army. [41294]

Mr. George Robertson: In the year to 31 March, the Army recruited 13,926 soldiers, the highest number since 1991. In addition, 708 officers were granted commissions during that period. The totals are, respectively, 88 per cent. and 97 per cent. of the targets for the year.

Bosnia

18. Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the future deployment of British troops in the Balkans following the expiry of the SFOR mandate. [41313]

Mr. George Robertson: NATO is currently considering options for the size and shape of a force in Bosnia after June 1998. The Government will decide the precise nature of the UK's contribution in light of the recommendations of the NATO authorities and will announce the outcome to Parliament as soon as possible thereafter.

Whilst the UK is seeking a reduction from its current contribution to SFOR, we expect to remain the second largest contributor after the United States.

Warships

19. Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many destroyers and frigates are undertaking long-term international commitments; and how many are currently undergoing refit or port maintenance. [41314]

Dr. Reid: Seven Destroyers/Frigates are currently undertaking long term international commitments. Four Destroyers/Frigates are undergoing refit or planned maintenance which reduces operational availability. Six Destroyers/Frigates are undergoing routine planned maintenance periods of three to six weeks which do not reduce operational availability and a further one is undergoing unplanned defect rectification.

Carrier Operations

20. Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those naval vessels which are required to support carrier operations. [41316]

Dr. Reid: Carrier operations are invariably supported by anti-submarine frigates, Air Defence destroyers and Royal Fleet Auxiliaries. Additionally, all other Fleet units, including submarines, mine-countermeasure vessels, specialist amphibious shipping and survey vessels may be required to support Carrier Operations depending upon the specific nature of the operation, the role of the carrier and the operating environment.

Jaguar Squadrons

21. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when each of the two Royal Air Force Jaguar offensive support squadrons and the Jaguar reconnaissance squadron will be disbanded. [41317]

Dr. Reid: Under current plans, the first Jaguar squadron will disband in April 2005, the second in March 2006 and the third in October 2008. The Strategic Defence Review has examined all aspects of the structure of the Armed Forces, including the Fast Jet fleet. Proposals on the SDR have been submitted to the Prime Minister and Cabinet. The Cabinet will now decide collectively on the outcome of the review. Publication of the SDR White Paper will follow as soon as decisions have been made.

Defence Diversification

22. Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the consultation period on the Government's Green Paper on defence diversification ends. [41318]

Mr. George Robertson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Portsmouth, North (Mr. Rapson).

Territorial Army

23. Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the Territorial Army infantry. [41319]

Dr. Reid: The Strategic Defence Review has examined all aspects of our Armed Forces, including the Territorial Army and its Infantry Battalions. We have not yet taken any final decisions and it would be wrong for me to speculate as to what they might be.

What I can say is that we clearly need a Territorial Army that is relevant to today's strategic environment, structured for all the roles that we can plausibly foresee. Our aim is to achieve a capable and useable Territorial Army, one that is modern, fit and ready for the service of a modern Britain.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received on the future of the Territorial Army centres. [41301]

Dr. Reid: My Department has received a number of representations concerning the future of many Territorial Army units and the centres they occupy.

New Deal

24. Mr. Savidge: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contribution his Department is making to the Government's new deal initiative. [41320]

Mr. George Robertson: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Tamworth (Mr. Jenkins).

Iraq

25. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his strategy for military deployment in the middle east to ensure compliance with United Nations resolutions relating to Iraq. [41321]

Mr. George Robertson: UK forces remain deployed in the Gulf to help ensure that Saddam Hussein complies with all relevant United Nations Security Council Resolutions. We would wish to see a pattern of Iraqi compliance with relevant UNSCRs over a period of time before considering whether to change our military capability in the region.

Land Mines

26. Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans his Department has to dispose of the United Kingdom's stocks of anti-personnel land mines. [41322]

30. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans his Department has to dispose of the United Kingdom's stocks of anti-personnel land mines. [41326]

Mr. George Robertson: Plans have been drawn up to destroy all of the Army's operational stocks of anti-personnel land mines by 1 January 2000, which is well ahead of the timetable laid down by the Ottawa Convention. We are still working on arrangements for the destruction of the HB876 anti-personnel submunition of the RAF's JP233 Airfield denial weapon, but I am confident that this, too, will be achieved well before the Ottawa Convention deadline.

European Defence Industry

28. Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress towards restructuring of the European defence industry. [41324]

Mr. Spellar: The Government are keen to play their part in maintaining the impetus on this important initiative. To this end, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence met his counterparts from France, Germany, Italy and Spain on 20 April in order to discuss their common interest in restructuring the European defence industry. A joint statement was issued, in which ministers agreed to take action in five key areas: security of supply; export procedures; research and development funding; security of information and personnel clearances; and intellectual property rights. A letter of intent spelling out the objectives and principles for handling these issues and the timetable for the tasks involved is planned to be approved in June 1998.

Equal Treatment

29. Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the equal treatment of men and women serving in the armed forces. [41325]

Dr. Reid: The Armed Forces are committed, within the limits of the law, to being an equal opportunities employer, and to ensuring that progression through the Services is based solely on merit and ability. Men and women are recruited, interviewed and trained using the same procedures, and no special or preferential treatment is given to anyone who wishes to join the Armed Forces.

We are determined to recruit the brightest and the best to the Armed Forces, irrespective of gender, ethnic origin or religious beliefs. We have increased opportunities for women in the Army and have commissioned a fundamental review of the remaining areas where women are excluded on combat effectiveness grounds.

Future Large Aircraft

31. Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if Her Majesty's Government will order the FLA troop and tank-carrying aircraft made by British firms. [41327]

Mr. Spellar: The Request for Proposals has been issued to Airbus, Turkish Aerospace Industries, Alenia and FLABEL on a provisional basis pending the formation of Airbus Military Company. We are still discussing with our partners when Requests for Proposals will be issued to other potential suppliers. A procurement decision will be made in the light of the conclusions of the Strategic Defence Review and of the responses to the Request for Proposals. FLA, as currently envisaged, will not be able to carry Main Battle Tanks.

Armoured Fighting Vehicle Training

32. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his progress in finding alternative uses for (a) the Royal Navy facilities being released by the move of HMS Osprey and (b) the facilities at Bovington made available by the civilianisation of armoured fighting vehicle training. [41328]

Dr. Reid: At present, no alternative defence uses for the site at HMS Osprey have been identified. The Army Training and Recruiting Agency is looking at the site in the context of a study into options for rationalisation of the Adjutant General's Corps Training Group, which currently occupies a number of sites in the South. The results of the study will be published at the end of June. The awards of the facilities management contract at the Royal Armoured Corps Centre at Bovington and Lulworth has not resulted in the release of any specific facilities.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy in respect of members, or former members, of the reserve forces suffering from Gulf war syndrome. [41304]

Dr. Reid: Since coming into office, the Government have taken a wide range of initiatives to address the health concerns of Gulf veterans. These include work on issues of particular concern to those veterans who were mobilised from the reserves to serve during the conflict.

Plutonium

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his policy in respect of his Department's plutonium holdings. [41323]

Mr. Spellar: I have nothing to add to the answer given to the hon. Member by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Armed Forces on 13 March 1998, Official Report, column 432.

Departmental Research

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what percentage of applications from women, in relation to his Department's research budget, were successful for (a) project grants, (b) programme grants, (c) special grants intended for new investigators, (d) studentships and (e) fellowships, in 1997 and each of the two previous years; [40880]

(2) what percentage of applications, in relation to his Department's research budget, were from women, for (a) project grants, (b) programme grants, (c) special grants intended for new investigators, (d) studentships and (e) fellowships, in 1997 and each of the two previous years. [40881]

Mr. Spellar: Funding from the Defence research budget in respect of project grants and programme grants is specified not by individual names but by research packages and technology groups. New researchers may apply for funding under the Joint Grants Scheme, under which the relevant Research Council and MOD may each make up to a 50% contribution to research proposals with potential Defence application. Information on grants provided is not available in the form requested, as applicants are not required to give information about their sex. Studentships in engineering, both pre-university and for sponsorship until University finals, are funded from a central MOD budget and not from the Defence research budget. Historic figures are not kept but, of those currently sponsored by MOD to read engineering, 6.8% are women. A system of Research fellowships is being introduced in the current financial year. The process is at an early stage and information on the percentage of applications from women is not yet available.

Sierra Leone

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when British aid was first delivered to the towns of (a) Bo, (b) Kenema and (c) Makeni in Sierra Leone by HMS Cornwall. [41938]

Mr. George Robertson: British aid was first delivered by HMS Cornwall to Bo on 2 March, Kenema on 3 March and Makeni on 7 March.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the ship's programme for HMS Cornwall which include her visit to Sierra Leone in March. [41880]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 14 May 1998]: The information on HMS Cornwall's programme of port visits since leaving the UK on 16 February is as follows:

Date
18–19 February 1998	Routine port visit to Gibraltar to refuel.
25 February 1998	Arrived Conakry, Guinea.
27 February 1998	Sailed Conakry.
1 March 1998	Arrived Freetown, Sierra Leone.

Date
3–5 March 1998	Moved further south along the coast to position closer to Bo and Kenema and to replenish fresh water.
7–9 March 1998	Off the coast of Sierra Leone to make fresh water and for ship's company R and R.
11–12 March 1998	Overnight off the coast of Sierra Leone to make fresh water.
13–14 March 1998	Off the coast of Sierra Leone for ship's company R and R.
15–16 March 1998	Off the coast of Sierra Leone to replenish water stocks.
20 March 1998	Sailed Freetown.
3–6 April 1998	Agadir.
8–19 April 1998	Tenerife.
20–22 April 1998	Nouadhibou, Mauritania.
24–27 April 1998	Conakry, Guinea.
1–5 May 1998	Douala, Cameroon.
7–11 May 1998	Owendo, Gabon.
14–18 May 1998	Luanda, Angola.

The remainder of Cornwall's programme currently includes visits to Namibia, South Africa, Ascension Island, and Ghana. There are also plans for her to pay a return visit to Freetown. Cornwall returns to the UK in August.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those British military personnel who have served in Sierra Leone since 1 January 1996 indicating their (a) name, rank and post held, (b) dates of service and (c) tasks undertaken. [41819]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 14 May 1998]: The details of British military personnel who have served in Sierra Leone since 1 January 1996 are as follows:

Date	Rank	Role
October 1995-March 1996	Lt. Col.	British Military Liaison Officer (BMLO), providing advice to the British High Commissioner and to Sierra Leone Armed forces on restructuring and training
March 1996-October 1996	Lt. Col.	BMLO
22–26 September 1996	1 x Lt. Col.	To advise the Republic of Sierra Leone Military Forces on civil-military relations
October 1996-April 1997	Lt. Col.	BMLO
24 November-1 December 1996	1 x Lt. Cdr RN 1 x Lt. RN	Advice on structure, capability and operating procedures of Navy
23 March-7 June 1997	1 x Capt. 1 x WO2	Advice on basic military skills. (WO2 withdrawn on medical grounds on 16 May 1997)

I am considering whether to release the names of those concerned, having regard to their current appointments and the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

In addition, Lt. Col. Hicks deployed to Conakry, Guinea, on 15 February prior to moving to Sierra Leone from 5–17 March 1998, as a military liaison officer in support of the British High Commissioner. He also visited Sierra Leone from 28 April-8 May 1998. Col. Gale who was the Defence Adviser in Accra, Ghana with non-resident accreditation (NRA) to Freetown between 1 January 1996 and February 1998, is currently serving in Sierra Leone as the Military Adviser to the United Nations Secretary General's Special Envoy. Lt. Col. Glover succeeded Col. Gale as Defence Adviser in Accra, with NRA to Freetown in February 1998; he visited Sierra Leone from 17–20 March 1998.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when HMS Cornwall received orders to proceed to Sierra Leone. [42098]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 14 May 1998]: HMS Cornwall was instructed on 27 February 1998 to enter Freetown on 1 March.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give the latitude and longitude of HMS Cornwall at 0400 on 28 February. [41878]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 14 May 1998]: On 28 February at 0400, HMS Cornwall was at the position 08–53.2N8 latitude and 013–47.SW3 longitude.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the ship's log of HMS Cornwall between 1 January and 1 April. [41879]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 14 May 1998]: The logs requested are being collected in the UK and I will write to the hon. Member about the possible release of copies as soon as I am able.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what dates between 2 May 1997 and 4 May 1998 his Private Office received submissions or briefing notes on the situation in Sierra Leone. [42084]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 14 May 1998]: A large number of submissions and briefing notes which contained reference to the situation in Sierra Leone were received in my private office throughout the period in question.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) on what date the Minister for the Armed Forces was first consulted about making available his Department's resources, equipment, communications facilities, military bases and service and civilian personnel in support of Sandline International's involvement in restoring the Government of Sierra Leone; [41844]

(2) on what date he was first consulted about making available his Department's equipment, communications facilities, military bases and service and civilian personnel in support of Sandline International's involvement in restoring the Government of Sierra Leone. [41843]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 14 May 1998]: Neither my hon. Friend the Minister for the Armed Forces nor I was consulted about any such proposal.

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) on what day (a) his officials or (b) his Private Office first gave him papers relating to potential operations by Sandline or others in Sierra Leone; and on what date he acknowledged them; [41958]

(2) on what day the Defence Intelligence Organisation first passed him details of potential operations by Sandline and others in Sierra Leone. [41959]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 14 May 1998]: As far as I have been able to ascertain, the first report which my office received of Sandline's involvement in Sierra Leone was circulated on 11 March, referring to allegations of Sandline training the Kamajor. There was no mention in this report of arms supplies or a breach of the arms embargo. Potential operations and activities of others, primarily ECOMOG forces, were referred to in a number of reports circulated within the Department, including to Ministers' Offices, dating back to May 1997.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the aircraft and helicopters maintained, serviced and repaired by Royal Navy personnel based aboard HMS Cornwall since 1 January 1996 indicating (a) the type of aircraft or helicopter, (b) the owner of the aircraft or helicopter, (c) the dates when the work was carried out, (d) the location where the work was carried out and (e) the nature of the work done. [41818]

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what technical assistance has been given by British military personnel on board HMS Cornwall or on land in Sierra Leone, Guinea or Liberia to Sandline International since 1 January. [41877]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 14 May 1998]: The information back to 1996 is not readily available. However, HMS Cornwall has reported that, in March 1998, the ship's crew gave assistance on two occasions to an HIP MI 17 helicopter operated by Sandline in support of the ECOMOG Operations. On 6 March, the ECOMOG helicopter, carrying their Task Force Commander, landed at a heliport alongside HMS Cornwall after a bird strike. HMS Cornwall staff spent 2 hours repairing the aircraft. On 13 March the same helicopter sought and received minor assistance at the same heliport.

Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the inquiry announced by the Foreign Secretary on 6 May will cover the role of Ministers and civil servants in his Department. [41858]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 14 May 1998]: Yes, where relevant.

Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the role of HMS Cornwall in the waters off Sierra Leone in February and March. [41861]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 14 May 1998]: Following the ousting of the military junta by ECOMOG forces, HMS Cornwall was deployed to Sierra Leone to provide immediate humanitarian assistance to the people of Sierra Leone, to support our diplomatic efforts there, and to assist in the return of the British High Commissioner.

Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what role was played by British armed services in the recent overthrow of the military junta in Sierra Leone and the restoration to power of President Kabbah; [41860]

(2) when officials in his Department were informed of the role of the UK armed services in the recent overthrow of the military junta and the restoration to power of President Kabbah in Sierra Leone; [41859]

(3) when Ministers were informed of the role of UK armed services in the recent overthrow of the military junta and the restoration to power of President Kabbah in Sierra Leone. [41857]

Mr. George Robertson: The UK armed services did not have such a role.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what specific departmental resources, equipment, communication facilities, military bases and service and civilian personnel supported Sandline International's involvement in restoring the Government of Sierra Leone; [41842]

(2) on what date the Chief of the Air Staff, the Assistant Chief of the Air Staff and their outer offices were first informed about the involvement of his Department's personnel and military assets in support of Sandline International in restoring the Government of Sierra Leone; [41836]

(3) on what date the Chief of the Naval Staff, the Assistant Chief of the Naval Staff and their outer offices were first informed about the involvement of his Department's personnel and military assets in support of Sandline International in restoring the Government of Sierra Leone; [41838]

(4) on what date the Permanent Secretary and his outer office staff were first informed about the involvement of his Department's personnel and military assets in support of Sandline International in restoring the Government of Sierra Leone; [41840]

(5) on what date the Assistant Chief of the Defence Staff (Operations and Security) and his outer office were first informed about the involvement of his Department's personnel and military assets in support of Sandline International in restoring the Government of Sierra Leone; [41835]

(6) on what date the Chief of the General Staff, the Assistant Chief of General Staff and their outer offices were first informed about the involvement of his Department's personnel and military assets in support of Sandline International in restoring the Government of Sierra Leone; [41837]

(7) on what date the Chief of Defence Intelligence and his staff were first informed about the involvement of his Department's personnel and military assets in support of Sandline International in restoring the Government of Sierra Leone; [41839]

(8) on what date the Chief of the Defence Staff and his outer office were first informed about the involvement and his Department's personnel of military assets in support of Sandline International in restoring the Government of Sierra Leone. [41841]

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what day and at what level his Department first discussed with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office potential operations by Sandline or others in Sierra Leone. [41960]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 14 May 1998]: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has made clear his intention, following the Customs investigation, to ask someone from outside the Foreign Office or Diplomatic Service to conduct a full investigation into events surrounding this case. The report of that investigation will be published.

Guardsmen Fisher and Wright

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions the Minister for the Armed Forces had at his recent meeting with representatives of the Scots Guards Association on the effect of the case of Guardsmen Fisher and Wright on the morale of the regiment. [41227]

Dr. Reid: I had a worthwhile exchange of views at my meeting on 13 May with representatives of the Scots Guards Association. The effect of the case of Guardsmen Fisher and Wright on the morale of the Regiment was not raised, although the issue of morale was raised in more general terms.

Military Law

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for changes to the present system of military law and courts martial. [41813]

Dr. Reid: The court-martial system was reformed by a series of measures included in the Armed Forces Act 1996. These reforms were wide ranging and were designed to reinforce the independence of the court-martial, principally by reducing the apparent influence of the chain of command, whilst preserving its necessary involvement.

We are satisfied that these recent changes to the court-martial system will ensure its continuing effectiveness into the next millennium. However, we are aware that we cannot afford to be complacent, so the system is kept under constant review to ensure it remains efficient procedurally as well as substantively. To this end, we are currently investigating ways of preventing backlogs within the system.

Resettlement Courses

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will extend (a) the size of the grant and (b) the length of time allowed for the individual refund scheme for military personnel to attend approved resettlement courses. [41867]

Dr. Reid: The Individual Refund Scheme (IRS) permits all serving members of the Armed Forces to reclaim a proportion of the cost of fees paid to civilian bodies for certain personal development courses and examinations. The Individual Resettlement Training Costs (IRTC) grant is a separate allowance payable to personnel with five years or more Service, in their final year, to help meet the costs of resettlement training courses. As part of the Strategic Defence Review, we are examining possible enhancement of the provision of education for Servicemen and Servicewomen.

Foxes

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many foxes were taken in each of the last three years on his Department's land (a) by hunts, (b) by shoots and (c) by vermin controllers. [41869]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Erdington (Mr. Corbett) on 25 November 1997, Official Report, column 499.

Army Engineers

Mr. Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Army's engineer resources. [42870]

Dr. Reid: The consultation process on the conclusions of the Engineer Logistics Review has now ended. The review recommended that the Engineer Resources functions carried out at Long Marston should be disaggregated to new service providers and not transfer to Chilwell, as previously announced. A number of representations were received from the trades unions, local councils, individual employees and hon. Members. Having considered these representations very carefully, I am satisfied that no issues have arisen which would call into question the study's recommendations. I intend, therefore, to proceed to implement disaggregation with the objective of ceasing operations at the Long Marston Depot by December 1999.

Hunting

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when the agreement was signed between him and the Masters of Foxhounds Association establishing the terms and conditions whereby the Association and recognised hunts may have access to his Department's land for the purpose of fox hunting; [41886]

(2) if under his proposals to harmonise the issuing of all hunting licences across his Department's estate, his policy on hunting practices and conditions laid down in previous licences will be changed; [42150]

(3) if licence applications to hunt with hounds on his Department's land in the 1998–99 season will be determined before the beginning of August. [42151]

Mr. Spellar: The new standardised licence is currently being drawn up by my officials in the Defence Estate Organisation. The Master of the Foxhounds Association will be consulted as part of the finalisation process which is planned to be complete by the beginning of August 1998. The licence will contain amended terms and conditions and will reflect those changes in hunting practices which were introduced on the Defence Estate during the last season.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what procurement contracts have been placed since May 1997 by the armed services for trucks and other heavy goods vehicles. [42575]

Mr. Spellar: Since May 1997, 20 contracts have been placed by the armed services for 163 trucks and other heavy goods vehicles, which are defined as any logistic vehicle with a capacity over four tonnes. These details are:

Quantity	Vehicle type
2	Tractor unit 60 tonne 6x4
15	Truck cargo 4 tonne 4x4
16	Commercial trucks 16 tonne
6	Commercial trucks 16 tonne
1	Six yard skip handling
1	Rough terrain crane
20	Truck mounted runway sweeper
1	Tractor unit with crane
1	Truck mounted servicing platform
41	Tractor unit semi-trailer
4	Tractor unit semi-trailer
4	Truck van postal
1	Volvo FL10 tractor unit
7	Truck fire fighting
1	38 metre servicing platform
1	Truck van laboratory
5	Truck various
14	Airportable fuel dispense truck
11	A/C potable water/toilet servicing truck
11	De-ionised water tanker

Training

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many man training days per year are spent on training on private land; and what would be the cost to his Department if charges were raised at the current rate of £1.50 per man day. [41885]

Mr. George Robertson: The three Services spend some 900,000 man training days per year on private land in the United Kingdom.

If charges were raised for this training, at the current rate of £1.50 per man per day, the cost for a year would be approximately £1.35 million.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Party Political Meetings

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what factors underlay the decision of the Prime Minister to address the Party of European Socialists at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 7 April; [40750]

(2) if he will set out the rules concerning the holding of party political meetings in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. [40751]

Mr. Robin Cook: When available, the historical rooms in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office are on occasion used by outside organisations (usually with an international dimension) for meetings or receptions, and subject to payment of a fee: there must be no cost to public funds.

The only occasion since the General Election when these premises have been used for a party occasion was a meeting of the Party of European Socialists in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 7 April. This meeting was attended by eight European Prime Ministers, and represented a valuable opportunity to set out the Government's approach on employability and economic reform in advance of the Cardiff Summit. The meeting was held at no additional cost to public funds.

Ambassadors for British Business

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of Ambassadors for British Business sit on Government committees. [42055]

Mr. Fatchett: I will write to the hon. Member with these details, and copies will be placed in the libraries of the House.

EU Legislation

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) European Council and (b) European Commission (i) directives, (ii) regulations and (iii) decisions there were in 1997. [41956]

Mr. Doug Henderson: According to information from the Commission Annual Report for 1997, in 1997 the Council, either alone or acting jointly with European Parliament, enacted 34 Directives, 209 Regulations and 164 Decisions. The Commission enacted 35 Directives, 760 Regulations and 635 Decisions. A lot of these were implementing measures enacted under secondary legislation powers.

These figures exclude instruments not published in the Official Journal and routine management instruments valid for a limited period.

The Report also notes that, in the same period, more than 700 Commission instruments, and over 350 Council or Council and EP instruments, either expired or were repealed.

Edgar Fernandes

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what liaison took place between the British consulate and the Turkish authorities on the disappearance of Edgar Fernandes; what subsequent liaison has taken place; and at what level. [42104]

Mr. Fatchett: The British Consulate General in Istanbul formally requested the Head Prosecutor in Istanbul to investigate urgently the disappearance of Edgar Fernandes. The Consul had meetings with the Deputy Chief of Police and the Head of Interpol about the matter. The Vice Consul accompanied a member of the Fernandes family to the Prosecutor's office following confirmation of Edgar Fernandes's death.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has made to the Egyptian authorities to further the investigation into Edgar Fernandes's death. [42107]

Mr. Fatchett: Our Embassy in Cairo had asked the Egyptian authorities for a photograph of an Egyptian national suspected of being involved in Edgar Fernandes's death to assist in police investigations. The Egyptian national has been detained by the police in Malta. The Turkish authorities are investigating the death of Mr. Fernandes in Turkey.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to recover Edgar Fernandes's passport. [42106]

Mr. Fatchett: The British Consulate-General in Istanbul was informed by the Turkish authorities on 5 May that they had a record of Edgar Fernandes's passport leaving Turkey at the Bulgarian border on 20 April. Further checks by the British Embassy in Sofia on 6 May showed that a person using that passport entered Bulgaria by train from Turkey on 20 April and left by foot at Kulhata on the Greek border on 21 April.

Unfortunately, the Greek authorities do not keep records of EU passport holders entering/departing Greece. Interpol UK are currently following this matter up with the Greek authorities.

Japan

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Association of British Civilian Internees in respect of their treatment by Japanese forces during the Second World War; what recent discussions he has had on these matters with his Japanese counterparts; and if he will make a statement. [42071]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement I made during the adjournment debate on 29 April 1998, Official Report, columns 284–87.

Indonesia

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will call on the Government of Indonesia to show restraint when dealing with unarmed student demonstrators. [42458]

Mr. Fatchett: We have done so on a number of occasions.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has received from Mr. Martin Cadman in response to the Adjournment Debate of 29 April 1998 on Lockerbie. [42393]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs received a letter from Mr. Cadman on 14 May. It will be studied carefully and a reply will be issued shortly.

Defence Exports

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to ensure that defence exports promoted by his Department are not used to repress internal dissent in the purchasing countries. [41307]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The most effective way of ensuring that defence exports are not used for internal repression including the repression of internal dissent is to carry out a thorough assessment of this risk when considering whether to authorise an export. This includes consideration of the human rights record of the recipient country and of the specific end-user, including its use of similar equipment, and the likelihood of diversion from the stated end-use or end-user. The export licensing criteria specify that exports will not be authorised if there is a clearly identifiable risk that the goods concerned might be used for internal repression.

HEALTH

Children's Rights

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if legislation is planned to develop those children's rights provided for by the Children Act 1989. [24336]

Mr. Boateng: We have no plans to legislate for the development of any children's rights provided for by the Children Act 1989. Development is a continuing process, often achieved by the dissemination of good practice and policies between local authorities and other organisations providing services to children.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration his Department is giving to the establishment of a children's commissioner for the United Kingdom. [27637]

Mr. Boateng: We have no plans to establish an office of Children's Rights Commissioner. During 1998 the Government will be preparing the Second United Kingdom Report to the United Nations Committee on the Rights of the Child in accordance with the requirements of Article 44 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, 1989. We will take into account possible advantages of such an Office and seek progress in other countries where such an Office has been established.

Hospital Closures (Cornwall and Scilly)

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 5 May 1998, Official Report, column 354, what factors will determine the timing of the announcement of his decision on the hospital closure programme proposed by Cornwall and Isles of Scilly Health Authority. [41943]

Mr. Milburn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will announce his decision when he has given full and proper consideration to the proposals put forward by Cornwall and Isles of Scilly Health Authority.

Bogus Doctors

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many bogus doctors have been discovered (a) in private practices, (b) working as general practitioners in the NHS and (c) as hospital doctors in each year since 1990; and if he will make a statement. [42069]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is not collected centrally. The General Medical Council (GMC) is responsible for maintaining the register of medical practitioners in order to distinguish the qualified from the unqualified medical practitioner.

Before doctors can practise anywhere in the United Kingdom, they must have obtained registration with the GMC. In each case the GMC requires originals of the diplomas and certificates confirming the applicant's qualifications and detailed documentation concerning experience.

The GMC keep their registration procedure under constant review to ensure that they are as secure as possible against fraud. As a further safeguard, the Department has issued guidance (PM(87)7, EL(92)53 and EL(92)84) reminding employing authorities that appointment procedures must ensure that candidates are properly registered with the GMC.

The GMC operates a 24 hour automated telephone inquiry service which can be accessed by authorities wishing to check a doctor's credentials. Additionally, an operator service is available during working hours for people wishing to make more detailed inquiries.

Chemotherapy (Wigs)

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has to provide wigs free of charge to outpatients who lose hair through chemotherapy treatment. [42260]

Mr. Boateng: We are currently looking into the subject of such charges as part of the wider comprehensive review of health services costs and charges.

Currently, a wig may be provided as part of National Health Service treatment if it is considered to be clinically necessary. As with the supply of any medication, patients will qualify for free wigs if they are hospital in-patients. Schedule 12 of the National Health Service Act 1977 states that "no charge shall be made to a patient who is for the time being resident in hospital".

Out-patients cannot be said to be resident in hospital, and so are not entitled to the same automatic exemption from charges as in-patients.

Out-patients and day patients may qualify for full or partial exemption from charges on income grounds. If patients are in receipt of Disability Working Allowance, Family Credit, Income Support or Income-based Jobseeker's Allowance, they will be entitled to wigs free of charge. Additionally, people not in the groups who are automatically exempt may claim help with health costs through the NHS Low Income Scheme.

Waiting Lists (Cheshire)

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the number of patients in the area covered by the Cheshire Health Authority who have been waiting for operations for over a year; and what the figure was on 1 May 1997. [42159]

Mr. Milburn: Information on the numbers of patients awaiting admission to hospital, whether it be for surgery or for some other form of treatment, and how long they had been waiting is published quarterly and shows the position at the end of the quarter. Information for 1 May 1997 is not therefore available. On 31 March 1997 414 patients resident in the areas covered by North and South Cheshire Health Authorities had been waiting more than a year for admission to hospital on either an ordinary or day case basis. The latest information currently available is for 31 December 1997 and this shows 1,328 patients waiting more than a year for admission.

Health Insurance

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the advantages and disadvantages of insurance as a way for individuals to pay for long-term care. [42064]

Mr. Boateng: We have established a Royal Commission on the funding of long-term care for the elderly. The Commission has been asked to recommend how the cost of care should be shared between public funds and the individual, and will no doubt be looking at the role of insurance in this.

Anti-acne Drug

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what reports he has received of adverse reactions following the use of the anti-acne drug Roaccutane/Accutane; and if he will make a statement. [42061]

Ms Jowell: In England, there have been more than 11,000 prescriptions for Roaccutane since 1987, the first year for which data are available. During this period, the Medicines Control Agency/Committee on Safety of Medicines have received a total of 625 reports covering 1,025 suspected adverse reactions associated with Roaccutane treatment in the United Kingdom. These reports cover a wide range of effects: the most frequently reported include skin and subcutaneous tissue reactions, musculoskeletal disorders and gastrointestinal disorders.

Roaccutane (oral isotretinoin) is available only on prescription for the treatment of severe acne which has failed to respond to antibiotics. It is recommended for use under the supervision of a consultant dermatologist. The product information for doctors and patients includes information on its adverse effects.

Hip Replacement

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ensure that inducements may not be offered to surgeons in order to encourage them to use specific hip replacement prostheses. [42063]

Mr. Boateng: Guidance on standards of business conduct for National Health Service staff is set out in circular HSG(93)5, copies of which are available in the Library. NHS trusts are responsible for ensuring that staff are aware of their responsibilities in this area.

Ashworth Hospital

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the discovery of prescribed drugs collected by Ian Brady at Ashworth Hospital and the purposes for which they were collected; [42605]

(2) what assessment he has made of the current prescribing of drugs and checks on patients taking medication at Ashworth Hospital; [42606]

(3) what assessment he has made of the adequacy of procedures for the checking of items (a) coming in and (b) leaving Ashworth Hospital; [42607]

(4) what action he has taken regarding recent security breaches at Ashworth Hospital. [42604]

Mr. Boateng: The matters referred to are, in the first instance, the responsibility of the management of Ashworth Hospital Authority. The North West Regional Office of the National Health Service Executive (NWRO) monitors Ashworth Hospital Authority's performance of its responsibilities, and the High Security Psychiatric Services Commissioning Board (HSPSCB), which is also part of the NHS Executive, has a service agreement with Ashworth Hospital Authority relating to the type and level of services which the hospital is expected to provide.

Ashworth Hospital Authority introduced a revised security procedures manual in December 1997. The authority has arrangements in place for an ongoing audit of the manner in which the security procedures manual is being implemented across the hospital. Both the NWRO and the HSPSCB include, as part of their monitoring role, a review of the security arrangements in place at the hospital and the audit findings. Further changes to the security arrangements will be introduced if necessary.

The security procedures manual covers the checking of items coming into and leaving the hospital. This includes searches of packages and the escorting of visitors to and from the premises.

Arrangements are in place for patients to be observed while taking their medication, and an audit of drug prescribing is currently under way.

Any breach of security is investigated by the hospital, and more serious breaches are considered by the NWRO and the HSPSCB as part of their monitoring role.

Ashworth Hospital has informed the NWRO that a single tablet was found during a search of Mr. Brady's room in April this year. This is an internal matter, which hospital managers are best placed to deal with.

NHS Executive Regional Office

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to establish the NHS Executive Regional Office for London; and if he will make a statement. [42671]

Mr. Dobson: In my statement on 3 February 1998, Official Report, column 843, I accepted the recommendations in Sir Leslie Turnberg's report on London's Health Services including the proposal that a single National Health Service Executive Regional Office for London should be a longer-term aim in order to ensure effective planning across London. I have now decided that it would be right to move more quickly on this front and I intend to establish such an Office from 1 April 1999. In the meantime, I expect the existing North and South Thames Regional Offices to continue to work closely with each other to ensure coherent strategic planning across London.

The decision to establish a single Regional Office for London necessarily affects the boundaries of other existing NHS Executive Regional Offices in the South of England and I intend to reorganise their boundaries to match more closely the boundaries of the Government Offices for the Regions. The following arrangements will be established from 1 April 1999.

A London Regional Office which will be coterminous with the proposed Greater London Authority.

A South East Regional Office which would cover Health Authorities in Kent, Surrey, Sussex (which are currently covered by South Thames Regional Office), Hampshire and the Isle of Wight (which are currently covered by the South and West Regional Office) Berkshire, Buckinghamshire, Oxfordshire and Northamptonshire (which are currently covered by the Anglia and Oxford Regional Office).

An Eastern Regional Office covering Health Authorities in Norfolk, Suffolk, Bedfordshire, Cambridgeshire (which are currently covered by the Anglia and Oxford Regional Office) and Essex and Hertfordshire (which are currently covered by North Thames Regional Office).

A South West Regional Office which will exclude Hampshire and the Isle of Wight.

In addition I intend to restructure the Department's Social Care Regional Offices so that from 1 April 1999 they are coterminous with the boundaries of the NHS Executive Regional Offices as follows:

The Northern Social Care Region will match the North West and Northern and Yorkshire NHS Executive Regional Offices.

The Central Social Care Region will match the West Midlands, Trent and Eastern NHS Executive Regional Offices.

The Southern Social Care Region will match the South West and South East NHS Executive Regional Offices.

The London Social Care Region will match the London NHS Executive Regional Office.

A map showing the new NHS Executive Regional Office structure has been placed in the Library.

The Regional Chairmen for the new NHS Executive Regional Offices will be:

London: Ian Mills

South East: Sir William Wells

Eastern: Rosie Varley

South West: Janet Trotter.

Their appointments will run until 31 October 1999, the date on which their original appointments were due to expire.

Sheppey Community Hospital

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the PFI for the new hospital on the Isle of Sheppey; and what contingency plans his Department has made in the event of failure of the PFI. [41919]

Mr. Milburn: We recognise the service need for improved hospital facilities at Sheppey. Thames Gateway National Health Service Trust, West Kent Health Authority and South Thames NHS Executive Regional Office are currently working hard to ensure a successful private finance initiative (PFI) scheme. Like all PFI schemes, to be approved the final agreed PFI solution must demonstrate it is affordable to the NHS and best value for money.

Should the decision be taken not to proceed with the PFI option then all the parties above will work together to find an alternative solution.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what factors led the North Kent Health Trust to purchase a new greenfield site for the intended Sheppey Community Hospital prior to determination of the PFI. [41921]

Mr. Milburn: In the outline business case for this scheme the trust examined the option of developing on their current site, but this was discounted as it would have involved using a cemetery (now disused) which is on the site. Local consultation indicated that there would be considerable opposition to building across the cemetery and this could delay any start on site by a significant period. Additionally, there would have been high costs involved with the removal of remains to an alternative site. These were the reasons for purchasing the new greenfield site.

A greenfield site was identified as the preferred option in the outline business case long before the trust started testing for the private finance initiative scheme.

Sittingbourne Memorial Hospital

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what factors led to the construction of two new wards in the Sittingbourne Memorial Hospital in 1996–97; what funding was secured to staff and equip them; and when they will be staffed and equipped. [41920]

Mr. Milburn: The two new wards (for rehabilitation and general practitioner services) were constructed at the same time as the rest of the new community hospital at Sittingbourne. However, the costs of providing the full range of services at the new hospital had to be revised upwards. Since April 1997 West Kent Health Authority has funded outpatients, minor injuries and psychiatric day services at Sittingbourne hospital. West Kent Health Authority and Thames Gateway National Health Service Trust are aiming to open the two wards for rehabilitation and GP services by the end of this financial year.

Stroke Units

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to ensure that there is nationally available access to specialised stroke units. [34099]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 16 March 1998]: In terms of hospital care, it is well established that rehabilitation after a stroke is best provided by properly organised multi-disciplinary teams, and we have endorsed this message in one of our Effective Health Care Bulletins.

It is currently the responsibility of local commissioners to assess the health care needs of their population and to commission services appropriately.

The Clinical Standards Advisory Group is currently undertaking a study on clinical effectiveness, using stroke as a marker condition, and has recently commissioned a survey of stroke services in a representative sample of National Health Service trusts. Its report is expected to be published later this year.

The NHS White Paper, The New NHS—Modern and Dependable, sets out a clear vision of the kind of NHS in which access to services, equity of care and the needs of all patients, including those with long term illness, are paramount.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food Standards Agency

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the financing of the Food Standards Agency. [41585]

Mr. Rooker: The Government intend to consult with interested parties on detailed proposals for a scheme of charges that would pass a greater proportion of the costs of food safety away from the taxpayer on to the food industry. These proposals are being drawn up in the light of the comments submitted during public consultation on the White Paper, The Food Standards Agency: A Force for Change (CM 3830).

Organophosphates

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 8 April 1998, Official Report, columns 233–34, on organophosphates, if he will list the organisations which received funding in the past five years and indicate which studies were co-funded by (a) education institutions, (b) charitable institutions and (c) private sector companies. [41388]

Mr. Rooker: Details of the research and development of direct relevance to organophosphorus compounds and funded by the Government are given in the table. The price bands are as follows:

Band A: £500,00 or more
Band B: £300,000—£499,999
Band C: £100,000—£299,999
Band D: £50,000—£99,999
Band E: up to £50,000.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many reports his Department has received of adverse effects from using organophosphate pesticides in each of the last three years. [41382]

Mr. Rooker: In the three years to March 1998, the Pesticides Safety Directorate has considered three cases of alleged adverse effects relating to use of organophosphate pesticides. In the case of Phorate, data indicating that residues in carrots could erode safety margins led to the suspension of approval for use of Phorate products on carrots and parsnips. Of the other two cases, one related to a small increase in the amount of impurity present in a product after storage, and the other to alleged crop damage. Neither of these resulted in regulatory action.

In addition, in the three years to March 1997, a total of 36 incidents of alleged ill-health (involving 78 people) have been assessed by the Pesticides Incidents Appraisal Panel of the Health and Safety Executive where at least one of the active ingredients used was classed as an organophosphate. For 16 of these (involving 46 people), the ill health was assessed as confirmed or likely to be linked to pesticide exposure. The panel assesses cases that have been brought to its attention following investigation by the Health and Safety Executive or a Local Authority.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what controls his Department exercises to regulate the export of animals for intended use in experiments. [42077]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 14 May 1998]: Anyone exporting animals, including those exported for experimentation purposes, must comply with all statutory animal health and welfare rules applicable to the species and, in the case of exports to third countries, the animal health requirements of the importing country. We are shortly to begin discussions with the Home Office about possible criteria for further controls enabling us to take into account the treatment of the animals in the country of destination before we issue official non-statutory health certification.

Animal Smuggling

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his letter, 113574, of 23 April, what information has been obtained about anti-smuggling devices that can detect the heart-beat of an animal concealed inside a vehicle. [41120]

Mr. Rooker: The use of a device to detect the heartbeat of a person or animal that is concealed in a vehicle is being investigated by the Home Office in conjunction with the Prison and Immigration Services. I will write again to my hon. Friend when my Department has further information.

Consumer Information

Dr. Marek: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has for ensuring that information is available to the consumer about the origin of food at the point of sale. [42160]

Mr. Rooker: Generally, the place of origin of any food must be given if omitting it could mislead the purchaser about the true place of origin of that food. The Department has issued guidance on these rules which makes clear that, where such indications are used to describe processed foods, this must not mislead the consumer about the origin of the individual ingredients of the product.

More specifically, EC rules require certain fresh fruits and vegetables to be marked with the country of origin at all points of sale. In October last year, we launched the Beef Labelling Scheme, which provides for the accurate labelling of beef. With effect from 1 July, any beef labelled with country of origin information must have been derived from animals born, reared and slaughtered in that country. It is envisaged that national origin labelling of beef will become compulsory by the year 2000.

Central Science Laboratory

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list for the Central Science Laboratory staff at (a) Torry, (b) Slough, (c) Harpenden and (d) Worplesdon, the total number of (i) mobile and (ii) non-mobile staff, (1) made compulsory redundant, (2) redeployed to MAFF or MAFF agencies, (3) who were found employment elsewhere and (4) who took early retirement. [41668]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 12 May 1998]: The information requested concerning those Central Science Laboratory (CSL) staff not transferring to York from the Torry, Slough, Harpenden and Worplesdon sites is as follows:

Staff	Torry	Slough	Harpenden	Worplesdon
Redundant
Non-mobile	24	34	30	9
Redeployed in MAFF
Mobile	0	3	2	2
Non-mobile	1	8	1	2
Resignations
Mobile	[1]16	3	8	0
Non-mobile	[1]14	4	3	1
Age/early retirement
Mobile	10	23	8	7
Non-mobile	3	20	4	1

[1] These staff transferred to the Rowett Research Institute, Aberdeen University and the Scottish Office Marine Laboratory.

Part-time staff in mobile grades are not subject to mobility requirements and are therefore treated as non-mobiles.

Without reference to individual personnel files, which would incur disproportionate cost, it is not possible to distinguish those staff who resigned to take up employment elsewhere from those who resigned in the normal course of events.

The age profile of the staff complement at Slough, Harpenden and Worplesdon reflects a major expansion in the early 1950s. A significant number of staff were approaching retirement age at the time that the various sites were due to close and this is reflected in the number of age and early retirements.

Whilst the information provided is accurate, a certain amount of caution must be exercised in the interpretation as each individual member of staff's case is different and was dealt with by CSL on a confidential basis.

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 30 April 1998, Official Report, column 248, how many (a) scientific staff, (b) non-scientific staff, (c) mobile grade staff and (d) non-mobile grade staff employed by the Central Science Laboratory at York in January 1998 were employed in January 1995 by (i) CSL Slough, (ii) CSL Harpenden, (iii) CSL Worplesdon, (iv) CSL Torry, (v) CSL Norwich, (vi) CSL elsewhere and (vii) not the CSL. [41664]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 12 May 1998]: The information requested concerning those Central Science Laboratory staff employed in January 1998 at York that were based at various CSL sites or not employed by CSL in January 1995, is as follows:

CSL sites	Scientists	Non scientists	Mobiles	Non mobiles
CSL Slough	71	27	90	8
CSL Harpenden	60	6	63	3
CSL Worplesdon	17	0	16	1
CSL Torry	7	3	8	2
CSL Norwich	5	1	4	2
CSL elsewhere	22	1	20	3
Not previously employed by CSL	128	86	87	127

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many staff were employed by the Central Science Laboratory at Torry in January 1995; and how many of those individuals were still employed by the CSL at York in January 1998 broken down (a) into (i) scientists and (ii) non-scientists and (b) into (1) mobile and (2) non-mobile grades. [41669]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 12 May 1998]: The information requested on the Central Science Laboratory staff previously employed at Torry and those who continue to be employed at CSL York is as follows:

	January 1995	January 1998
Total staff	108	10
of which:
Scientists	67	7
Non-scientists	41	3
Mobiles	45	8
Non-mobiles	63	2

On closure of the Torry laboratory, funding for work of particular relevance to Scotland was transferred to the Scottish Office and work programmes and associated staff were transferred to the Rowett Research Institute, Aberdeen University and the Scottish Office Marine Laboratory.

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if his Department will make available to the University of East Anglia the necessary financial information about the operation of the Norwich Laboratory of the Central Science Laboratory to enable it to prepare properly costed proposals for a management buy-out of the laboratory. [42081]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 14 May 1998]: No.

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the job titles of the 30 non fee-earning scientists employed by the Central Science Laboratory at York and Norwich, indicating which two are based at Norwich. [42082]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 14 May 1998]: Job titles for the various non-fee earning scientists based at the Central Science Laboratory at York and Norwich are as follows:

Chief Executive

Research Director (Agriculture and Environment)

Research Director (Food)

Commercial Director

Head of Conservation Environment Protection Group

Head of Infestation Risk Evaluation Group

Head of Pest Management Strategies Group

Head of Plant Health Group

Head of Pesticides Group

Head of Microbiology Group

Head of Information Services Group

Training Officer

Health and Safety Officer

Systems Administration

Data Logging

Business Development Team (6 posts)

Information Centre (2 posts)

Group Scientific Support (4 posts)

Quality Assurance Unit (3 posts).

The Research Director (Food) and one member of the Business Development Team are based at Norwich.

In addition, of those non fee-earning scientists based at York, 11 have responsibilities for the provision of support or management at the Norwich laboratory.

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what conclusions his Department has reached following the recommendations in its memorandum of February 1997 about the possible scope for placing other additional work at Sand Hutton, York; [42079]

(2) what steps his Department has taken to implement the recommendation in its memorandum of February 1997 that additional MAFF-funded work which could be moved to Sand Hutton, York, should be identified; and if he will list such work which could be moved. [42078]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 14 May 1998]: A number of options for placing additional work at the Central Science Laboratory's York site have been considered, including work currently done elsewhere in MAFF. No other MAFF work, with the exception of the work currently carried out at CSL's Norwich site, has been identified which could be transferred to York economically and without creating problems for other parts of the Department. As regards non-MAFF work, a Commercial Director has been appointed to the CSL Board to develop and establish new business.

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 5 May 1998, Official Report, column 301, if he will set out the steps which his Department or the Central Science Laboratory would take to resettle Norwich-based non-mobile staff by (a) relocation and (b) securing employment elsewhere in the event that a decision is made to close the Norwich laboratory. [42109]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 14 May 1998]: In the event of a decision to close the Norwich laboratory, non-mobile staff would normally be given the opportunity to relocate to York. Every effort would be made to assist those non-mobile staff unable to relocate to identify and secure suitable employment elsewhere in the public sector, for example in other Government departments and local authorities, or in the private sector.

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department has made of whether there would be unoccupied laboratory and office space if the Norwich Laboratory of the Central Science Laboratory was relocated to York. [42080]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 14 May 1998]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him on 3 March 1998, Official Report, column 596.

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 30 April 1998, Official Report, column 247, on what date his Department decided not to proceed with the tendering exercise to identify consultants to advise on how best to achieve a secure financial future for the Central Science Laboratory; and by whom the decision was made. [42110]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 14 May 1998]: The Prior Options review of the Central Science Laboratory (CSL) concluded that there was no obvious solution to securing a sound financial future for the Agency. The key was to introduce additional revenue. A number of actions were put in hand, including a tendering exercise to identify consultants to advise on the issue and the creation of a new post at Board level to develop new business. When officials reviewed progress in May 1997, they concluded that, since the principal requirement was to increase the utilisation of the Sand Hutton site, the most appropriate course was to proceed with the appointment of a Commercial Director but not with the appointment of external consultants.

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 5 May 1998, Official Report, column 301, for what reasons 16 of the non-mobile staff at the Norwich laboratory of the CSL are not entitled to redundancy payments in the event that the Norwich laboratory is closed. [42371]

Mr. Rooker: The staff in question are not entitled to redundancy payments as they are employed by the Central Science Laboratory on Fixed Term contracts, and it is envisaged that they would complete these contracts in the event that the Norwich site were to be closed.

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 30 April 1998, Official Report, column 247, what the financial implications are for his Department of the High Table versus Horst case, in the event that mobile staff of the Central Science Laboratory in Norwich refused to relocate to York. [42373]

Mr. Rooker: Further to my reply given on 30 April 1998, Official Report, column 247, I can confirm that the High Table versus Horst case holds no financial implications for the Department or the Central Science Laboratory.

Agenda 2000

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the number of United Kingdom farms which will be ineligible for CAP support under the Agenda 2000 proposals; and if he will estimate the equivalent number in each other EU member state. [41358]

Mr. Rooker: Any farmer who, at the time of application, fulfils the eligibility criteria for support set down in the regulations proposed by the Commission, or in any future detailed rules necessary for the implementation of those regulations, would be entitled to the appropriate CAP support payment.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Disabled People (Access)

Mr. Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to improve access for people with disabilities at further and higher education establishments. [41093]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 7 May 1998]: Under the new higher education funding measures for 1998/99, Disabled Students' Allowances will no longer be means tested for disabled full time students. Access funds in both further and higher education have increased significantly. In further education, the funding mechanism provides for additional support for disabled students according to need.

Employment Service (Portsmouth)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much money he has allocated to staffing in the Portsmouth District Employment Service to cover the implementation and future costs of (a) the New Deal and (b) the jobseeker's allowance. [41934]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 18 May 1998:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me to reply direct to your question concerning how much money has been allocated to staffing in the Portsmouth District of the Employment Service to cover the implementation and future costs of (a) the New Deal and (b) the Jobseeker's Allowance. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

Funding for the New Deal essentially follows the client with entitlement to funding for staffing, staff expenses and programme costs being based on the actual numbers entering the different stages of the programme. However, assumptions have been made as to the likely uptake of New Deal places and the resulting entitlement to funds. The Portsmouth District is covered by two delivery units for New Deal. For the Isle of Wight unit an allocation of £123,200 has been identified for 1998/9 and for the remainder, known as Portsmouth/South East Hampshire, an allocation of £315,700 has been identified for the year. These figures include small amounts for expenditure, outside of salary costs, to cover directly related expenses, such as staff travel costs.

For its other activities, the Portsmouth District of the Employment Service has been allocated £3.27m for 1998/9 salary costs, based on an allocation of 203.1 staff units. This has been calculated by a formula which relates staffing to expected business volumes. Within this total, 129.3 staff units relate to the Jobseeker's Allowance.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will assess the risk to employees' health from occupational stress within the Portsmouth District Employment Service. [41935]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Mike Hancock, dated 18 May 1998:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me to reply direct to your question which asks whether we will assess the risk to employees' health from occupational stress within the Portsmouth District of the Employment Service. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

It may be helpful if I explain that we have developed our own guidance to staff and managers on dealing with stress which is set out in a document entitled 'The ES and You; A Guide for Managers'. This is based on the Health and Safety Executive's own good practice recommendations, and is being followed in Portsmouth and other Employment Service Districts. In summary, we have followed the HSE's recommendations that:

Managers have guidance which enables them to understand the issues and manage them appropriately. We also have a clear policy stating that the Employment Service will not tolerate harassment or bullying in any form, and systems for dealing with it including a 'Hotline' telephone service.

Individuals have clear roles, responsibilities and objectives;

Sickness absence is monitored regularly and staff attitudes are periodically surveyed—our most recent Staff Attitude Survey in fact shows a reduction in the number of staff saying they feel under uncomfortable pressure at work;

We have access to professional Occupational Health Service (OHSA Ltd) to advise on individual cases;

All staff have individual access to an Employee Assistance Service. Where appropriate managers can suggest, but not insist, that staff seek help through this service.

Should it become apparent that particular members of staff are suffering from stress, there are a range of measures available to deal with such problems. These include reviewing objectives, changing duties and providing additional training or support. As well as general monitoring of staff absence by managers as a routine part of their job, and action taken in individual cases to ease an individual's return to work, the Portsmouth District has recently worked with the Employment Service's Regional Psychologist to identify the causes of stress at Cosham Jobcentre.

I hope this is helpful.

New Deal (Young Unemployed)

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the planned cost of (a) the subsidised employment option, (b) the full-time education and training option, (c) the voluntary sector option and (d) the environmental task force option of the New Deal for the Young Unemployed per placement for the duration of each option; and if he will make a statement. [41392]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 13 May 1998]: Within the New Deal for 18–24 year olds, our planning assumptions are that the average cost of Employment Option places will be just over £2,000; and the average cost of a place in each of the other 3 options, including New Deal allowances, will be about £4,000.

Disability Discrimination Act

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he intends to implement part III of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [41953]

Mr. Alan Howarth: We shall move to implement the remaining rights in Part III of the Disability Discrimination Act as soon as practicable. An announcement detailing our timetable for implementation will be made in due course.

Special Education

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will rank all local education authorities in terms of the percentage of their potential schools budget under section 122 statements spent on special education provision including special units. [42041]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 18 May 1998]: The following table gives the amounts of SEN funding held centrally by LEAs shown as a ranking for England for 1997–98. The figures are derived from the budget statements produced by the local authorities and as such represent the estimated spend for the financial year in question. Many LEAs delegate some or most of their funding for SEN to schools. The table provides only a partial picture of total funding on SEN, and LEAs' spending centrally will be affected by their decisions on what is delegated. Information on spending on SEN by schools from their delegated budgets is not collected centrally.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the impact of segregated special education on community care policies. [41923]

Ms Estelle Morris: We do not have information which implies a link between type of educational provision and subsequent need for community care. We are considering how best to collect information about the experiences, once they have left school, of young people with special educational needs, with the aim of helping schools and colleges prepare young people for adult life more effectively.

Further Education Colleges

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the impact there would be on national collaborative partnerships between colleges and training providers of allowing further education colleges to provide only for local communities. [41924]

Dr. Howells: No such assessment has been made.

Derby University

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on what date he proposes to make an announcement on the proposed merger of Derby University and High Peak College. [42289]

Dr. Howells: We expect to make an announcement shortly.

Teacher Vacancies

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on what date he intends to publish the next teacher vacancy figures. [42312]

Ms Estelle Morris: We expect to publish the figures on Friday 22 May.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Lone Parents

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current ratio of New Deal for lone parents advisers to lone parents participating in the scheme; and what ratio is envisaged when the pilot becomes a nationwide scheme. [40214]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Up to 31 March 1998, a total of 4,637 lone parents had agreed to participate in the New Deal for Lone Parents in the eight prototype areas; and during this period 72 advisers were available to work with them. The ratio of advisers to lone parents in the nationwide programme will of course depend on the rate at which lone parents participate in the service. However, the Government are drawing up resourcing plans for the New Deal for Lone Parents using assumptions based on the participation rate to date. Therefore, the ratio of advisers to lone parents in the nationwide service will be at least as good as it has been up until April 1998.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of all lone parents who have received an initial letter under the New Deal for lone parents' pilots have moved from income support into paid employment; if she will provide similar figures for (a) lone parents with mortgages, (b) lone parents in rented accommodation and (c) lone parents who are non-householders; and if she will make a statement on the role of housing tenure in determining the likelihood of moving off welfare and into work. [40213]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The management data which are routinely collected on the New Deal for Lone Parents do not identify the housing status of lone parents.

A wide range of factors affect the likelihood of any individual lone parent moving off Income Support and into work. The Personal Adviser approach is designed to offer tailored help and advice which will take account of each individual's particular circumstances, including housing status where relevant.

Up until 31 March 1998, 1,530 lone parents had obtained work following participation in the New Deal for Lone Parents, of whom 1,114 left Income Support. A further 201 had been able to increase their hours of work, of whom 169 left Income Support.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of lone parents would have to find work under the New Deal for Lone Parents for the scheme to be cost neutral. [40822]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The percentage of lone parents finding work is only one of a number of factors which affect the potential savings arising from the New Deal for Lone Parents, including the earnings of lone parents going back to work, how long lone parents remain in work, and substitution and displacement effects.

A full evaluation on the short and longer term effects of the New Deal for Lone Parents will be published in Autumn 1999; this will take account of a number of factors including observed earnings and duration of work.

Child Benefit

Ms Hewitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) under what circumstances child benefit is payable to a father in respect of a child for whom he has a residence order; [41143]

(2) in how many cases child benefit was paid to both parents in respect of children subject to a shared residence order in 1997–98; [41146]

(3) what provision is made to ensure that child benefit is payable to both parents in cases where a child is the subject of a shared residence order under the Children Act 1989. [41145]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information requested is not available.

Entitlement to Child Benefit depends on a person having responsibility for a child because the child lives with them or they contribute to the cost of providing for the child. In cases where the child lives alternatively with each parent, both parents could qualify but only one of them can be entitled for the same child in the same week.

Where competing claims are received in respect of the same child, legislation provides for priority of entitlement. Where the care of a child is shared equally between two parents who are not residing together they may jointly elect which of them shall receive the benefit. In the absence of an election the Secretary of State may decide which of them shall be entitled, taking a number of factors into account.

The existence of a residence order is not a requirement for entitlement to Child Benefit. It is an important factor in reaching a Secretary of State decision about entitlement, but others such as the actual time the child spends living with either parent, and the extent of expenditure incurred by each parent are also considered.

Ms Hewitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security under what circumstances child benefit is payable to an adult other than the mother of the child for whom the benefit is paid. [41151]

Mr. Keith Bradley: There are a variety of circumstances, usually involving the mother's absence, where Child Benefit might be paid to an adult other than the mother of the child. This could be for a temporary period, or permanently.

If the parents of a child separate, benefit will normally be paid to the parent with whom the child lives. If both of them share the care of the child equally they may jointly elect which of them is to receive the Child Benefit. In default of such an election the Secretary of State may, in her discretion, decide which of them shall be entitled.

Ms Hewitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in how many cases in 1997–98 child benefit was paid to the father. [41144]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information is not available in the format requested as it is responsibility for a child rather than parenthood which give entitlement to Child Benefit.

The number of Child Benefit awards to male claimants were an estimated 273,000 as at April 1998. This represents just under 4 per cent. of the total number of awards in payment at that time.

Unclaimed Benefits

Sir Raymond Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action her Department is taking to increase the take up of unclaimed social security benefits. [41592]

Mr. Denham: We would encourage everyone who thinks they may be entitled to benefit to make a claim, wherever they live in Britain. However, we know there are particular barriers which stop pensioners taking up their Income Support and that is why we are focusing on this group.

We are committed to examining to the ways of delivering more automatic help to the poorest pensioners, and have already started to honour this commitment.

As a first step, we have started research to establish the reasons why pensioners do not claim their Income Support entitlement, and the most effective ways of getting help to them. Since April, we have been running nine local pilot projects costing £15 million to test the best way of getting help to the estimated 1 million pensioners who are currently entitled to Income Support but do not claim it.

Disability Benefits Forum

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to establish a body to work alongside Government in accordance with the principles of consultation with disabled people outlined in the green paper, "A New Contract for Welfare"; if a significant part of that body will be drawn from among disabled people; and what timescale she proposes. [41357]

Mr. Denham: We are currently in the process of setting up a Disability Benefits Forum to discuss the reform of benefits for people who are long-term sick or who are disabled. The majority of members of the Forum will be representatives of organisations of or for disabled people. We will announce further details as soon as possible.

Benefit Savings

Mr. Roy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will publish for each Great Britain local authority, a breakdown, for each of the last five years, of weekly benefit savings for (a) thresholds, (b) claimed savings, (c) amount of additional subsidy claimed and (d) amount of subsidy penalty applied. [41652]

Mr. Field: The information has been placed in the Library.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what analysis her Department has made of the long-term effect of Economic and Monetary Union on the integration of the social security schemes of participants. [41955]

Mr. Field: No such analysis has been conducted. Member States will continue to be responsible for the financing and design of national social security schemes.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what estimate she has made of the overall cost of the winter fuel payment scheme in 1998; [41856]

(2) what estimate she has made of the overall cost of winter fuel payments made in error but not repaid to date. [41852]

Mr. Denham: Winter Fuel payments are one of a number of initiatives the Government have taken to help vulnerable people, especially the elderly, keep warm in the winter. A total of £400 million has been committed for two years (1997/98 and 1998/99), to help pensioners with fuel bills to pay. This is the first time any Government have provided automatic help to over 7 million pensioner households with fuel bills to pay, living in the United Kingdom, who receive a Retirement Pension or one of a number of other qualifying benefits.

The making of this year's payments has been an enormous and unprecedented exercise. In order to establish all eligible pensioners, correctly identify pensioner households, and determine the amount each should receive, it was necessary to correlate data in around 15 million computer records, involving 15 qualifying benefits, across nine computer systems. Overall, almost ten million pensioners, in over seven million households, have received a payment.

The administration of winter fuel payments is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Nick Gibb, dated 14 May 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent parliamentary questions about the winter fuel payments scheme.

The making of Winter Fuel Payments to almost ten million eligible pensioners, in over seven million households, before the end of March 1998, has been a challenging task for the Benefits Agency (BA). This was achieved whilst maintaining normal benefit business.

Around one and a half million of the poorest pensioners, those receiving Income Support or income-based Jobseeker's Allowance, received their payment of £50 during January. Almost eight and a half million other eligible pensioners, for example those in receipt of state Retirement Pension, were issued with a payment of £20 or £10. The issue of these payments was completed by 24 March 1998.

Around £200 million was paid to help pensioners with their fuel bills last winter. The total administrative cost is expected to be around £20 million.

We are aware of 649 eligible pensioners who received two £50 payments. This includes 211 who erroneously received two payments due to being in receipt of both Income Support and income-based Jobseeker's Allowance for at least one day in the qualifying week. In accordance with legislation, only one payment should have been made. Also, due to a computer operator error, 40,801 invalid girocheques were sent out with an incorrect date of issue. The error was quickly identified and all the invalid payments were replaced within 72 hours. The letter which accompanied the replacement payment apologised for the error and advised the recipient to destroy the invalid girocheque or if they had encashed it, to return the replacement to the nearest Benefits Agency office. It appears that in 438 instances both the invalid and replacement girocheque were cashed.

In addition we are aware that 9,357 £50 payments have been made to customers who were not entitled to them. This means that 10,006 incorrect payments, valued at £500,300, were made in error. This represents 0.7% of the total number of £50 payments made. No information is presently available on the other eligible pensioners who received either a £10 or £20 payment.

Action is being taken in each individual case to consider whether recovery action is appropriate. We will write to individuals who were overpaid informing them of the position and inviting repayment. Until this exercise is complete, we will not know how much has been repaid.

I hope that this clarifies the position.

War Pensions

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when she plans to undertake the reassessment of Mr. Trevor J. Collier's war pension disability assessment, made in 1959, of 20 per cent., which he requested in 1996. [42465]

Mr. Denham: The review of Mr. Collier's War Pension assessment, requested by him in March 1996, was concluded on 18 September 1996. For reasons of confidentiality the Acting Chief Executive of the War Pensions Agency, Steve Johnson, will write to the hon. Member separately.

Actors

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many actors received non-means-tested jobseeker's allowance in 1997–98; and how much was paid to actors in terms of non-means-tested jobseeker's allowance in 1997–98. [42577]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will calculate the net difference in the amount that actors as a group pay in class 1 national insurance contributions and the amount that they claim and receive in terms of non-means tested benefits. [42576]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is not available.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter of 30 March regarding a constituent, Ref. 5/3644/30. [42264]

Mr. Denham: A reply was sent to my hon. Friend on Monday 18 May 1998.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Official Cars

Mr. Forth: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) if he will list the type or specification of vehicles allocated to (a) Secretaries of State, (b) Ministers of State and (c) Under-Secretaries of State for their official duties; and if he will list any exceptions; [27112]

(2) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Carshalton and Wallington (Mr. Brake), 16 February 1998, Official Report, column 486, if he will list the Ministers who have the use of an official car in a category other than that to which they would normally be entitled. [31663]

Mr. Kilfoyle: For the models of cars from which Ministers can choose and those which are currently used by Ministers, I refer the right hon. Member to my answer to the hon. Member for Carshalton and Wallington (Mr. Brake), 16 February 1998, Official Report, column 486. I understand that the only Ministers who currently have the use of cars in a different category are the Secretary of State for Home Affairs, the Minister without Portfolio, the Minister for the Regions, Regeneration and Planning, the Minister for the Armed Forces, the Minister for Defence Procurement and the Under-Secretary of State for Defence. These exceptions are either on the grounds of security or where the Ministers concerned have the use of cars provided for Ministers in the previous Administration, and to replace them would not be an efficient use of public resources.

Parliamentary Answers

Mr. Forth: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he plans to reply to the question tabled by the right hon. Member for Bromley and Chislehurst on 24 February, on official cars (31663). [42402]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I have answered this question today.

TREASURY

Highly Indebted Poor Countries

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list by country the value of outstanding debts on loans (a) made by and (b) guaranteed by the British Government to highly indebted poor countries. [42042]

Mr. Gordon Brown [holding answer 14 May 1998]: (a) All development assistance to Highly Indebted Poor Countries has been in the form of grants for many years, and the vast majority of old aid loans, to an amount of £1.2 billion, have been forgiven. At 1 May 1998, the only outstanding debts on UK aid loans to HIPCs are shown in the table:

Country	Amount (£)
Cameroon	67,000
Liberia	78,000
Nigeria	4,900,000

(b) At end 1997, the outstanding debts on loans guaranteed by the Government through ECGD, to the 41 countries identified under the HIPC initiative, were as follows:

Taxation

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what are his latest estimates of the average weekly payments for the tax year (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99 for (i) NICs, (ii) income tax, (iii) VAT, (iv) indirect taxes excluding VAT and (v) council tax for a married couple with the male earning and the female not earning with two children, on total family earnings of (1) 75 per cent., (2) 100 per cent. and (3) 150 per cent. of average gross male full-time earnings, excluding any 1997 Budget measures whose revenue effect does not occur until at least the tax year 1999–2000; [41975]

(2) what are his latest estimates of the average weekly payments for the tax year (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99 for (i) NICs, (ii) income tax, (iii) VAT, (iv) indirect taxes excluding VAT and (v) council tax for a married couple with the male earning and the female not earning with no children, on total family earnings of (1) 75 per cent., (2) 100 per cent. and (3) 150 per cent. of average gross male full-time earnings excluding any 1997 Budget measures whose revenue effect does not occur until at least the tax year 1999–2000; [41977]

(3) what are his latest estimates of the average weekly payments for the tax years (A) 1997–98 and (B) 1998–99 for (a) NICs, (b) income tax, (c) VAT, (d) indirect taxes excluding VAT and (e) council tax for a single person on (i) 75 per cent., (ii) 100 per cent. and (iii) 150 per cent. of average gross male full-time earnings, excluding any 1997 Budget measures whose revenue effect does not occur until at least the tax year 1999–2000. [41973]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 14 May 1998]: The available information, which shows tax and NICs payments at multiples of median male full-time earnings, is given in the table. Changes already announced, which will take effect in 1999, will offer significant help to families, reducing the burden of tax and NICs for a family with two children on median earnings. A one earner couple with 2 children with half median male earnings (£187.25 per week) will gain around £20 a week from the introduction of the Working Families Tax Credit. No family with children with earnings less than £220 per week will pay income tax. Child benefit for the eldest child will be increased by £2.50, the largest real increase since 1978. And all employees earning more than the Lower Earnings Limit will gain £1.28 a week from the abolition of the NICs entry fee.

Calculations of indirect taxes were dealt with in my answer to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) of 5 May 1998, Official Report, columns 331–34.

Notes:

1. Income tax payments are calculated on the basis that the households receive no tax reliefs other than the standard allowances and have income only from employment. All earners are assumed to pay Class 1 national insurance contributions at the contracted-in rate.

2. Earnings are taken to be the median gross weekly earnings of all full-time male employees on adult rates with pay unaffected by absence. (Median earnings are more representative of the population as a whole than mean) The level of earnings in 1998–99 is based on a stylised assumption in line with the actual outturn for the year to January 1998.

3. In line with the convention in the Tax Benefit Reference Manual, Child Benefit is treated as a negative Income Tax.

Windfall Tax

Mr. Todd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will recalculate Table 1.2 of the FSBR with figures for (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–2000 to include the windfall tax and associated spending. [39854]

Mr. Darling: Estimates of the expected receipts from the windfall tax are given in Table B9 and estimates of the associated spending are given in Table B11 of the March 1998 Financial Statement and Budget Report (FSBR). Table 1.2 can be recalculated to include the windfall tax and associated spending by adding the windfall tax receipts net of associated spending to the figures presented.

Piper Alarms

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the levying of VAT on Piper alarms; and if he will assess the advantages of exempting such alarms from VAT. [41932]

Dawn Primarolo: Piper alarms (and similar alarm systems which enable people with disabilities to alert specified people or control centres that they are in distress) are already fully relieved from VAT when bought by disabled people and charities which serve their needs.

Customs and Excise

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many HM Customs and Excise personnel were employed (a) in countering smuggling of alcohol and tobacco products and (b) in total, on (i) 31 December 1996, (ii) 31 December 1997 and (iii) the most recent date for which figures are available. [41871]

Dawn Primarolo: Countering alcohol and tobacco smuggling is a part of the duties of all the Department's front line anti-smuggling staff, who are deployed to deal with a wide range of import prohibitions and restrictions; in this they are backed up by specialist intelligence and investigation staff. The only staff who deal exclusively with excise smuggling are Excise Verification Officers, whose responsibility is to counter smuggling from the Single Market. Their numbers were as follows:

At 31 December 1996: 285

At 1 April 1998: 330.

The total number of staff employed by Customs was as follows:

At 31 December 1996: 23,571

At 31 December 1997: 23,475

At 1 May 1998: 23,450.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Council Rents

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list, in order, the London boroughs by (a) percentage change and (b) cash terms change, in council rent collected for each of the last four years. [41154]

Mr. Raynsford: The information requested is not collected in the requisite form by my Department.

Data are collected through the Housing Subsidies and Grants Claim form by the Department on potential rent income and on actual rent outstanding at the end of the latest financial year. Deducting the latter from the former would provide an estimate of the current year's rent collected within the year. However, these particular responses on the form are not audited, the figures would not cover any rent collected after the end of the year, and not all authorities provide the rent outstanding figures.

The Audit Commission's Citizen Charter performance indicators for local authorities include an indicator on the percentage of rent collected.

Lorries

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what costs have been incurred so far in strengthening bridges to accommodate 40 tonne lorries; and what estimate he has made of the costs of works yet to be undertaken. [41902]

Ms Glenda Jackson: For Trunk Roads in England, where assessment indicates that bridge strengthening work is required for a bridge to carry 40 tonne lorries, the work is then grouped with nearby maintenance and construction works so as to produce a programme which is most economical and least disruptive to road users. Consequently, contracts specify a range of work and it is not easy to separate the costs attributable to strengthening work alone.

The Agency estimated at the start of financial year 1997/98 that it needed some £240m to complete the bridge strengthening programme for Trunk Roads in England.

In addition, over the period 1991/92 to 1998/99, central Government have made £913m available to Local Authorities for expenditure on bridge works. It is not possible at this stage to provide an accurate estimate of necessary future strengthening work.

Hydrofluorocarbon

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had with his EU counterparts concerning hydrofluorocarbon emissions. [41905]

Mr. Meacher: The Government are in regular contact with other European Member States to discuss how the European Community and its Member States can meet the targets that were set in the Kyoto Protocol. The Environment Council in June will consider how to develop measures to reduce emissions of greenhouse gases, including hydrofluorocarbons. The Government will be issuing a consultation paper later in the summer on policy options for meeting their commitments.

Air Freight (Wales)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received on the possible expansion and use of small airports to transport freight in Wales. [42240]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My Department has received no representations on this particular matter.

Small Commercial Vessels

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 6 May 1998, Official Report, column 392, which of the 11 certifying authorities listed in Annex A operate in the North of Scotland. [42127]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to my previous answer of 6 May 1998, Official Report, columns 392–94.

Motorcycle Parking

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had with local authorities in London regarding the increase in provision of motorcycle only parking in prominent locations. [42227]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I and my officials have had a number of discussions with local authorities about parking in London although none specifically covered motorcycle parking. However, our new Traffic Management and Parking Guidance for London, a copy of which is in the Library, includes, in particular, advice that local authorities should consider the need for motorcycle parking in developing their approach to local traffic planning.

Leaded Paint

Miss Melanie Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 28 April 1998, Official Report, column 88, on leaded paint, what are the terms of reference for the Building Research Establishment's consultation on behalf of the Department; and when its findings are to be published. [42263]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 18 May 1998]: The Building Research Establishment was principally commissioned to:

1. Review the information and advice presented in the Department's current Lead in Paint leaflet (published March 1984), specifically with regard to modern methods of safe removal of leaded paint, taking into account waste disposal aspects and liaising with English Heritage, the British Coatings Federation and any other interested parties to be identified following discussions with the Department.
2. Draft the test for a revised edition of the leaflet and liaise with the Department in its production.

A subsidiary part of the commission was to:

3. Review the current situation regarding the presence of old leaded paint and its potential impact on human health in other countries of the European Union.
4. Review the impact in the other countries of the European Union of the derogation in the European Community Marketing and Use Directive (89/677/EEC) allowing limited use of lead paint in certain historic properties, works of art and scheduled monuments.

The final report should be submitted to the Department in July 1998. A copy will be placed in the House of Commons Library. It is now intended to publish the revised version of the leaflet on lead in paint by the beginning of June.

Motor Cycles

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he has taken to permit powered two-wheel vehicles to use bus lanes, on a national basis. [42316]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 18 May 1998]: The Government have said that they will welcome proposals from interested local authorities for fully monitored experimental schemes in which powered two wheelers were permitted to use bus lanes, so that all the implications can be studied. After such trials, it will take a view on whether or not the practice is one that might be encouraged on a national basis.

Child Agricultural Employment

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will raise from 13 years the age at which a person can lawfully drive a tractor on a farm. [42610]

Angela Eagle: The Health and Safety Commission is currently reviewing the legislation which sets the current limit at 13 years of age—the Agriculture (Avoidance of Accidents to Children) Regulations 1958. I am awaiting its advice on the outcome of this review.

Merchant Navy

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures he will take to increase the numbers of new officer recruits to the Merchant Navy; and if he will make a statement. [42547]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We are committed to increasing the numbers of British trained seafarers. A new seafarer training support scheme—SMarT—began on 1 April 1998 which consolidates and expands on the previous training support schemes. For the financial year 1998–99, SMarT has a budget 30% greater than the total paid out in grants for seafarer training in 1997–98.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will take steps to reduce employment costs in the Merchant Navy; and if he will make a statement. [42548]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister established a Shipping Working Group late last year to examine ways to promote the interests of British shipping and British seafarers. One of the areas the Shipping Working Group examined was the employment environment for British seafarers. The Deputy Prime Minister is currently considering the recommendations of the Shipping Working Group.

Building Regulations

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many responses he has received to the public consultation on his proposals for amendments to Approved Document B to the Building Regulations 1991; and if he will list the organisations and individuals who submitted these responses. [42697]

Angela Eagle: The closing date for responses to the public consultation on the proposal to revise Approved Document B was 31 March 1998 and a list of those who responded was deposited in the Libraries of both Houses on 6 May 1998. The number of responses on this date was 172.

Water Companies

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action his Department is taking to address the concerns of fire service and insurance organisations regarding the practice of some water companies of reducing mains water pressure in order to reduce leakage rates. [42699]

Angela Eagle: My Department has set up a National Liaison Group to improve the way that the water industry and fire service work together. Representatives of the fire service and the water companies on the Group are preparing a Code of Practice to facilitate better co-operation. Water pressure will be one of the issues covered. Following the Water Summit, water companies are working towards meeting their mandatory leakage targets in a variety of ways including the repair of customers' supply pipes and repair and replacement of mains. The Office of Water Services continues to ensure that any reductions in water pressure do not jeopardize water companies' statutory duties with regard to mains pressure and the delivery of water.

Delivery Vehicles (London)

Sir Patrick Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to restrict the access of delivery vehicles to Central London during daylight hours. [41846]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Traffic management on most roads in central London is the responsibility of the boroughs. The boroughs already have powers to restrict loading and unloading and the Government have no plans to change them. As noted in the White Paper on proposals for modernising the governance of London, the management of freight traffic on the capital's roads will be an important policy area within the integrated transport strategy for London that the new Mayor will have a duty to produce.

Road Planning

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what directions he has issued to local authority engineers to require them to be more conversant with the needs and safety requirements of powered two-wheel vehicles and pedal cycles when planning road layouts. [42324]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no power to issue such directions to local authority officials. A range of technical guidance exists on providing for the needs of two-wheeled vehicle users. This includes "Transport in the Urban Environment" published by the Institution of Highways and Transportation in collaboration with my Department, Design Bulletin 32 on the layout considerations of roads and footpaths, produced by my Department, and "Cycle-friendly Infrastructure" produced jointly by the Institution of Highways and Transportation, the Bicycle Association, the CTC and the Department. In addition, there is an extensive range of advice on providing for cyclists within our Traffic Advisory Leaflets and other material. This is listed in our cycling bibliography that is sent free to all local authorities.

Road Maintenance

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what mechanisms he has developed to ensure that local authorities receive adequate funding for road maintenance, with particular reference to repairing the types of damage which are hazardous to cycles and motorcycles. [42326]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government are committed to making best use of the existing road network. Future levels of funding for local road maintenance are under consideration in the Comprehensive Spending Review. It is for local authorities to plan their road maintenance, taking account of the needs of all groups of road users.

Information

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 12 May 1998, Official Report, columns 65–66, on freedom of information, what factors determine which inquiries are monitored. [42687]

Angela Eagle: The responses to inquirers are co-ordinated when there are a number of inquiries from an individual, covering a range of topics, addressed to different parts of HSE and where there could be a risk that, inadvertently, inaccuracies or inconsistencies might occur.

Shellfish Waters

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when a decision will be reached on the designation as shellfish waters of each of the remaining major estuaries in Devon; and what factors underlie the delays in reaching the decision to date. [42624]

Angela Eagle: The EC Directive concerning the quality of waters for shellfish was formally transposed in England and Wales by means of secondary legislation in June 1997. The legislation replaced the administrative arrangements under which the Directive had previously been implemented and was the first step in a process to review implementation policy, including designations. Since the legislation was enacted, work has been proceeding with the review. A review of water quality standards for some of the Directive's parameters has been completed and discussions have been held with the shellfish industry, MAFF and CEFAS (Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science) to produce a candidate list of new areas for designation, and a public consultation paper on these issues is in preparation. We expect to issue this by the summer recess, but the timing of final decisions will be dependent on the response to the consultation exercise.

Severn Rail Tunnel

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what mechanisms are in place to ensure safety in the Severn Rail Tunnel; what improvements have been made recently to the track in the tunnel and fire safety arrangements; and what further improvements are planned. [42701]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The responsibility for ensuring safety in the Severn Tunnel rests primarily with Railtrack plc. Railtrack is responsible for maintaining the track and structure of the tunnel as well as regulating the flow of rail traffic through it. Railtrack contracts the maintenance of the tunnel to specialist contractors who undertake inspection, testing, maintenance and renewal work. Railtrack has management systems in place which are aimed at ensuring that their contractors carry out necessary work to the required standard.

A programme of major improvement works has been carried out in the tunnel over the past few weeks. This has included track renewal and drainage work. Following the completion of the work, Railtrack removed a temporary speed restriction which they had previously imposed because of poor track condition.

I understand that the Health and Safety Executive's Railway Inspectorate is content with the arrangements relating to fire emergencies, introduced after the publication of its report into the accident in the Severn Tunnel on 7 December 1991.

Railtrack has on-going arrangements in place for the inspection and maintenance of the tunnel.

Housing Land

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress he has made in obtaining an assessment of the amount of previously developed land available for housing, announced in his policy document, "Planning for the Communities of the Future" on 23 February. [42966]

Mr. Caborn: My Department has worked with the Local Government Management Board, English Partnerships, Ordnance Survey and local authorities to establish a method of providing a consistent assessment of previously developed land which may be available for housing or other development, as the first step towards a complete Land Use Database for England.

Key features of the approach are to meet the needs of a number of organisations from a single data collection exercise, and to use information already held by the local authorities wherever possible, to avoid duplication of effort. Local authorities will be asked to draw up a list of previously developed sites along with information about the location, area, planning status and other relevant characteristics of each site. This will be done to a common format and using standard definitions that will be set out in guidance being developed jointly by DETR, Local Government Management Board, English Partnerships and Ordnance Survey following consultation with a number of local authorities.

English Partnerships will contract teams of surveyors which will visit each local authority to complete the data collection and to collect additional information about certain sites on the potential for redevelopment. Ordnance Survey will provide quality assurance on the geographical attributes of the data, and develop the list of sites into a 'map database' showing the site boundaries. Ordnance Survey will also develop a plan for extending the coverage of the database to other land uses, and for keeping the resulting National Land Use Database up to date.

Data collection will start in the summer. English Partnerships intends to publish information on an initial set of sites suitable for redevelopment by the end of the year; summary results for all sites should be available by March 1999. Meanwhile, local authorities will have consistent information on the amounts of previously developed land which may be available for housing to assist in the drawing up of national and regional targets for the reuse of land.

The database will also have value for other organisations. For example, officials are discussing with Urban Mines, an environmental NGO, which launches its own "Brownfield Sites" project today, to ensure the two projects are complementary. The intention is to secure agreements to make the information more widely available, including appropriate charging for commercial use.

We shall be discussing this work as it progresses with the Urban Task Force.

London Underground

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many delays to London Underground services have been caused by (a) broken rails, (b) signal failures, (c) obstructions on the track and (d) all causes in total, for each of the last five years. [37271]

Ms Glenda Jackson [pursuant to her reply, 6 April 1998, c. 6]: I understand from London Underground that the information requested is as shown in the table.

Cause of delay	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97	1997–98
Broken/cracked rails	31	8	30	22	56
Signalling	1,783	1,718	1,862	1,891	2,181
Objects on track	217	208	248	327	314
All causes	35,952	34,150	34,463	34,767	38,840

TREASURY

Public Opinion Research

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 30 March 1998, Official Report, column 441, if he will publish the findings of the public opinion research conducted by (a) Fishburn Hedges on presentational aspects of the individual savings account and (b) Ogilvy and Mather on presentational aspects of the working families tax credit. [38217]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson [holding answer 7 April 1998]: The Chancellor announced in the Pre-Budget Report that he was considering proposals for an individual savings account and a working family tax credit, and that he would be consulting widely on these in the run-up to the Budget. Fishburn Hedges and Ogilvy and Mather were employed by the Treasury to look at the presentational aspects of the proposals. Their appointment was entirely consistent with long-established rules on the appointment of consultants by Government. The Chancellor drew on their work in preparing the Budget.

Market Research

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 12 February 1998, Official Report, column 384, (1) if he will publish for the survey of PEP/TESSA holders (a) the name of the company chosen to conduct the survey, (b) the cost of the contract and (c) the brief given to the opinion research company in respect of the people to be interviewed; and if he will place the results of the survey in the Library; [38893]

(2) if he will publish for each of the omnibus surveys measuring characteristics of PEP/TESSA holders, amounts saved and savers' attitudes to tax-free savings accounts (a) the names of the companies involved, (b) the cost of each survey and (c) the brief given to each company in respect of the people to be interviewed; and if he will place the results of the surveys in the Library; [38892]

(3) if he will publish the questions asked in each of the omnibus surveys into the characteristics of PEP/TESSA holders, amounts saved and savers' attitudes to tax-free savings accounts; [38890]

(4) if he will publish the questions asked in the survey of PEP/TESSA holders. [38891]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson [holding answer 20 April 1998]: The Inland Revenue added questions to two Omnibus surveys, conducted by the Office for National Statistics (ONS) and MORI Financial Services (MFS); arranged for a follow-up survey by MFS; and purchased existing analyses from NOP's Financial Research Survey. The cost of the information was as follows:

NOP: £1,350

ONS: £24,400

MFS: £14,500.

Details on the specifications of all the surveys and a summary of the main findings have been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Tax Law Rewrite Project

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what further developments there have been on the Tax Law Rewrite Project. [42904]

Dawn Primarolo: The Tax Law Rewrite project aims to bring clarity to our direct tax legislation, making the tax system more accessible to taxpayers, and their advisers. The Inland Revenue have today published a document which reviews the recent progress of the project and outlines its work programme for 1998–99. Copies have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

The Rewrite is a major task, and we are committed to doing it well. We are also committed to continuing on the basis of full and open consultation. Such consultation has been the hallmark of this project from the beginning and will, I am confident, ultimately ensure that it is a highly successful one.

MI5

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what briefings were given by Treasury Ministers on the funding of MI5; what meetings have taken place between Treasury Ministers and journalists at which MI5 was discussed; and which journalists were involved. [39197]

Mr. Darling: No such briefings or discussions have taken place about the Security Service's budget. As I announced in a written answer to my hon. Friend the Member for East Ham (Mr. Timms) on 30 October 1997, Official Report, column 884, intelligence agencies are being reviewed as part of the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review. The terms of reference have been placed in the library.

Consultation Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the consultation papers published since 1 May 1997 giving the date of publication, closing date for submissions and the number of respondents. [42246]

Mrs. Liddell: Following is a list of the public consultation papers published by the Treasury since 1 May 1997, with the publication dates, closing dates for submissions and number of respondents. It does not include consultations which have been announced, but for which no consultation papers have yet been issued; nor does it cover a number of taskforces and advisory groups which may also have a consultative role.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Public Bodies

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many and what proportion of his Department's appointees to non-departmental public bodies are (i) aged under 25, (ii) aged 25 to 30 and (iii) aged 31 to 35 years. [40736]

Mr. Chris Smith: Since the publication of the Commissioner for Public Appointments' Guidance, statistics on the ages of appointees have been routinely collected. Details of the ages of those appointed before this date are not available in all cases.

Based on the information available, four serving appointees are under the age of 35, of whom one person is aged between 25 and 30 and the rest between 31 and 35 years. This is approximately 1% of the total.

These figures include all appointments which fall under my responsibility or where my role is to advise my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and, through him, Her Majesty the Queen. The figures include appointments made or recommended by previous Secretaries of State as well as by me.

The Government are committed to encouraging a wide range of candidates to apply for positions on the boards of public bodies, reflecting the diverse society in which we live.

This includes encouraging more young people to put themselves forward as potential candidates for public appointments. All appointments are made on merit, and candidates must demonstrate that they have the necessary skills and experience to match the needs of the public body on which they wish to serve.

Arts Awards

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proportion of awards made by (a) the Arts Council and (b) the London Arts Board have been directed towards black and minority ethnic groups in each year between 1987–88 and 1996–97. [41359]

Mr. Fisher: Figures for grant-in-aid awards from the Arts Council of England and the London Arts Board are not available under the Black and Minority Ethnic heading. However, figures are available under the broader Cultural Diversity heading.

Figures for grant-in-aid awards, from the Arts Council of England and the Regional Arts Boards to the Cultural Diversity sector, are available only from 1990–91 onwards. These are set out in the following table:

Year	Total Grants Awarded (£)	Total Cultural Diversity Awards (£)	Cultural Diversity (Per cent.)
1996–97	123,425,000	2,492,000	2.02
1995–96	123,143,000	2,394,000	1.94
1994–95	118,404,000	2,490,000	2.10
1993–94	120,929,000	2,547,000	2.11
1992–93	117,162,000	2,453,000	2.09
1991–92	115,738,000	1,992,000	1.72
1990–91	90,425,000	1,780,000	1.97

Figures for Lottery awards from the Arts Council of England to the Cultural Diversity sector, which can be clearly identified as awards to black and minority ethnic groups, are set out in the following table:

	Number of Black/Minority ethnic awards	Total Black/Minority ethnic awards (£)	Total of awards	Total grants awarded (£)	Black/Minority ethnic (Per cent.)
A4E Main Scheme Rounds 1–3, 1996/97	35	4,382,453	278	38,421,000	14
A4E Express	65	296,961	2,070	8,437,760	3.2
Capital 1995/96–1997/98	29	1,420,000	1,794	842,000,000	0.2
Film 9.1995/1.1998	11	4,305,853	85	49,485,612	9

A number of other awards may have been made which benefited black and minority ethnic groups, but in which the primary applicant was not so identified.

Figures from the London Arts Board for Cultural Diversity awards, where available, are set out in the following table:

Year	Total Cultural Diversity Expenditure (£)	Percentage of total grant expenditure
1995/96	2,237,102	17.9
1994/95	2,260,895	18.4
1993/94	1,817,614	19.4
1992/93	1,786,893	19.2

Listed Sites and Buildings

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many (a) listed buildings, (b) scheduled ancient monuments, (c) conservation areas, (d) local or national nature reserves, (e) sites of special scientific interest, (f) areas of outstanding natural beauty and (g) world heritage sites, are currently recorded. [42274]

Mr. Banks: The information requested, in respect of England, is as follows:

(a) Listed Buildings: 365,846[1] entries on the statutory list of buildings of special architectural or historic interest;

(b) Scheduled Ancient Monuments: 17,538[2] entries in the schedule of ancient monuments;

(c) Conservation Areas: 8,758;

(d) Local Nature Reserves: 593, National Nature Reserves: 194;

(e) Sites of Special Scientific Interest: 3,987;

(f) Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty: 37, and

(g) World Heritage Sites: 11 (the UK as a whole, including dependent territories, has a total of 17).

[1] This figures relates to list entries which sometimes include more than one building. It is estimated that the number of buildings listed is between 450,000 and 500,000.

[2] This figure relates to entries which sometimes cover more than one monument. It is estimated that the number of sites and monuments scheduled is about 23,000.

Lottery Grants

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the total (a) number and (b) value of the grants made by the Heritage Lottery Fund in the categories of (i) land, (ii) buildings, (iii) museums and galleries, (iv) industrial, transport and maritime and (v) manuscripts since its establishment in 1994. [42336]

Mr. Banks: As at 24 March 1998, the breakdown of awards made by the Heritage Lottery Fund since 1994 is as follows:

Heritage sector	Number of awards	Value (£ million)
Land	230	66
Buildings	905	308
Museums and galleries	349	432
Industrial transport and maritime	86	64
Manuscripts and archives	78	51

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the total (a) number and (b) value of the grants made by the National Heritage Memorial Fund in the categories of (i) land, (ii) buildings, (iii) museums and galleries, (iv) industrial, transport and maritime and (v) manuscripts since 1980. [42338]

Mr. Banks: Information on the number and value of awards made by the National Heritage Memorial Fund by heritage sector since 1980 is not readily available. However, the Fund has made 1,144 awards to date with a total value of £199m.

Film Industry

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has for further Government support for the British film industry. [41876]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The recommendations of the Government's Film Policy Review Group were announced on 25 April. These set out an agenda for action by Government and industry in support of British film. Copies of the report 'A Bigger Picture' have been placed in the Library of the House.

On 12 May, I co-chaired a meeting of an Action Committee, made up of representatives of key sectors of the British film industry, which will oversee the implementation of the report's initiatives.

Sport (Women)

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make an announcement about the Government's adoption of the 1994 Brighton Declaration on Women in Sport. [42967]

Mr. Banks: I am delighted to announce that the UK Government have adopted the 1994 Brighton Declaration on Women and Sport. I wish to place on record my thanks to my hon. Friend for all his assistance in the past for his role in meeting this objective.

Our decision to adopt the Declaration further indicates our determination to improve opportunities for women at all levels in sport, whether as participants, competitors, coaches or administrators.

Through our policy of 'Sport for All' we shall continue to work with the Sports Councils and others to promote and develop opportunities in sport for women regardless of where they live, social background, age or ability.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Environmental Protection Agency

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps have been taken to establish an independent Environmental Protection Agency in Northern Ireland. [41620]

Mr. Paul Murphy: No steps have been taken to establish an Environmental Protection Agency in Northern Ireland.

The Environment and Heritage Service, a Next Steps Agency within the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland was set up on 1 April 1996 to assume operational responsibility for environmental issues.

Prisoners

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to her answer of 6 May 1998, Official Report, columns 412–13, on prisoners, if she will list for each of the years from 1998 to 2002 and for the following five years the number of prisoners in each category expected to be released who are serving life or other indeterminate sentences. [41712]

Mr. Ingram: As a specific tariff is not set for individual indeterminate sentence prisoners in Northern Ireland, the information sought is not readily available. Figures provided previously have been broad approximations for indicative purposes. Given the small numbers involved, disaggregation of these figures by affiliation and by year of possible release could be misleading and could result in individual prisoners being identified or drawing incorrect inferences about the future handling of their cases.

The table is an estimate of the number of indeterminate sentence prisoners at HMP Maze who could be released during the calendar years 1998, 1999 and 2000. The figures include prisoners in organizations which do not have a cease-fire and exclude prisoners who have already been given a provisional release date or are at an advanced stage of consultation about release.

	Number of indeterminate prisoners
Total number of prisoners	99
Estimated releases in 1998	0
Estimated releases in 1999	6
Estimated releases in 2000	14
Remaining after December 2000	79

Beef Steer Prices

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the average price paid to the producer for a (a) 400 kilogram and (b) 350 kilogram deadweight beef steer in each month of the last five years for which figures are readily available. [41658]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Information is not collated on the basis requested. However, details of the average deadweight price for all steers in each month since January 1993 are set out in the table.

Northern Ireland deadweight steer price (P/KG) 1993–98

Beef Exports

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if beef exports to the European Union have been resumed; what assistance is being given to the beef industry to regain markets in Europe; and if she will make a statement. [41622]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the reply given to him on 11 May 1998, Official Report, column 26.

Referendum

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to her oral statement of 22 April 1998, Official Report, column 940, if she will list the amounts paid or due to be paid to the various parties in connection with the forthcoming referendum. [42146]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 18 May 1998]: The Government have no plans to give any money to parties in connection with the forthcoming referendum. The parties are, however, entitled to a free mail shot in the referendum. It is for the parties to approach the Post Office to arrange distribution of their material, and the Post Office then recovers the cost from the Government. Until that has happened, we do not know exactly how much money the mail shot will cost.

Ordnance Survey

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Ordnance Survey of Northern Ireland in 1998–99. [42905]

Marjorie Mowlam: For 1998–99, the following performance targets have been set for Ordnance Survey of Northern Ireland:

Output

1. To complete the digital conversation programme by 1999–2000 financial year by converting 1,740 large scale map sheets to digital format.
2. To survey 65,000 new survey units.
3. To update the digital topographic database with 26,000 survey units of change.

Quality of Service

4. To despatch within 7 working days 96% of customers orders for small and large scale basic format maps.

Efficiency

5. To reduce unit costs so that the weighted mean percentage reduction of selected representative activities is 2%.

Financial

6. To recover from the sale of goods and services 35% of the total costs incurred by the Agency.

Compensation Agency

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she has agreed to the retention of Next Steps Agency status by the Compensation Agency after 31 March 1998; what future plans the Compensation Agency has prepared; and when they will be published. [42906]

Mr. Ingram: I have agreed that the Compensation Agency retains its status as a Next Steps agency from 1 April 1998 to 31 March 2000. The Agency will publish today its Corporate Plan and Business Plan. The Plans explain the Agency's business and organisation and set out the assumptions about workloads and resources which underpin the plans and targets.

Planning Service

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Department of the Environment's Planning Service in 1998–99. [42907]

Marjorie Mowlam: For 1998–99, the following performance targets have been set for the Planning Service:

To publish the following development plans in draft form by 31 March 1999:

Cookstown

Armagh Countryside proposals

Craigavon

To adopt the following development plans by 31 March 1999:

Belfast Road Lines

Antrim Area Plan alteration

Quality of Service

1. To achieve a customer satisfaction level of 80 in relation to the determination of planning applications.
2. To take 75 per cent. of Minor planning applications to District Council within 8 weeks.
3. To take 65 per cent. of Major planning applications to District Council within 8 weeks.
4. To issue 60 per cent. of all planning decisions with 7 working days of final District Council consultation.
5. To reduce the proportion of invalid planning applications received by 5 per cent. to 25 per cent. overall.
6. To issue responses to 93 per cent. of property inquiries within 10 working days.

Efficiency

1. To achieve 3 per cent. efficiency gains on running cost expenditure.
2. To reduce Property Certificate Unit costs by 1.5 per cent.
3. To achieve an average Unit Cost for planning applications not exceeding £2,885.

Financial Performance

1. To maintain expenditure within cash limits and to approved budget plans.
2. To maintain full recovery of the costs of determining planning applications.
3. To maintain full recovery of the costs of responding to property inquiries.

Environment and Heritage Service

Ms Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Department of the Environment's Environment and Heritage Service in 1998–99. [42908]

Marjorie Mowlam: For 1998–99, the following performance targets have been set for the Environment and Heritage Service.

Volume of Output

Bring about a 10 per cent. reduction in the number of 'high' and 'medium' severity water pollution incidents by the year 2000 on 1996 figures.

Establish regulatory systems under the Waste and Contaminated Land (NI) Order 1997 for the registration of carriers, enforcement provision, fly tipping and special waste.

Produce for the Department a draft Waste Management Strategy by October 1998.

Declare 17 Areas of Special Scientific Interest (ASSI).

Submit proposals for the classification of three Special Protection Areas under the EC Birds Directive.

Complete the fieldwork for the NI Countryside Survey 2000 by December 1998.

Schedule 70 historic monuments to bring the total to 1,365.

Complete the resurvey of historic buildings in 24 wards.

Redesign the EHS home page and establish a regular updating system by 31 December 1998.

Quality of Customer Service

Provide a round the clock response for all water pollution incidents reported and begin investigation of such incidents within 24 hours.

Respond to 90 per cent. of written inquiries or requests for information within 15 working days.

Issue 85 per cent. Water Act consents, wildlife licences, ASSI and scheduled monument consents within the timescales quoted in our Customer Service Guides.

Efficiency

Achieve 3 per cent. efficiency gains on running cost expenditure.

Set specific unit cost targets for 1999–2000 for outputs.

Monitor and maintain expenditure within cash limits.

Information

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if her Department operates a monitoring exercise of persistent inquirers for information. [42641]

Mr. Paul Murphy: No.

PRIME MINISTER

Sierra Leone

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make available the minutes of meetings of himself and any of his officials with President Kabbah or his representatives to (a) the public, (b) HM Customs and Excise investigation into the Sandline affair and (c) the subsequent Foreign Office inquiry. [42092]

Mr. Howard: To ask the Prime Minister who else was present at the meeting between himself and President Kabbah during the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting in Edinburgh; what was discussed; and if the minutes of the meeting will be published. [41968]

The Prime Minister [holding answers 14 May 1998]: Neither I nor my officials have had any formal meetings with President Kabbah, or his representatives. I met him at the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in Edinburgh last October, to which he was invited as my special guest. These contacts were informal and no minutes were taken.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Prime Minister whether briefing on the article published in The Observer on 8 March concerning arms sales to Sierra Leone was requested by his staff. [42058]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 14 May 1998]: No.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he has had in 1998 with President Chirac about arms sales to Africa. [41915]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 14 May 1998]: I have had no discussions in 1998 with President Chirac about arms sales to Africa.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he has had with President Chirac about Sierra Leone in the past four weeks; and if he will give the dates and the main points of discussion. [41917]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 14 May 1998]: I have had no discussions with President Chirac about Sierra Leone in the past four weeks.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will publish the guidelines currently used by Ministers and officials on the manner of responding to written parliamentary questions indicating any changes made since 7 May 1997. [42039]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 14 May 1998]: Guidance to Ministers on their responsibilities to Parliament is set out in the Ministerial Code.

Guidance to officials on drafting answers to Parliamentary Questions, including the responsibilities of civil servants to help Ministers fulfil their obligations, was set out as part of the then Government's response to the Public Service Committee's Report on "Ministerial Accountability and Responsibility" in November 1996. This advice has not altered. Copies of both documents are available in the Libraries of the House.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 11 May 1998, Official Report, column 20, what weight the Government place on the decision of the Lord Advocate, stated on 6 October 1995, that proof of the case against the two Libyans accused in respect of Lockerbie does not depend on evidence which may be given by Mr. James T. Thurman; and what independent assessment it has made of the relevance of Mr. Thurman's evidence. [42611]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 18 May 1998]: The assessment of the evidence in any Scottish criminal case is a matter within the exclusive jurisdiction of my noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate. My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate exercises that jurisdiction independently and objectively and it would be quite inappropriate to invite another party to consider that which has already been properly considered.

North Korea

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister when he plans to visit the Republic of Korea. [42360]

The Prime Minister: I have no immediate plans to visit the Republic of Korea.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his discussions with the President of the Republic of Korea, with particular reference to his policy towards North Korea. [42359]

The Prime Minister: I discussed at length the situation on the Korean peninsula with President Kim at our meeting on 2 April. The Government believe that meaningful dialogue between North and South Korea is the best means of achieving peace and stability on the peninsula. We welcome President Kim's policy towards the North as a positive step towards this.

Duty-free Shopping

Mr. Gale: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 18 December 1997, Official Report, column 265, on duty-free shopping, what estimate he has made of the potential number of job losses that will arise from the ending of the trade in duty-free goods; whether, during the UK presidency, the Commission carried out the proposed survey; and if he will make a statement. [42343]

The Prime Minister: The Department of Transport, Environment and the Regions has undertaken a study into the effect on the transport sector of the abolition of intra-EU duty and tax free sales in 1999. During the UK Presidency, the Commission has not undertaken a survey of the potential number of job losses that may arise from the abolition of duty and tax free sales within the EU. The position of the United Kingdom remains that it would not oppose a study should there be a consensus amongst member states in favour of such a study.

WALES

NHS (Staff Views)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales in what ways he seeks to obtain the views of staff in the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [40826]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I have instigated regular meetings with representatives of NHS Staff Organisations, both at Ministerial and officials level where a wide range of issues are discussed. In addition, the Department will be undertaking public consultation on proposals to reconfigure NHS Trusts. Trades Unions in the health service will be consulted directly.

Special Needs

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to involve parents in formulating policies for children with special needs; and if he will make a statement. [41649]

Mr. Hain: The Welsh Office Green Paper on special educational needs (SEN), "The BEST for Special Education", issued last October emphasised the key role of parents. The consultation attracted a large number of responses, including responses from organisations representing parents and individual parents. We are giving careful consideration to all responses in deciding on the way ahead.

Breast Cancer

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by unitary authority the incidence of breast cancer in women in Wales over the past three years. [41790]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The following table shows the number of new registrations of female breast cancer in each of the last three years for which data are available.

Air Freight

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received on the possible expansion and use of minor airports in Wales to transport freight. [42158]

Mr. Hain: A number of the responses to the Government's consultation exercise into the development of an integrated transport policy referred to the importance of developing civil aviation services and airports in Wales, including the transport of freight. I am also undertaking a series of meetings with airport and airline owners and operators to assess the potential for establishing scheduled air services between north and south Wales.

Our policies will shortly be set out in a White Paper, complemented to reflect the particular circumstances and needs of Wales by a Welsh Office Transport Policy Statement.

Transport

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives are planned to help reduce the amount of (a) traffic and (b) freight on Welsh roads. [42226]

Mr. Hain: Our plans to develop an integrated transport policy will be set out in a UK wide White Paper on transport to be published shortly. At around the same time, a Welsh Transport Policy Statement will be published drawing out those issues of particular relevance and importance to Wales including, of course, measures to reduce congestion on Welsh roads. On freight, we have already taken a significant step forward with this week's announcement of Welsh Office support for the creation of a new Eurofreight terminal in south Wales.

Aerospace Factories

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what visits he has made to aerospace factories in North East Wales; and if he will make a statement. [42454]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friend visited Raytheon Corporate Jets on Friday 1 May of this year. I visited the British Aerospace facility in Broughton on 6 February. The aerospace industry is strategically important to Wales.

Sport

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on publicly funded assistance for people to participate in sport. [42451]

Mr. Ron Davies: Welsh Office support for increasing participation in sport by people of all ages and abilities is channelled through the Sports Council for Wales. In 1998–99, the Welsh Office's grant to the Sports Council is £6.6 million.

In addition, the National Lottery is providing excellent sporting opportunities for the people of Wales. Since it began distributing Lottery funds in 1995, the Sports Council has awarded around £30 million to local schemes which provide a wide range of new or improved sports facilities with long lasting benefits for schools and communities throughout Wales.

Cricket Clubs

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the amounts of Sports Council, Wales money allocated to cricket clubs in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [42452]

Mr. Ron Davies: The allocation of funds to individual sports is an operational matter for the Sports Council for Wales. I will ask the Chief Executive of the Sports Council to write to my hon. Friend with the information he has requested. A copy of his letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Sterling Level

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the impact of the current level of sterling upon export-dependent small businesses in Wales. [42449]

Mr. Hain: I fully recognise the worries of export dependent small businesses in Wales about the current level of the pound. In setting interest rates, the Bank of England takes into account the effect on exchange rates and on exports. The Government's aim is a stable and competitive pound over the medium term. The most important thing is to deliver a stable economic environment—sustained growth, low inflation and sound public finances—while at the same time introducing policies to promote enterprise and investment and raise Britain's sustainable rate of growth. The Government are determined to take a long-term view and not be diverted from this course by short-term pressures.

Hypnotherapy

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many health authorities in Wales funded hypnotherapy treatment in the last year for which figures are available. [42480]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Excluding GP fundholder referrals for which records are not held centrally, only North Wales Health Authority currently funds hypnotherapy treatment.

Information

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if his Department operates a monitoring exercise of persistent inquirers for information. [42642]

Mr. Ron Davies: No.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the operation of the jobseeker's allowance in Wales. [41494]

Mr. Keith Bradley: I have been asked to reply.

The Government are seeking to develop an active modern service that is flexible, efficient and easy to use. This will support promoting jobs not benefit dependency.

The administration of Jobseeker's Allowance is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Barry Jones, dated 18 May 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question on the operation of Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) in Wales.

JSA is delivered jointly by the Employment Services (ES) and the Benefits Agency (BA). The two agencies are accountable for different aspects of JSA delivery; the ES for labour market aspects and the BA for payment aspects and other Social Security benefit services. Areas of joint accountability are kept to a minimum.

The organisational arrangements were shaped by the following operational objectives:

to maximise the extent to which all services for the Jobseeker, including advice on relevant Social Security benefits, are delivered through a Jobcentre; to improve service delivery and reduce administrative costs by streamlining processes and reducing the duplication of functions across the agencies; to achieve an effective partnership between the two separate agencies, whilst maintaining clear lines of accountability and responsibility.

These objectives have a direct bearing on the location of functions, contact with the Jobseeker in the Jobcentre, the division of accountability and responsibility between the BA and the ES and the supporting management arrangements.

Contact with Jobseekers is primarily through the Jobcentre. To support this, there is a minimum requirement to locate certain BA functions in the Jobcentre and, as far as possible, the Jobseeker is seen by the same team of staff.

The level of service offered is underpinned by the Secretary of State's performance targets and the Jobseeker's Charter; the Employment Service also has JSA performance targets agreed with the Secretary of State for Education and Employment. These interrelate to deliver all elements of JSA.

The basis of the relationship between the two agencies is set out in a Memorandum of Understanding. There is regular, formal contact between managers in BA and ES at all levels in order to ensure that the JSA operation is effectively managed and that opportunities are taken jointly to effect any necessary improvements in performance and customer service. For example, there is a national initiative currently underway, examining the options available for improving customer service; Wales is included in this.

There are 93 Jobcentres in Wales, 65 have at least one member of BA staff permanently on site. In addition, 10 Jobcentres have BA member of staff present on a part-time basis and in 4 other Jobcentres ES staff provide BA services through a Service Level Agreement. Of the remaining sites, 5 have access to BA services through a direct phone link in the Jobcentre or through a Public Caller Office situated within the same town.

I hope that this is helpful.

DEFENCE

RAF Signals Engineering Establishment

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Royal Air Force Signals Engineering Establishment for 1998–99. [42973]

Dr. Reid: The Royal Air Force Signals Engineering Establishment Agency's Key Targets for the Financial Year 1998–99 are:

Operational Strategy

KT 1—Reduce the core as far as possible and continue to refine it against the military need.

KT 2—Maintain 100 per cent. of core skills to support likely operations.

Performance Strategy

KT 3—Deliver 100 per cent. of operational tasks to time.

KT 4—Deliver at least 90 per cent. of non-operational tasks to time.

KT 5—Achieve a quality failure rate for completed tasks of less than 4 per cent.

KT 6—Reduce the full cost per Task Manhour by 7 per cent. on FY 96–97.

Personnel Strategy

KT 7—Achieve Investors in People accreditation by 31 December 1998.

Financial Strategy

KT 8—Develop an improved output costing system by 31 March 1999 which will interface effectively with the MOD's overall approach to Resource Accounting and Budgeting.

Information Strategy

KT 9—Complete an Action Plan to resolve the Year 2000 problem by 30 September 1998.

Defence Codification Agency

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Defence Codification Agency for 1998–99. [43072]

Dr. Reid: The Defence Codification Agency's Key Targets for the Financial Year 1998–99 are:

Support to NATO Codification Strategy

KT 1—Meet 85 per cent. of timescales for UK codification requests as defined in Service Level Agreements/Customer Supplier Agreements.

KT 2—Meet 95 per cent. of timescales for international codification requests.

Information Management Strategy

KT 3—Uniquely codify 75 per cent. of new items using a source data.

Efficiency Strategy

KT 4—Reduce the unit cost of codification to less than £51.

KT 5—Reduce the Agency's Running Costs by 10 per cent.

Quality Strategy

KT 6—Reduce the number of post-codification challenges by 5 per cent.

Logistics Support Services Agency

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Logistics Support Services Agency for 1998–99. [43073]

Dr. Reid: The Logistics Support Services Agency's Key Targets for the Financial Year 1998–99 are:

Business Strategy

KT 1—To produce 85% of all deliverables by the target date agreed with the sponsor.

KT 2—To deliver 80% of all outputs at the cost agreed with the sponsor.

KT 3—To produce 90% of all deliverables to the sponsor's complete satisfaction.

KT 4—To achieve a 3% reduction in the cost of a productive hour.

Quality Strategy

KT 5—To succeed at the triennial re-certification and surveillance to BS EN ISO 9001 by 30 September 1998.

Staff Car Mileage Allowance

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total value in real terms of (a) staff car mileage claims paid and (b) staff rail fares paid in each year since 1989–90; and what was the total amount of staff car mileage for which reimbursement was made and the percentage change in each year since 1989–90. [42554]

Mr. Spellar: Unfortunately, the Department does not keep separate records for expenditure on these items back to Financial Year 1989–90. However, data have been retrieved back to 1991 for the amounts paid to civil servants in the Ministry of Defence as reimbursement for the use of their own vehicles on all forms of official duty, although mileage figures are only available since 1994. These are shown in the table; costs are given both as actual in-year figures and at constant 1997–98 prices (i.e. uplifted for inflation by use of the Treasury GDP deflator):

(a) Car mileage claims paid

Financial year	Actual cost	Constant price at 1997–98 values
1991–92	11,800,000	13,954,000
1992–93	11,840,000	13,437,000
1993–94	11,230,000	12,384,000
1994–95	11,500,000	12,493,000
1995–96	12,200,000	12,896,500
1996–97	12,700,000	13,043,000
1997–98	12,100,000	12,100,000

The cost of rail travel undertaken by civil servants on official duty over the same period and given in the same format is as follows:

(b) Cost of rail fares

Financial year	Actual cost	Constant price at 1997–98 values
1993–94	5,229,660	5,767,148
1994–95	4,140,617	4,498,253
1995–96	4,817,745	5,092,796
1996–97	4,888,864	5,020,863
1997–98	4,897,573	4,897,573

The total mileages, and percentage changes by year, which are reflected in the figures provided at (a) above from 1994–95 onwards are as follows:

Financial year	Total mileage (million)	Percentage variation
1994–95	43.8	—
1995–96	46.1	+5
1996–97	47.3	+2.5
1997–98	45.4	–4

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total number of staff of all grades employed by his Department; and what percentage of these staff were eligible to claim a car mileage allowance on 31 March in each year since 1990. [42555]

Dr. Reid: The total number of civilian staff of all grades employed by the Ministry of Defence on 31 March in each year since 1990 are listed in the table.

Year	Number
1990	139,100
1991	138,000
1992	137,300
1993	126,900
1994	123,900
1995	118,000
1996	111,600
1997	111,000
1998	105,900

For each year, all staff with a valid driving licence and vehicle insurance were eligible to claim a car mileage allowance while on detached duties. The Department does not record the number of employees who hold such documents.

Departmental Energy Use

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what was the quantity of (a) oil, (b) gas and (c) electricity purchased for the heating, lighting and powering of all accommodation occupied by his Department within the UK in each year since 1989–90; and what was the total cost in real terms of (a) to (c) in each year; [42553]

(2) what proportion of his Department's energy usage was from (a) renewable energy and (b) combined heating in each year since 1989–90. [42556]

Mr. Spellar: The MOD is committed to energy management and each major site is required to have an Energy Manager, amongst whose responsibilities is the collection of relevant data. However, this material is not held centrally in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Information

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department operates a monitoring exercise of persistent inquirers for information. [42629]

Mr. Spellar: We do not monitor inquiries in such an exercise centrally. We do, however, monitor correspondence from the public sent to Ministers to determine our performance in responding to it. Where a correspondent has persistently corresponded with the Department on a particular issue and has been given the fullest possible answer, several times, it is our practice to send a formal letter stating that no further purpose will be served by continuing the correspondence. This decision is taken by an official at Grade 7 level or above and in accordance with Exemption 9 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information: Voluminous or vexatious requests.

Correspondence

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he plans to reply to the letter of 17 March from the hon. Member for Totnes, about Mrs. K. Graymore and the Dartmouth Royal Naval College. [42696]

Mr. Spellar: My office has no record of receiving the hon. Member's letter. We have, however, now obtained a copy and a reply will be sent as soon as possible.

Defence Analytical Services Agency

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Quinquennial Review of the Defence Analytical Services Agency; and what key targets have been set for the Agency for 1998–99. [43074]

Dr. Reid: The Defence Analytical Services Agency (DASA) was set up in 1992 and the Quinquennial Review of the Agency has now been completed. The Evaluation Phase of this Review concluded that the Agency had made remarkable strides in a short time, had succeeded in providing its customers with an improved standard of service and was well positioned to take advantage of the gains made in its first five years. I am placing a copy of this Report in the Library of the House.

The Prior Options Phase of the Review concluded that the status of DASA as a Defence Agency should be extended for a further five years and that ownership of the Agency should be exercised by the Department's Principal Finance Officer. These recommendations have been accepted. A revised Framework Document for the Agency is being prepared and a copy of this will be placed in the Library of the House in due course.

The following key performance targets have been set for DASA for 1998–99.

1. To meet at least 95% of the targets set in Service Level Agreements and Project Agreements.
2. To have at least 90% of customers saying they are at least satisfied with the timeliness, quality of work and helpfulness of staff in the annual Customer Satisfaction Survey covering all aspects of the business.
3. To have at least 25% of customers who received DASA services in 1997–98 and 1998–99 report an improvement in DASA's services provided in the annual Customer Satisfaction Survey.
4. Within existing resources, to make "UK Defence Statistics" and other related corporate information available via electronic dissemination within the Department.
5. To deliver efficiency gains of 2.5% of the Agency's initial running cost allocation.

Ministry of Defence Police Agency

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Ministry of Defence Police Agency for 1998–99. [43075]

Dr. Reid: The following Key Targets have been set out for the Ministry of Defence Police Agency:

By 31 March 1999 to have completed all remaining Service Level Agreements with the Agency customers.

By 31 March 1999 to have established an MDP Office Watch initiative at a minimum of 20 MOD locations nation-wide.

In financial year 1998–99 to have in place local Policing and Security plans at each MDP policed establishment.

By 31 March 1999, in accordance with Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary's recommendations, to have put in place agreed Area Policing Teams (APT) performance indicators which will enable the Agency to set targets for APT performance improvement in financial year 1999–2000.

To achieve across Chief Constable MDP's retained element of the MDP budget, an overall efficiency saving of 2.5 per cent.

To contribute to the achievement of Departmentally Mandated Standards for project CAPITAL (introduction of Resource Accounting and Budgeting).

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Insolvency Practitioners

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the regulation of insolvency practitioners and of their charges. [42804]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Mr. Justice Ferris is chairing a working party on remuneration of office holders which is expected to report shortly. Their terms of reference are to consider and make recommendations concerning the basis on which the courts should fix remuneration in those relatively rare cases where the courts are involved. However, we shall give careful consideration to how any recommendations they might make may be applied in other cases.

The fees of an insolvency practitioner are subject to approval by the creditors in most forms of insolvency procedure. The authorising bodies have issued practitioners with guidance in this area, directed particularly to ensuring that creditors are provided with sufficient information to enable them to form a judgment as to whether the fees sought are reasonable in the circumstances of the case.

Under the Insolvency Act 1986, only authorised persons may act as insolvency practitioners. Authorisation may be granted either by a recognised professional body or directly by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. Professional bodies are recognised on the basis that they have rules to ensure that practitioners have appropriate educational qualifications and experience and that they remain fit and proper.

Practitioners have been subject to a formal programme of monitoring visits by their authorising bodies since 1994. These visits are designed to assess whether a practitioner is fit and proper and to promote compliance with statutory obligations and best practice. Monitoring has shown that the majority of practitioners now have acceptable procedures. Where failures in compliance are identified, undertakings are sought where appropriate and, in more serious cases, the authorising body will consider whether further action is required.

In November 1996, a working party was established with representatives from the insolvency professional bodies and my Department's Insolvency Service, to review the current state of regulation and to consider how it might be made more effective in the public interest. The working party issued a consultative document in December last year and is now well advanced in reviewing responses and forming its preliminary views. They expect to submit their final report later this year and we shall certainly give their findings and conclusions very careful consideration.

Arms Exports

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer of 29 April 1998, Official Report, column 151–52, what is the total value of Export Credits Guarantee Department claims made by manufacturers, but not recovered from the courts of (a) Venezuela, (b) Jordan, (c) Kenya, (d) Egypt and (e) Algeria. [41460]

Mrs. Roche: From records readily available, the total level of ECGD claims outstanding on these markets as at 31 March 1998 was as follows:

	£ million
Algeria	172
Egypt	386
Jordan	278
Kenya	41
Venezuela	1

ECGD does not maintain its records on a basis which would enable it to provide the additional breakdown requested without disproportionate cost.

Anguilla (Rocket Launch Pad)

Mr. Randall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the United Kingdom Government were first approached for permission to build a rocket launch pad on Sombrero Island, Anguilla. [42133]

Mr. Battle: The Government first became aware of Beal Aerospace's proposal to build a satellite launch site on Sombrero Island in July 1997. This followed a letter from Beal Aerospace to the Government and Governor of Anguilla asking permission to lease the island.

Chronic Bronchitis and Emphysema

Sir Raymond Powell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much has been paid to (a) widows and (b) miners who were in receipt of state benefits for chronic bronchitis and emphysema; how many (i) miners and (ii) widows are entitled to receive these benefits; when the final payments are to be paid; and what arrangements apply to the interest on this money whilst negotiations continue. [42341]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 18 May 1998]: To date, over 200 interim payments of £2,000 have been made to miners in receipt of Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit for chronic bronchitis and emphysema (PD.D12). We have recently extended the offer of interim payments to widows whose husbands were in receipt of PD.D12 benefit and, to date, 5 payments have been made. However, the speed at which such offers can continue to be made is reliant on the co-operation of the claimants' solicitors who need to submit evidence of receipt of benefit and confirm acceptance of the offer on behalf of the claimant.

The Department has also now extended the offer to all claimants currently in receipt of PD.D12 benefit, estimated to be in excess of 13,000. However, DSS are unable to provide a breakdown between miners and widows, whose husbands would have been receiving PD.D12 benefit.

At a hearing on 27 March, plaintiff's solicitors requested a three-month adjournment to allow discussions on settlement arrangements to be progressed. The Court granted the adjournment and these discussions are continuing. We hope that arrangements can be agreed quickly, allowing full and final settlements for valid claims to begin being made as soon as possible.

Any interest payable on an award of compensation is usually calculated and paid at the same time as the award, i.e. at final settlement. If an interim payment has been made, then this amount is deducted from the compensation award before the interest is calculated.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoners (Terrorist Offences)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the prisoners convicted of terrorist offences who have been transferred from Great Britain to prisons in the Irish Republic indicating the (a) date of transfer, (b) date and length of sentence and the crimes of which they were convicted, (c) organisation to which they claimed allegiance and (d) date of release under the rules governing such release (i) in Great Britain prior to the Belfast Agreement, (ii) in Northern Ireland prior to the Belfast Agreement and (iii) under the terms of the Belfast Agreement. [41663]

Ms Quin [holding answer 12 May 1998]: Since the Irish Republic ratified the Council of Europe Convention on the Transfer of Sentenced Persons in November 1995, 23 prisoners convicted in England and Wales of terrorist-related offences have been repatriated to the Republic.

It is not normal practice to disclose the personal details of individual prisoners, nor does the Prison Service record centrally information on organisations to which prisoners may have claimed allegiance. However, the table lists for each of the 23 prisoners repatriated to date: their offences; date of sentence; sentence length; date of repatriation; non-parole release date in England and Wales; and, although the prisoners were not subject to the legislation applicable in Northern Ireland, dates of release, had they been so subject, prior to the Belfast Agreement.

The release, under the terms of the Belfast Agreement, of repatriated prisoners is a matter for the Irish Government.

Information

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his Department operates a monitoring exercise of persistent inquirers for information. [42635]

Mr. Straw: My Department does not have any administrative arrangements in place for dealing specially with persistent inquiries for information. To date, there has been no requirement for such an exercise and therefore no guidance has been drawn up.

Racial Violence

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 11 May 1998, Official Report, column 47, in respect of his plans to combat racial violence, if he will make a statement on the impact of the provisions of the Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords] in combating attacks on foreign visitors, with particular reference to English language students. [42297]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Crime and Disorder Bill introduces new offences of racially aggravated violence, harassment and criminal damage. An offence will be racially aggravated if:

- at the time of committing the offence, or immediately before or after doing so, the offender demonstrates hostility based on the victim's membership of, or association with members of, a racial group; or
- the offence is motivated wholly or partly by hostility towards members of a racial group.

"Racial group" means a group of persons defined by reference to race, colour, nationality (including citizenship) or ethnic or national origins. We expect that foreign visitors would be covered by this definition.

Consultation Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the consultation papers published since 1 May 1997 giving the date of publication, closing date for submissions and the number of respondents. [42249]

Mr. Straw: The information requested is given in the table.

Firearms Compensation

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new arrangements will be put in place to speed up compensation payments to pistol owners under the firearms compensation schemes following the recent Steed v. Home Department Appeal Court judgment. [42261]

Mr. Michael: There are no new arrangements consequent on this specific case. The arrangements for processing claims made under the compensation schemes are being improved continually in the light of practical experience and our commitment to complete the compensation payments as quickly as possible. It is not simply a matter of staff numbers: this is a complex compensation scheme, mainly to fulfil the promise to be fair to all shooters who have surrendered weapons. New systems had to be developed and staff trained, but, where it is possible, routine tasks are identified which can be undertaken by non-specialist staff. Claims made under Options A and B will be completed shortly, allowing the examining staff to concentrate on the remaining Option C claims. The number of staff with the Firearms Compensation Section has been further increased since Easter and we are also making further use of data processing staff. Staff also regularly work overtime at weekends and on weekday evenings. We are processing the remaining claims as quickly as possible, while having regard to the need for careful checking of individual claims to guard against fraud.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when claims for compensation, following the surrender of firearms, on (a) A and B options on full bore pistols and revolvers, (b) C options on full bore pistols and revolvers, (c) A and B options on small bore pistols and revolvers; and (d) C options on small bore pistols and revolvers will be settled in full. [42339]

Mr. Michael: Claims under Options A and B of the large-calibre compensation scheme and the small-calibre ex gratia scheme should be completed by the end of the month, and those under Option C by the end of the year.

We anticipate that all claims for guns handed in after 1 February 1998 under the small-calibre compensation scheme will have been paid before the end of March 1999.

Public Bodies

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the average salary of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department; [42841]

(2) what is the average attendance fee of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department. [42842]

Mr. Straw: Details of remuneration to the board members of non-departmental bodies are set out in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies". Copies of the 1997 edition are available in the Library. Details of remuneration to members of the Police Information Technology Organisation (PITO), which became an executive Non-Departmental Public Body on 1 April 1998, are given in the Ho[illegible]fice Annual Report 1998, copies of which are also [illegible]e in the Library.

Public Appointments

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department's action plan for increasing the number of women holding public appointments will be published; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [42843]

Mr. Straw: My Department's action plan will be published shortly. Copies will be placed in the Library.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Board

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases lodged with the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board under the 1992 scheme or its predecessors remain (a) to be disposed at first instance and (b) to be disposed of on appeal. [42445]

Mr. Michael: The Board advises that, at 30 April 1998, there were 3,396 cases remaining to be cleared at first instance under the 1990 Scheme, and 18,573 were awaiting determination at hearings.

Police (Training)

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department last reviewed police training. [42791]

Mr. Michael: A series of reviews led to the creation of National Police Training (NPT) in 1993. A strategic review of NPT began in 1997 and is expected to be completed later this year. A review of probationer training was carried out between 1994–95. Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary is carrying out a thematic inspection of police training, which is expected to be completed early in 1999.

Firearms Certificates

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assurances an applicant for a firearm or shotgun certificate will have in respect of patient confidentiality between himself and his doctor, under the proposals recommended by his Department's Operational Police Policy Unit to require or authorise inquiries to be made by the police directly with the applicant's general medical practitioner; what safeguards he proposes to include in the proposals; and if he will publish copies of the advice which he has received from the British Medical Association and other professional medical representative bodies; [42416]

(2) what assurances the applicant for a firearm or shotgun certificate will have that inquiring police officers or police civilians have a satisfactory understanding of the medical facts presented to them, under the proposals being made by his Department's operational police policy units to require future applications to disclose to the police any medical condition or disability. [42415]

Mr. Michael: The Firearms Rules, which prescribe various forms used in the firearms licensing system, are in the process of being revised to take account of the recent changes in firearms law. The new application form for a firearm certificate will contain a number of questions about the applicant's health. An applicant's medical condition or history may be a relevant factor in determining fitness to possess firearms. It is only right that the chief officer of police should have this information in order to reach an informed judgment on an application. Accordingly, it is proposed that the application form should seek the applicant's authority for the police to obtain factual information about these conditions from his doctor. It will be for individual chief officers to ensure that such information can be interpreted properly, through either appropriate training or access to professional medical advice. Correspondence from individuals and bodies with whom we may consult as a matter of routine is not normally published and we have no plans to do so.

SCOTLAND

Local Government

17. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received relating to the best value regime for local government services in Scotland [41266]

Mr. Macdonald: I have had several useful exchanges about best value with a wide range of bodies and individuals. Best value seeks to achieve real improvements in local authority service delivery. I welcome further dialogue with interested parties on how we achieve this aim.

Health Services

18. Mr. Savidge: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the effect of Government policies on health services in the north of Scotland. [41267]

Mr. Galbraith: Our policies are bringing benefits to patients in the north of Scotland as they are elsewhere. For example, in Aberdeen the co-operative and collaborative approach we are encouraging will enable a new children's hospital to be built using capital receipts from the sale of redundant trust and health board estate.

Oil and Gas Industry

19. Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of the North sea oil and gas industry to discuss matters relating to the industry. [41268]

Mr. Wilson: I meet representatives of the individual oil and gas companies and the UK Offshore Operators Association from time to time to discuss a range of issues. I am due to meet Shell UK Ltd. later this afternoon.

Special Educational Needs

20. Mrs. McKenna: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to involve the parents of children with special educational needs in the debate on future provision for them. [41269]

Mr. Wilson: Our discussion paper on special educational needs in Scotland acknowledges the importance of drawing on the knowledge and experience of parents. I invite all parents of children with special educational needs to express their views on any matters which are of concern to them within the context of the discussion paper or the Beattie committee which I have established to inquire into post-school special needs provision.

Murderers

22. Mr. Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to introduce legislation to make convicted murderers deported back to Scotland subject to the same supervision as those released on licence from Scottish prisons. [41271]

Mr. McLeish: The Government are conscious of and share the concern that United Kingdom nationals, deported to this country from overseas jurisdictions on the completion of their sentences for serious crimes cannot be made subject to supervision. However, tackling the issue raises a number of complex legal and practical issues not least the need to ensure that any statutory obligations placed on returning prisoners do not result in an aggravation of their sentence. Consideration is at present being given to possible options to address the issue.

"NHS Scotland: Designed to Care"

23. Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what responses he has received to the Government's White Paper, "NHS Scotland: Designed to Care". [41272]

Mr. Galbraith: A number of responses to "Designed to Care: Renewing the NHS in Scotland" have been received from professional bodies and other groups. The responses have been predominantly positive, and have particularly welcomed the increased focus on patient care.

Primary School Entry

25. Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many parents exercised in the last academic year their right to defer primary school entry for one year. [41277]

Mr. Wilson: Full information on deferred entry is not available centrally. However, provisional results from the September 1997 school census show that, for 2,209 pupils in nursery schools and nursery classes in Scotland in 1997–98, entry to primary P1 had been deferred. These figures relate to publicly funded and independent nursery schools and classes only, and do not include private nurseries, day care units and other forms of pre-school establishments, on which information is not available.

Sewage and Waste Disposal

26. Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made on recent research commissioned by his Department into the possible health hazards of sewage and waste disposal. [41278]

Mr. Macdonald: My noble Friend the Minister for Agriculture, the Environment and Fisheries announced on 5 May that the Scottish Environment Protection Agency had been asked to carry out a strategic review of recycling of all organic wastes to land. This study is due to be completed by Autumn 1998.

A co-ordinated project by the Macaulay land use research institute and the Scottish agriculture college into the disposal of wastes to land has recently started. This should be completed by April 2000. However, we would expect interim findings in early 1999.

In addition, the Water Research Centre's review of the scientific evidence relating to the agricultural use of sewage sludge is expected to be published shortly.

Exchange Rate

Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with industries in Scotland affected by the current exchange rate. [41251]

Mr. Dewar: I have frequent discussions with many firms across Scotland on a wide range of issues. The newly instituted Scottish Business Forums is a recent example.

I am impressed by the ability of Scottish firms to retain a significant presence in both domestic and overseas markets, notwithstanding the extremely competitive trading environment which they face.

Pregnant Women

Dr. Lynda Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the provision of pain relief, beds and nursing staff for pregnant women in labour in Edinburgh hospitals. [41270]

Mr. Galbraith: Obstetric delivery services in Edinburgh are provided at the Simpson memorial maternity pavilion. The hospital has a total of 143 beds and 82 whole-time equivalent midwifery staff excluding midwives based in out-patient departments and day assessment units. A full range of methods of pain relief is offered at the hospital.

Land Reform

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the Crown Estate Commissioner to discuss land reform issues in Scotland. [41273]

Mr. Macdonald: No meetings have taken place to discuss land reform issues in Scotland between my right hon. Friend and the First Crown Estate Commissioner. However, officials have been in touch with the Crown Estate regarding these matters.

Scottish Record Office

Mr. Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the targets for the Scottish Record Office in 1998–99. [43047]

Mr. McLeish: I have set the Scottish Record Office the following key targets for 1998–99: to reduce the unit cost of preserving and making available the Records of Scotland by 2.5 per cent. in real terms; to increase the number of catalogue entries available for public scrutiny on the electronic system by 52,000; to produce material for readers in 92.5 per cent. of cases in 30 minutes or less for material from the same building and in 2 days or less for material from elsewhere; to issue replies to 85 per cent. of correspondence within 10 days, absorbing up to a 2 per cent. increase in demand; and to implement the agreed recommendations flowing from the prior options reviews of the Scottish Record Office and the Scottish Records Advisory Council, including the production of a revised corporate plan.

Registers of Scotland

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the targets for the Registers of Scotland executive agency in the financial year 1998–99. [43048]

Mr. Dewar: I have set the Registers of Scotland the following key targets for 1998–99: for the trading fund to achieve a return of 6 per cent. on net capital employed over the 3 year period ending 31 March 1999; to achieve the transfer of the counties of Perth, Angus and Kinross to the Land Register on 1 April 1999; to maintain and enhance customer service through the retention of charter mark and by improving customer satisfaction on first registration turnround times to 75 per cent. by 31 March 2000; to reduce progressively the turnround time for sasine writs to 25 days by 31 March 1999; to reduce progressively the turnround time for dealings with whole in the Land Register to 25 days by 31 March 1999; to reduce unit costs by 5.4 per cent. in real terms for sasine writs by 31 March 1999 from the base of £32.46 at 31 March 1997; to reduce unit costs by 2.4 per cent. in real terms for dealings with whole by 31 March 1999 from the base of £55.10 at 31 March 1997; and to launch a direct access service to customers by 30 November 1998.

Ancient and Historical Monuments Commission

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the forthcoming policy and financial management review of the Royal Commission on the Ancient and Historical Monuments of Scotland. [43049]

Mr. Dewar: As part of the Government's ongoing programme of policy and financial management reviews of non-departmental public bodies, my Department will conduct a thorough review of the Royal Commission on the Ancient and Historical Monuments of Scotland—the national body of survey and record of the man-made environment in Scotland. As is the norm for such reviews, the first stage will take the forms of a "prior options" study. This will include an examination of the scope for discontinuing, privatising, contracting out or transferring to another body some or all of the functions carried out by the royal commission. The review is now under way and I would welcome comments from interested parties. Comments should be sent by 19 June to: Mr. John Barber, Room 3.9, Longmore House, Salisbury Place, Edinburgh, EH9 1SH.

Nurses, Midwives and Health Visitors

Mrs. McKenna: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the functions ascribed to the National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visitors for Scotland under section 6(1)(e) of the Nurses, Midwives and Health Visitors Act 1997; and what funding the board receives in respect of those functions. [43050]

Mr. Galbraith: The board is required to provide a central system to deal with applications to enter into training courses, to provide careers information to the public and to carry out research into training methods (SI 1993/637(S.83)). Funding for carrying out these functions is not specifically authorised by statute and, with Treasury agreement, it is intended to allow the expenditure to rest on the sole authority of the Appropriation Act until amending legislation can be enacted.

Uniform Business Rate

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to reform the uniform business rate in Scotland. [41275]

Mr. Macdonald: The Government will consult on options for change this summer. However, in the end, this will be a matter for the Scottish Parliament.

Police

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about possible reorganisation of Scottish police forces. [41274]

Mr. McLeish: There have been two letters of representation following my right hon. Friend's announcement on 22 April to embark on a period of consultation and information gathering on whether the present eight Forces are the correct basis for the structure of the police service in Scotland as we approach the new millennium. It will then be for the Scottish Parliament to decide on whether any change is required.

Land Use (Glasgow)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total acreage of derelict land in the city of Glasgow; what acreage is contaminated land; and what acreage of each is located in the Glasgow, Shettleston constituency. [42854]

Mr. Macdonald: The Scottish vacant and derelict land survey 1996, (a copy of which is held in the House Library) records 894 hectares (1 hectare is approximately equivalent to 2.5 acres) of land as derelict in the City of Glasgow. The survey has limited information on derelict land known to be contaminated. In the 1996 survey, 196 hectares in the Glasgow Development Agency's area was recorded as contaminated.

Information on derelict or contaminated land is not held centrally by Parliamentary constituency.

Housing Stock (Glasgow)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many multi-storey blocks of flats above 10 floors high there are in the City of Glasgow; what is the total number of housing units in these blocks; what percentage of the council's housing stock this represents; and how many flats in multi-storey blocks have been sold. [42855]

Mr. Macdonald: At 31 March 1997, the latest date for which information is available, Glasgow city council owned 105,035 dwellings of which 23,129 (22 per cent.) were classified as high rise flats (flats in blocks of five storeys or more with a lift). Information on the numbers of these flats which have been sold is not available centrally.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with Scottish Homes regarding the condition and future of the multi-storey flats in Hutchesontown, Glasgow; and if he will make a statement. [42865]

Mr. Macdonald: While it is the Scottish Homes to make decisions on operational matters relating to its own stock, I have been kept closely informed of its intentions regarding the future of the houses concerned. I understand that recent proposals to transfer the houses to an alternative landlord cannot be progressed because funding from the private sector is not available. In line with the new arrangements introduced by COSLA and Scottish Homes in December 1997, Scottish Homes will now consider the options for the future of the houses in consultation with the local authority and the tenants concerned.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many houses below the tolerable standard there are in each constituency in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [42866]

Mr. Macdonald: The 1996 Scottish house condition survey estimated that there were 21,000 below tolerable standard (BTS) occupied houses in Scotland. This information is not available by constituency.

Local authorities supply annual estimates to The Scottish Office for the numbers of BTS dwellings in their areas. These figures, which are only available by local authority area, are published in Scottish Office statistical bulletins, copies of which are held in the Library. The latest such bulletin (HSG/1997/1) was published in February 1997.

Care in the Community

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of health boards and National Health Service trusts to discuss matters relating to care in the community programmes. [41249]

Mr. Galbraith: I meet representatives of health boards and NHS trusts regularly to discuss matters of current interest, including care in the community.

Child Care

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the Green Paper on the child care strategy for Scotland will be published. [42769]

Mr. Dewar: Our Green Paper "Meeting the Childcare Challenge: A Childcare Strategy for Scotland" is being published today.

The Green Paper sets out how we intend to make a reality of our manifesto commitment to develop a childcare strategy for Scotland. It is the first time a Government have a coherent and strategic approach to childcare. We are backing the strategy with a substantial investment of public money: almost £5 million extra in 1998–99 with a further £25 million to come on stream from lottery resources through the new opportunities fund over the years 1999–2003.

The Green Paper sets out three steps to the strategy: raising quality, making childcare more affordable and making it more accessible. I am appointing a Scottish Childcare Board to provide an external source of advice as we implement the Strategy. At local level, local childcare partnerships will be set up to plan and co-ordinate developments in childcare, so that we can build on what already exists to ensure that every neighbourhood has the childcare available which meets its needs.

Our Green Paper sets out how we will take forward the childcare strategy for Scotland. The principles upon which it is founded apply across the United Kingdom and my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Education and Employment and the Secretary of State for Social Security and Minister for Women are also issuing a Green Paper on the national childcare strategy today. My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Northern Ireland and Wales are also planning to consult on these matters in the near future.

Copies of the Green Paper will be available in the Vote Office.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Women Magistrates

32. Ms Moran: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement regarding increasing the number of women on the Bench. [41288]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor regards this as an issue of real importance. Judicial appointments must continue to be on merit but he wants to see more applications from women and is actively pursuing policies to encourage women to apply. In respect of lay magistrates, he expects his Advisory Committees to have regard to the need for balance and 48 per cent. of the lay bench are women.

Legal Aid

33. Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he intends to publish the Government's response to the public consultation on conditional fees and legal aid reform. [41289]

Mr. Hoon: We will publish our response as soon as the analysis of the 233 responses has been completed and my noble and learned Friend and I have had a chance to consider the results. I expect that to be within the next month or so.

34. Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the role of trade union legal assistance schemes in the provision of legal services in the context of the civil justice and legal aid review. [41290]

Mr. Hoon: The excellent schemes operated by trade unions and their lawyers provide effective, specialist representation to a wide range of people. The Government wish to explore with the TUC the suggestion that the schemes might be made available to non-union members. We are keen to encourage as many avenues of access to justice as we can.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many responses he has received to his consultation paper on legal aid reform. [41293]

Mr. Hoon: 233.

Legal Profession

36. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the extent of restrictive practices in the legal profession. [41292]

Mr. Hoon: The Government are opposed to restrictive practices which cannot be justified in the public interest. The legal profession is independent and self-regulating, and is responsible, in the first instance, for the rules governing the profession; but it is the duty of the relevant professional bodies to regulate their members in the public interest. As the Lord Chancellor made clear, on 24 February 1998, Official Report, columns 555–57, he is looking at the restrictions on who may exercise rights of audience in the courts, and he intends to bring proposals forward, in due course.

One change to those who may exercise rights of audience has already been made. The Institute of Legal Executives was last month authorised to grant rights of audience to suitably qualified Fellows. It has thereby joined the Bar Council and the Law Society in being empowered to grant rights of audience in appropriate courts.

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what recent representations he has received regarding the closure of local magistrates courts. [41286]

Mr. Hoon: The provision of magistrates courts is, of course, regularly under review by the local magistrates courts committees. For example, so far this year I have received 139 representations from Members, local authorities, justices of the peace and other interested parties on courts' committee's plans for possible magistrates closures in England and Wales.

Magistrates Courts Committees

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on his proposals for the future arrangements for magistrates court committees in larger police authority areas. [41291]

Mr. Hoon: In my statement to the House on 29 October 1997, Official Report, columns 901–05, I set out the Government's view of the future structure of the magistrates courts service. I stated that there need to be fewer and larger magistrates courts committee (MCC) areas which are more closely aligned to the areas served by other justice agencies, in particular those of the police. The Lord Chancellor has recently signed the orders which will amalgamate the five MCCs in Merseyside and the seven MCCs in the West Midlands. A number of other MCCs are developing their own proposals, whilst the remainder are considering the way forward.

Computer Technology

Mr. Randall: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much his Department spent in 1997–98 and plans to spend in 1998–99 on computer technology in (a) the magistrates courts, (b) the county courts, (c) the Crown courts and (d) the High Court and Court of Appeal. [41285]

Mr. Hoon: During 1997–98, the Department's spending on computer technology was:

(a) £7.8 million for the magistrates' courts[1];

(b) £7.0 million for the county courts;

(c) £1.5 million for the Crown Court; and,

(d) £1.5 million for the High Court and Court of Appeal.

The estimates for 1998–99 are:

(a) £11.5 million for the magistrates' courts;

(b) £7.7 million for the county courts;

(c) £1.2 million for the Crown Court; and,

(d) £1.0 million for the High Court and Court of Appeal.

[1] This figure is an estimate because the actual expenditure will not be known until after December 1998 when we have received the audited grant forms from the external auditors.

Information

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if his Department operates a monitoring exercise of persistent inquirers for information. [42636]

Mr. Hoon: No formal monitoring of this information is carried out.

Barristers' Fees

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how barristers' claimed hours of preparation are monitored; and what percentage of such claims are met without independent verification. [42267]

Mr. Hoon: In standardised fee cases, the preparation hours do not influence the fee level because the fee prescribed relates to the case as a whole or a discrete item of work. Standardised fees account for 90 per cent. of criminal cases. Standardised fees for advocacy in family cases are to be introduced later this year. In non-standard fee cases, the fees are paid following independent taxation or assessment when the reasonableness of the hours claimed is one of the factors taken in to account.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the 50 barristers who have received the largest sums of money, taking account of both defence and prosecution costs met from public funds, over the last three years. [42266]

Mr. Hoon: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate costs.

Roger Levitt Case (Costs)

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what were the final total costs of the Roger Levitt case broken down into (a) defence and (b) prosecution costs. [42268]

Mr. Hoon: The costs of R v Roger Levitt and others broken down into defence and prosecution costs associated with the trial were as follows:

Defence costs from legal aid: £2,649,495

Defence costs from central funds[1]: £10,699

[1] These costs compensate the privately represented defendant for any expenses properly incurred by him in the proceedings including the fees of his legal representation.

It is not possible to identify separately prosecution costs associated with the investigation and trial stages. However, it is estimated that the prosecution costs associated with the trial were £993,815. In addition the estimated prosecution costs of investigation amounted to £819,552.

International Criminal Court

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan (Mr. Salmond) of 21 April 1998, Official Report, column 588, what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on the applicability of the proposed International Criminal Court to cases of international terrorism. [41248]

Mr. Hoon: It is the Government's view that terrorism should not be one of the categories of crime over which the proposed International Criminal Court should have jurisdiction.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fishing Industry

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the possibility of introducing charges on the fishing industry; and if he will make a statement. [43021]

Mr. Morley: The question as to whether the fishing industry might contribute to the costs of decommissioning was raised by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food at our first High Level meeting with industry leaders last July. I also indicated to the House on 17 December 1997, Official Report, column 346, that it would be included in the possibilities considered in the current comprehensive spending review. As a contribution to continuing discussion of this issue, I am now placing in the Library of the House copies of a recently completed academic report by the University of Portsmouth which the Department commissioned towards the end of last year.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the informal agriculture council held between 10 and 12 May; and if he will make a statement. [42269]

Dr. John Cunningham: As Chairman of the EU Agriculture Council, I hosted an informal meeting of Agriculture Ministers in Newcastle upon Tyne from 10 to 12 May 1998. My noble Friend, the Lord Donoughue, Parliamentary Secretary responsible for the farming and food industry, represented the United Kingdom at that meeting.

In the course of the informal visit, I was able to show my EU colleagues the efforts which the UK Government are making, in partnership with the farming industry, to help put our beef industry on to a sound footing for the future. In particular, my EU Ministerial colleagues were given a comprehensive presentation of the cattle traceability system now being put in place in Great Britain with the aim of assuring consumers, retailers and farmers alike of the safety and reliability of our meat.

Linked to the theme of quality and sustainability of beef production, the information EU Council went on to discuss, on the basis of a UK Presidency paper, the challenges facing EU livestock producers in environmentally fragile areas of the Union, and the measure open to EU governments to assist them. A wide-ranging debate on this important subject gave rise to a number of important policy considerations which will be taken forward in the negotiations on the Commission's Agenda 2000 proposals for agricultural reform.

Pesticides

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what statutory provision currently covers usage of pesticides on land. [41929]

Mr. Rooker: The current statutory controls over the use of pesticides on land in the United Kingdom are:

The Food and Environment Protection Act 1985;

The Pesticides (Fees and Enforcement) Act 1989;

The Control of Pesticides Regulations 1986 (as amended);

The Plant Protection Products Regulations 1995 (as amended); and

The Plant Protection Products (Basic Conditions) Regulations 1997.

In particular, the legislation provides that only pesticides that have been approved by Ministers may be used.

Advice on how users can meet their responsibilities under the legislation is given in the statutory 'Code of Practice for the Safe Use of Pesticides on Farms and Holdings', which is jointly produced by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Health and Safety Executive.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the three most commonly used pesticides currently applied to land in the United Kingdom. [41933]

Mr. Rooker: The three most commonly used pesticides applied to land in the United Kingdom in 1997 were:

By spray area (i.e. area of land times number of treatments):

Isoproturon: 3.00 million hectares

Chlormequat: 2.53 million hectares

Cypermethrin: 2.51 million hectares

By weight:

Sulphuric acid: 13,348 tonnes

Isoproturon: 3,312 tonnes

Chlormequat: 2,637 tonnes.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will assess the advantages of introducing separate regulation for food produced from land treated with pesticides; and if he will make a statement. [41936]

Mr. Rooker: Pesticides are used on over 98 per cent. of the agricultural and horticultural land on which food crops are grown. Land on which pesticides are not used and which conforms to other relevant standards can, if not already registered, be registered as organic. We do not see a need for further regulation in this area.

Departmental Vehicles (Fuel)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of his Department's vehicles use (a) liquid petroleum gas and (b) compressed natural gas. [42067]

Mr. Morley: At present, this Department does not have any vehicles which run on liquid petroleum gas or compressed natural gas.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to convert his vehicle fleet to (a) liquid petroleum gas and (b) compressed natural gas. [42068]

Mr. Morley: It would not be a viable option for this Department to convert its existing fleet to liquid petroleum gas or compressed natural gas because the vehicles are predominantly diesel-powered and not readily capable of conversion. But, in future (and as the existing fleet falls due for replacement) consideration will be given to the use of LPG fuelled vehicles where it is appropriate to do so.

Flood Warnings (Northamptonshire)

Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what arrangements have been made for the issuing of flood warnings in Northamptonshire since March 1996. [42057]

Mr. Morley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to her on 14 May 1998, Official Report, column 197.

Gangmasters

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to regulate the activities of gangmasters; and if he will make a statement. [42583]

Mr. Morley: I will write to my hon. Friend providing the information requested as soon as possible.

BSE

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his current estimate of when the national herd is likely to be free of BSE. [42140]

Mr. Rooker: I refer my hon. Friend to the replies given to him on 6 November 1997, Official Report, column 331, and 28 January 1998, Official Report, column 301.

Sheep Dip

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the toxicological data for (a) [(i) symmetrical and (ii) unsymmetrical, monothiono TEPP, (b) [(x) symmetrical and (y) unsymmetrical,] sulfotep, (c) s-ethyl diazinon, (d) iso diazinon, (e) TEPP, (f) z-isopropenyl diazinon, (g) diazonon and (h) hydroxymethyl diazinon found in sheep dips which has been collated by his Department. [42475]

Mr. Rooker: Data are provided by applicants for marketing authorisations for veterinary medicines and are subject to the confidentiality requirements of section 118 of the Medicines Act 1968 and regulation 14 of the Marketing Authorisations for Veterinary Medicinal Products Regulations 1994.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received regarding the possible potentiation and synergism effects involving the ingredients which have been included in sheep dips. [42235]

Mr. Rooker: A number of letters on this subject have been received by the Veterinary Medicines Directorate. The direct chemical reaction of mixing phenols and organophosphates was considered as part of the approval process of former sheep dip products. There was no reaction and no change in the composition of the dip.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received regarding the genetic susceptibility of some breeds of sheep to diazinon. [42221]

Mr. Rooker: I am unaware of any such representations.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the toxicological data for (a) hydroxydiazinon and (b) thiodiazinon in sheep dips which have been collated by his Department. [42224]

Mr. Rooker: These data have been provided by applicants for marketing authorisations for veterinary medicines and are subject to the confidentiality requirements of section 118 of the Medicines Act 1968 and regulation 14 of the Marketing Authorisations for Veterinary Medicinal Products Regulations 1994.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received regarding the health effect of phenol and crenyl phosphates. [42218]

Mr. Rooker: A number of letters on this subject have been received by the Veterinary Medicines Directorate. No human suspected adverse reaction to phenol or crenyl phosphates has been reported under the Suspected Adverse Reactions Surveillance Scheme. No currently authorised sheep dip contains phenol or crenyl phosphates.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received regarding the health risks of phenols in sheep dips. [42220]

Mr. Rooker: A number of letters on this subject have been received by the Veterinary Medicines Directorate. Seven cases of human suspected adverse reactions relating to sheep dips containing phenols have been reported under the Suspected Adverse Reactions Surveillance Scheme. No currently authorised sheep dip contains phenols.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what (a) general methods and (b) toxicological calculations are used to assess the presence of impurities in sheep dips. [42223]

Mr. Rooker: The requirements are set out in Article 5 of Council Directive 81/851/EEC as amended, on the approximation of the laws of the Member States relating to veterinary medicinal products, and to Parts 2 and 3 of the Annex to Council Directive 81/852 as amended, on the approximation of the laws of the Member States relating to analytical, pharmacotoxicological and clinical standards and protocols in respect of the testing of veterinary medicinal products.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he has taken regarding the addition of phenols to surfactants in order to preserve them. [42219]

Mr. Rooker: Data on the constituents of veterinary medicinal products are considered as part of the examination of applications for marketing authorisations in order to satisfy the statutory criteria of safety, quality and efficacy.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what monitoring has been undertaken in the past five years to ensure the purity of diazinon at point of sale to farmers; when the monitoring started; and what were the results. [42222]

Mr. Rooker: Manufacturers of veterinary medicinal products must comply with the terms of their marketing authorisations and must carry out the quality checks on their products set down in them. If any purchaser has reason to believe the product purchased is not fit for the purpose, they should contact the local authority Trading Standards Department.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the chemical formula and structure of the compound G31045 which is a constituent part of organophosphate sheep dips. [42236]

Mr. Rooker: The chemical name for G31045 is 2-isopropyl-4-methyl-6-ethoxy pyrimidine, from which its structure may be deduced.

Correspondence

Mr. Cran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to reply to the letter of 19 January from the hon. Member for Beverley and Holderness; and if he will make a statement on the reasons for the delay. [41908]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 14 May 1998]: My right hon. Friend the Minister wrote to the hon. Member on 18 May.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Information

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if his Department operates a monitoring exercise of persistent inquirers for information. [42644]

Dr. David Clark: Yes. Guidance on dealing with voluminous or vexatious correspondence is available to all staff. The guidance emphasises, among other points:

the general commitment to be as open and helpful as possible;

the importance of ensuring that correspondents have indeed been provided with all the information they are entitled to, and have had the appeals procedures fully explained to them, before the correspondence is brought to an end; that decisions should be in accordance with the Guidance on Interpretation of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information; that, if further correspondence received after a "final letter" has been sent raises a new and substantive point, that should be treated as any other correspondence and a substantive response provided.

Information Formatting

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when local authorities first contacted the Government asking for details of how information was to be forwarded after the year 2000 and in what format; when the Government will respond to the local authorities; and what co-ordination he is seeking between departments in the format of information. [40432]

Angela Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

I am aware of only one approach from a local authority on this aspect of the Year 2000 issue. Where local authority systems interact with those of other bodies they should agree, through their normal liaison procedures, the format to be followed so that changes made to systems are compatible with one another. However, they should not delay remedial action on their own business critical systems because others are unable to give any firm indication of the changes they are having to make to their own systems.

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO

Millennium Dome (Air Conditioning)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will meet representatives of (a) York UK and (b) Combined Power Service Ltd. to discuss air-conditioning systems for the Millennium Dome. [40546]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 7 May 1998]: The New Millennium Experience Company is responsible for procuring goods and services to the Millennium Dome and it would not therefore be appropriate for me to meet individual companies who have an interest in supplying particular goods, works or services to the Millennium Dome. Combined Heat and Power Services Limited did not respond to the advertisement placed by the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) in June 1997 in the Official Journal of the European Communities (OJEC). This advertisement did not specify the type of chiller units required. York International did respond and were subsequently invited by the NMEC to tender against an HFC R134a refrigerant specification but with an option also to submit a tender with an alternative refrigerant. The bid received from York by the NMEC proposed only HFC R134a.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what weight of the gas HFC 134a he expects to be used in the proposed air conditioning system in the Millennium Dome. [40545]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 7 May 1998]: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) has procured twenty-four chiller units which will supply chilled water to cool air within the Dome. Each unit will have 274kg of HFC R134a hermetically sealed within them.

Millennium Experience (Regional Boards)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister without Portfolio when he expects that the regional junior boards for the Millennium Experience will be appointed. [38455]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) held a consultative meeting last month to discuss how the Company might best establish regional junior boards. Following this meeting, the Company's Education Managers in their English regional offices, and in their offices in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, asked local authorities and youth agencies for nominations. The first regional junior board meetings are now planned for June and July this year.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children living within the local education authority boundaries of (a) Barnsley and (b) Doncaster currently receive subsidised private education via the assisted places scheme; and how many will do so from 1 September. [42657]

Mr. Byers: Information about the local education authority area from which assisted pupils originate is not collected centrally. There are no schools participating in the assisted places scheme in either the Barnsley or the Doncaster LEA areas.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much has been spent in each of the last five years on the (a) printing, production and design and (b) distribution of his Department's publications for schools. [42700]

Mr. Byers: Total spending on education publicity for the Department is given in financial years. It is not possible to separate out sums spent on publications only or to separate the cost of distribution to schools.

Publications are a basic part of all of the Department's publicity activities but on many occasions will also include some element of other types of media:

Year	£ million
1993–94	10.1
1994–95	9.4
1995–96	5.4
1996–97	6.2
1997–98	[1]4.5

[1] Provisional

In each of the five years, spending on the distribution of publications to a range of audiences including teachers and governors has remained at around £0.8 million.

Child Care

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the Green Paper on the National Child Care Strategy will be launched. [42893]

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will publish the Government's proposed National Child Care Strategy Consultation. [42706]

Mr. Blunkett: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security and Minister for Women and I are launching our joint Green Paper on the National Child Care Strategy, Meeting the Childcare Challenge, today. In developing our proposals, we have been working closely with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, who has responsibility for Lottery funding, and other colleagues.

The Green Paper sets out how we intend to make a reality of our Manifesto commitment to develop a National Child Care Strategy. It is the first time a Government have taken a coherent and strategic approach to child care. We are backing the Strategy with a substantial investment of public money—over £125 million in England over the coming years—and we are making available £170 million from the Lottery New Opportunities Fund to develop new out of school child care provision.

The Green paper sets out three steps to the Strategy: raising quality, making child care more affordable and making it more accessible. We will achieve this through working in partnership at local level, building on what already exists. Our aim is to ensure good-quality, affordable child care for children aged 0 to 14 in every neighbourhood, including both formal child care and support for informal arrangements.

Our Green Paper sets out the principles of the National Child Care Strategy covering the whole of the UK, but the specific proposals for implementation relate to England. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland is launching a Green Paper on the child care strategy in Scotland today. My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Northern Ireland and for Wales are also planning to consult on the National Child Care Strategy in the near future.

The Green Paper has today been laid before Parliament and copies are available in the Vote Office.

HEALTH

School Nurses

Audrey Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in how many regions there have been (a) reductions and (b) increases in school nursing services over the last two years. [25025]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is not collected centrally. The levels of school nursing services are for local commissioners and employers to determine in the light of local needs and priorities.

Cabinet Sub-committee

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Cabinet sub-committee on health was established. [28815]

Mr. Milburn: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced the establishment, composition and terms of reference of the Cabinet Sub-Committee on Health (HS(H)) on 9 June 1997, Official Report, columns 302–09.

Dental Services

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists in Bolton treated NHS patients in (a) 1997, (b) 1996, (c) 1995, (d) 1994 and (e) 1993; and how many dentists treated only private patients in each of those years. [41895]

Mr. Milburn: For 31 March 1997, information is available for the Wigan and Bolton Health Authority, and in previous years for the former Wigan and the former Bolton Family Health Services Authorities. This information is shown in the table. These dentists will have varying levels of commitment to the National Health Service. No information is available for the number of dentists treating private patients only.

General dental service: number of dentists[1] in Bolton and Wigan Family Health Services Authorities (FHSA) at 31 March 1993 to 1996 and Wigan and Bolton Health Authority at 31 March 1997

Year	Bolton FHSA	Wigan FHSA	Wigan and Bolton Health Authority
1993	74	87	—
1994	81	95	—
1995[2]	75	87	—
1996[2]	81	95	—
1997[2]	—	—	174

[1] Includes principals, assistants and vocational trainees on health authority lists

[2] The figures for 31 March 1995 onwards may be reduced by the effect of the lengthening of the degree course for dental students. Prior to this newly qualified dentists would appear in March figures each year but from 1995 these dentists graduated later and joined health authority lists after March each year

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of elderly people are liable to pay patient charges for dental treatment; and how much revenue is raised annually through dental charges to those of pensionable age (a) in Coventry and (b) in England. [42478]

Mr. Milburn: About 80 per cent. of people aged 65 and over are liable to pay full or partial charges for National Health Service dental treatment. It is estimated that some £65 million in patient charge revenue was raised in England from patients aged 65 and over in 1997–98. This estimate is based on a sample of patient claims for April 1998. Corresponding information is not available for Coventry.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in (a) the West Midlands and (b) Coventry are registered with a dental practice. [42476]

Mr. Milburn: The table sets out figures for the number of patients registered with a General Dental Service dentist in the National Health Service Executive West Midlands Regional Office area and in Coventry Health Authority at 31 March 1998.

General Dental Service: number of patients registered in the NHS Executive West Midlands Regional Office area, and Coventry Health Authority at 31 March 1998

	Adults	Children
West Midlands	1,930,423	723,700
Coventry	119,680	42,326

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will restore the re-registration period for dental services to 24 months. [42477]

Mr. Milburn: We have no plans to review this policy, which will improve value for money by focusing payments to dentists on those patients receiving active care from them.

From 1 April, £10 million of the resources released has been targeted at young children in poorer areas, adults requiring full dentures and to encourage dentists to provide continuing care to their patients including emergency treatment.

Asthma

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will include a national target for the reduction of childhood asthma in the Government's public health strategy, Our Healthier Nation. [29968]

Ms Jowell: The Green Paper Our Healthier Nation sets out our proposals for a new health strategy for England. These proposals went out for consultation until 30 April. A White Paper, taking account of the results of the consultation, will follow in the autumn.

Our Healthier Nation recognises that asthma is a serious health problem. Although it is not proposed for a national target it heads the Green Paper's list of possible candidates for local targets.

Renal Services (North West)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the mortality rates among renal patients in Chorley and South Ribble Health District relative to those in other health districts in the North West Region; [42049]

(2) what assessment he has made of the adequacy of renal dialysis provision at Chorley and South Ribble General Hospital; [42050]

(3) what assessment he has made of the adequacy of funding for the provision of renal services in each of the health districts in the North West Region; and what plans he has to review this provision. [42051]

Mr. Milburn: The Office for National Statistics is being commissioned to produce statistics of trends or comparisons in mortality rates in renal patients between South Lancashire and other districts. Copies of the report will be placed in the Library.

An assessment of renal services has recently been carried out. Further work, to include an assessment of resources, is currently in progress. At local level, South Lancashire Health Authority has run a population-based model as part of its analysis of health need to inform the Lancashire Renal Strategy. It has been agreed that the first step should be to enhance satellite dialysis facilities at Preston to cover the catchment populations of Fylde, Longridge, Chorley and South Ribble and Preston itself.

Chorley and South Ribble District General Hospital does not provide renal dialysis. The service is provided mainly from the Royal Preston Hospital, although some patients are dialysed at Manchester hospitals or in the satellite unit at Accrington, depending on the availability of places.

Drugs Treatment

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many users of (a) cannabis, (b) ecstasy and (c) heroin are in contact with drugs treatment services. [41617]

Ms Jowell: The National Health Service regional drug misuse databases collect data on people presenting to services with a drug problem in England and Wales, either for the first time or after a gap of 6 months or more. Data for England are collated centrally by the Department, including details of the main drug and any other drugs of misuse (a maximum of five can be recorded). The most recent statistics published for England are given in the Department's Statistical Bulletin "Drug Misuse Statistics for the six months ending September 1996". Information for this period is given in the table.

Use of cannabis, ecstasy and heroin as main or subsidiary drug by users starting agency episodes in the period 1 April to 30 September 1996, England

Drug of misuse	Main drug	Subsidiary drug	Total
Cannabis	1,533	4,784	6,317
Ecstasy	268	1,165	1,433
Heroin	14,334	2,065	16,399

Note:

A user may report using more than one drug; for example, heroin may be reported as the main drug and cannabis and/or ecstasy reported as the subsidiary drugs

Our 10 year strategy for tackling drug misuse, Tackling Drugs to Build a Better Britain, aims to ensure that all problem drug misusers have access to support from appropriate services when needed and to increase the proportion of problem drug misusers in contact with drug treatment services.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 31 July 1997, Official Report, columns 608–10, concerning waiting lists, if he will supply the equivalent information for 1998–99. [42707]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is not routinely available centrally.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list, by hospital, the regional fast track information on waiting lists and waiting times for (a) inpatients and (b) day cases, for (i) January, (ii) February and (iii) March. [41881]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 14 May 1998]: Waiting list and waiting time information is collected centrally on a quarterly basis direct from health authorities and trusts and shows the position at the end of the quarter. Provisional information showing the position on 31 March 1998, aggregated by region, will be published on 21 May 1998. Final validated figures, on a health authority and trust basis, will be published a few weeks later. The final figures will show ordinary cases and day cases separately.

Blood Products

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the likely effect of the decision to source manufactured blood products from non-United Kingdom plasma on the number of blood donors in the United Kingdom. [42863]

Mr. Boateng: The decision to source blood products from non-United Kingdom plasma related to manufactured blood products only and has no impact on the blood used in transfusions. The decision does not mean that we need less blood—on the contrary, we need more than ever in order to support increasing hospital activity.

We hope and expect that blood donors will understand that their gift remains vital to the work of the National Health Service, and that they will continue to support the NHS and help to save lives as they have done in the past.

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he (a) sought and (b) received the advice of the National Blood Authority before taking the decision to source manufactured blood products from non-United Kingdom plasma; [42861]

(2) what steps he will take to ensure that imported plasma is safe; and what estimate he has made of the risk that it is not; [42858]

(3) what estimate the National Blood Authority has made of the probability of death resulting from (a) hepatitis and (b) HIV/Aids as a result of sourcing blood products from non-United Kingdom plasma; [42856]

(4) if he will publish the full text of the report of the Committee on the Safety of Medicines on which his decision to source manufactured blood products from non-United Kingdom plasma was based; [42859]

(5) what is the Committee on the Safety of Medicines estimate of the probability of contracting new variant CJD from blood products; [42857]

(6) if he will make a statement on the role of the National Blood Authority in his decision to source blood products from non-United Kingdom plasma. [42860]

Mr. Boateng: The decision to source blood products from non-United Kingdom plasma follows the advice of the Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM), which the Department, acting with the Scottish, Welsh and Northern Ireland Offices, has accepted.

The CSM, in consultation with its expert group on new variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease, undertook a risk assessment of individual plasma derived medicinal products. This assessment took into account the therapeutic benefit of the products, details of the manufacturing process, the theoretical risk of transmission, the quality and availability of alternative supplies and the blood product supply situation. In the course of that assessment, the CSM took evidence from the two UK blood product manufacturers, the Bio Products Laboratory (which is part of the National Blood Service) and the Protein Fractionation Centre (its Scottish equivalent).

The CSM's advice was that, although there is no evidence to indicate that nvCJD can be transmitted via blood products and the risk therefore remains hypothetical, it cannot be fully discounted. Therefore, as a purely precautionary measure, blood products should not be sourced from UK plasma for the time being. The full text of their advice is appended to the Department's press release of 13 May, copies of which are in the Library.

We would not accept non-UK plasma which was considered unsafe. The imported plasma will come only from centres approved by the UK Medicines Control Agency. Only when the inspectors are assured that the stringent safety standards applied to the new sources of plasma are equivalent to those currently available in the UK will plasma be imported.

Clinicians currently do not have to use Bio Products Laboratory or Protein Fractionation Centre products, but can use the licensed product of their choice. As a result, many of the licensed blood products already on the UK market are made from non-UK plasma and they have a high quality and safety record.

Information

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department operates a monitoring exercise of persistent inquirers for information. [42634]

Ms Jowell: No.

Nut Allergy (Paramedic Training)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what training is given to paramedics employed by NHS ambulance trusts in dealing with individuals suffering from allergic reactions to nuts; and if he will make a statement. [42479]

Mr. Milburn: The Institute of Health and Care Development is responsible for the standards of training for ambulance personnel, including paramedics. All paramedics in the United Kingdom are trained in the emergency treatment of anaphylaxis, and I understand that the equipment needed for such treatment is standard on all front line ambulances.

Tobacco Industry

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of reports that the tobacco industry (i) recruited scientists from political and scientific committees, (ii) withheld scientific reports and (iii) corrupted data on the health effects of smoking. [42771]

Ms Jowell: I read with interest and concern reports such as those referred to by my hon. Friend.

Public Appointments

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his Department's action plan for increasing the number of women holding public appointments will be published; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [42828]

Mr. Milburn: The Department's action plan will be published shortly. Copies will be placed in the Library.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Incomes (London)

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of households in each (a) borough and (b) constituency in London was (i) on income support and (ii) paying tax at the higher rate in 1996–97. [41361]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Benefits Agency does not collect information related to tax payments. This is a matter for the Inland Revenue. The administration of Income Support is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Ms Karen Buck, dated 18 May 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what percentage of households in each (a) borough and (b) constituency in London was (i) on Income Support (IS) and (ii) paying tax at the higher rate in 1996–97.

I am unable to comment on tax payments as this is a matter for the Inland Revenue. The benefits information is not available in the format requested as the Benefits Agency (BA) collates statistics for benefit recipients within each BA District. The number of benefit recipients may not equate to the number of households as several customers may share the same address. BA Districts do not correspond to constituency or borough boundaries. The information which is available is contained in the attached table.

I hope that this is helpful.

Benefit Overpayments

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if her Department will use its information technology network to co-ordinate payments made by different branches of her Department and its agencies in order to avoid overpayments of benefit. [42045]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Department continues to exploit the opportunities provided by information technology to deliver significant improvements to the accuracy of its payment mechanisms. In launching the Active Modern Service programme, the Department reiterated its commitment to ensuring that people with a genuine claim to benefit receive their correct entitlement, paid at the correct time and for the correct amount.

The programme of work currently under way incorporates the development and design of integrated Information Technology Systems to allow speedier access to information held across the Department.

The structure of future customer records will be around individual customers, as opposed to the benefits they claim. This will provide a complete picture of the customers dealings with the Department and reduce the scope for fraud, inaccuracy and inconsistency. Each individual customer record will contain details of payments made and moneys owed.

Rigorous financial controls of each individual transaction will enable better accounting and speedier action to recover debt.

Reduced Earnings Allowance

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what external legal advice she has taken concerning the compliance of the reduced earnings allowance with European law in relation to discrimination on the basis of gender. [42123]

Mr. Denham: The question of whether the Reduced Earnings Allowance provisions comply with European Community law on grounds of gender is currently being litigated before the Social Security Commissioner who has referred five cases to the European Court of Justice for a ruling. We have obtained external advice but it is not the normal practice to reveal the terms of legal advice received. We maintain that the Reduced Earnings Allowance provisions are in accordance with our obligations under Community law.

Child Benefit

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much it would cost to double child benefit for all children under five years old based on a doubling of the current figure for (a) the eldest qualifying child and (b) each other child. [42704]

Mr. Keith Bradley: It is estimated that the costs in 1998/99 of doubling the Child Benefit rate for the eldest qualifying child for all children under 5 would be in the region of £670 million and of doubling the Child Benefit rate for each other child under 5 would be in the region of £680 million.

The total costs of doubling current Child Benefit Rates for children under 5 would be in the region of £1.35 billion.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimates she has made of the receipts generated by removing the child benefit premium for the eldest child. [42705]

Mr. Keith Bradley: It is estimated that the total savings in 1998/99 from abolishing the child benefit rate for the eldest child would be in the region of £590 million.

Notes:

1. Estimates are rounded to the nearest £10 million.

Information

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if her Department operates a monitoring exercise of persistent inquirers for information. [42638]

Mr. Field: The Department does not operate a monitoring exercise of persistent inquirers for information.

Vaccine Damage Payments

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on progress on vaccine damage payments. [40615]

Mr. Denham: We are considering the Vaccine Damage Payment Scheme, as part of the overall review of welfare which includes disability benefits, in consultation with the Department of Health. While this is on-going it is right that we should increase the payments to new claimants. A proposal will be placed before the House to increase the current payment of £30,000 by £10,000 to £40,000, as soon as possible.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the change in the expenditure on housing benefit accounted for by (a) growth in the number of claimants and (b) growth in the size of weekly benefit since 1992 on a United Kingdom basis and on the basis of each region and nation. [41476]

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMISSION

National Audit Office

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Chairman of the Public Accounts Commission if he will estimate the additional funding required to extend NAO access to the accounts and internal accounting documents of private limited companies. [41931]

Mr. Sheldon: The Comptroller and Auditor General does not have a guaranteed right of access to the relevant records of private bodies providing public services under contract. Where access is not provided for in the relevant contracts, the Comptroller and Auditor General may be unable to check that public funds have been used as Parliament intended and with due concern for regularity and value for money. The Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee and I have therefore recommended to the Government that the Comptroller and Auditor General should have a guaranteed right of access to contractors' records. The purpose would be to enable the Comptroller and Auditor General to audit the accounts from which the contractor is paid or pays in revenue, not to audit the contractors themselves.

Where the Comptroller and Auditor General does have access to contractors, he exercises this right only in the relatively few cases where he is unable to obtain sufficient assurance from other sources about the occurrence, propriety or value for money of the payments to, or receipts from, contractors. The resource implications of arrangements to guarantee access rights would depend on the additional extent to which such rights needed to be exercised. It would be for Parliament to decide what additional resources to provide to meet any needs identified by the Comptroller and Auditor General.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Sierra Leone

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what meetings were held between Government representatives and Sandline during the period of exile of President Kabbah of Sierra Leone; who was present at such meetings; where and when they were held; what was their purpose; and what was discussed at them; [41799]

(2) pursuant to the oral statement of 12 March 1998, Official Report, column 844, on what basis he concluded that the article which appeared in The Observer on 8 March was ill-informed; [41810]

(3) on what grounds Her Majesty's Government recommended Sandline International to President Kabbah; [41970]

(4) what the timescale will be for the independent investigation of arms sales to Sierra Leone; if it will be carried out in public; and if its terms of reference will allow all interested parties to give evidence; [41971]

(5) if the United Kingdom High Commissioner to Sierra Leone visited the premises of Sandline International in the month before the counter coup in Sierra Leone; [41963]

(6) if the United Kingdom High Commissioner to Sierra Leone received full details of the arrangements, including the military equipment to be provided, together with a copy of Sandline International's strategic and tactical plan, for Sandline International's operations in Sierra Leone; and to whom this information was communicated in his Department, and when. [41962]

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) which official authorised the request for an inquiry by HM Customs and Excise into Lord Avebury's allegations concerning arms sales to Sierra Leone; [42100]

(2) how many times Lieutenant Colonel Spicer is recorded as having telephoned the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Africa Department (Equatorial) between 25 May 1997 and 24 April 1998; and on what dates; [42689]

(3) on what date the Permanent Under Secretary was informed of Sandline International's allegation of his Department's officials' complicity in arms exports to Sierra Leone; and what form the information took. [42694]

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the submissions or briefing notes on the situation in Sierra Leone which his Private Office received between 2 May 1997 and 4 May 1998, stating their dates. [42085]

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what dates meetings between Sandline personnel and staff of the British High Commission in Sierra Leone took place. [42059]

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the occasions on which his special representative to Sierra Leone, Mr. John Flynn, met representatives of Sandline International in (a) London and (b) Sierra Leone since 9 January. [42286]

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Inquiry into the supply of arms to Sierra Leone will be held in public. [42262]

Mr. Robin Cook: I refer to my statement in the House during the debate on 18 May 1998, Official Report, columns 604–11, in which I announced the investigation by Sir Thomas Legg KCB QC into allegations about Government involvement with the supply of arms to Sierra Leone by UK citizens and firms, and said that the Terms of Reference would be placed in the Library of the House. I intend to publish the report of the investigation.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the inquiry he announced on 6 May concerning Sierra Leone will cover the role of Ministers and civil servants in the Department for International Development. [41937]

Mr. Robin Cook: The investigation I announced on 18 May will cover all Government Departments which Sir T. Legg considers relevant.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his oral answer of 6 May 1998, Official Report, column 727, if he will make a further statement on ministerial policy towards Sierra Leone. [41978]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 14 May 1998]: I refer to my statement in the House during the debate on 18 May 1998, Official Report, columns 604–11.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) on what date his Permanent Secretary was first informed of the policy of the United Kingdom that the Government of Sierra Leone should be restored by military force; [41827]

(2) on what date the intelligence summaries in the Red Book first informed him of the policy of the United Kingdom Government that the Government of Sierra Leone should be restored by force; [41825]

(3) on what date officials and Ministers from his Department first consulted the US State Department, Department of Defense and the Central Intelligence Agency concerning the policy of the United Kingdom that the Government of Sierra Leone should be restored by military force. [41828]

Mr. Robin Cook: This Government have consistently supported the peaceful restoration of the legitimate government of Sierra Leone.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the relationship between his Department's ethical code in respect of arms sales and arms sales to Sierra Leone. [41829]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 14 May 1998]: The criteria I have announced for use by the FCO when considering export applications for the export of conventional arms specify that a licence should be refused if approval would be inconsistent with the UK's commitment to enforce UN arms embargoes. No such application has been received in respect of Sierra Leone.

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what day (a) his officials or (b) his Private Office first gave him papers relating to potential operations by Sandline or others in Sierra Leone; and on what date he acknowledged them. [41961]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 14 May 1998]: The first paper I saw was the letter shown to me on the evening of 28 April.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs at what time and on what date he first saw the letter addressed to him from S J Berwin & Co. on behalf of Sandline International dated 24 April. [42132]

Mr. Robin Cook: The evening of 28 April.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) on what date he first consulted the Prime Minister and the Cabinet Office concerning the UK Government's decision to assist Sandline International to help restore the Government of Sierra Leone; [41831]

(2) on what date the Director General of GCHQ was first informed of the role to be played by Sandline International in restoring the Government of Sierra Leone. [41826]

Mr. Robin Cook: At no stage was it our policy to assist Sandline International to help restore the government of Sierra Leone.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on the basis of Mr. John Flynn's appointment as his special representative to Sierra Leone; [42281]

(2) what are the terms of reference of Mr. John Flynn's appointment as his special representative to Sierra Leone. [42282]

Mr. Robin Cook: Mr. Flynn was appointed as my Special Representative to focus international attention on Sierra Leone and to coordinate international support for the restoration of the democratically-elected government.

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Sir Thomas Legg, when conducting the investigation announced on 18 May, will have access to all official documents which mention Sandline and the supply of military equipment. [43089]

Mr. Robin Cook: As I made clear in my statement on 18 May 1998, Official Report, columns 601–11, Sir Thomas Legg will be able to see all documents which refer to Sandline, and consider whether they were properly acted upon. These will include intelligence reports. We are aware of five intelligence reports, received between 8 October 1997, when UNSCR 1132 was adopted, and 10 March 1998 when Lord Avebury's letter of 5 February was passed to Customs, which refer to Sandline, or companies associated with Sandline, and to the supply of arms or military equipment. They were seen by officials but not by Ministers.

Edgar Fernandes

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the circumstances of Edgar Fernandes's death; and what representations he has made to the Turkish authorities on this matter. [42105]

Mr. Fatchett: A body was found on 10 April by the Bosphorus in Istanbul. On 8 May, Turkish police showed a photograph of the body to a relative of Edgar Fernandes who provisionally identified it. The relative subsequently saw the body and confirmed on 12 May that the body was that of Edgar Fernandes. We do not yet have details of the circumstances of Mr. Fernandes's death. An early unofficial police statement referred to a blow to the back of the head. We are now awaiting the autopsy report from the Turkish authorities. We continue to press the Turkish police to investigate the death of Mr. Fernandes thoroughly.

Gibraltar

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the number of military confrontations which have occurred between the Royal Navy or Royal Gibraltar Police and the Spanish sea-borne Civil Guard since 1 May 1997. [42156]

Mr. Doug Henderson: There have been no incidents during this period involving the Royal Navy or Royal Gibraltar Police and marine units of the Spanish Civil Guard. However, the Royal Navy was involved in two incidents in British waters around Gibraltar, on 22 October 1997 and 5 April 1998, involving incursions by Spanish naval patrol vessels. The Royal Gibraltar Police and the Royal Navy were involved in three incidents, on 5 July 1997 and on 13 March and 4 April 1998, involving incursions by vessels of the Spanish coastguard service.

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the military confrontation on 6 April off Gibraltar. [42157]

Mr. Doug Henderson: There was no incident on 6 April. However, on 5 April, a Spanish naval patrol vessel was observed moving within British waters off Gibraltar. When the Spanish vessel failed to respond to calls, HMS Nottingham, which was approaching Gibraltar at the time, requested her to leave. The Spanish vessel was escorted out of British waters by a patrol craft of the Gibraltar Squadron. Our Ambassador in Madrid later protested to the Spanish Ministry of Foreign Affairs over this incident.

Kashmir

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he intends to take to promote peace and reconciliation in Kashmir. [42155]

Mr. Fatchett: We have made clear, most recently, during my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Ealing, Southall (Mr. Khabra), on 14 May 1998, Official Report, column 527, that a solution to the problem of Kashmir is primarily for India and Pakistan to find. That problem has been compounded by the nuclear tests in India last week. It is all the more important now for India and Pakistan to continue their dialogue on all issues outstanding between them, including Kashmir. Both Governments are aware that we stand ready to help if called upon to do so.

Consultation Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the consultation papers published since 1 May 1997 giving the date of publication, closing date for submissions and the number of respondents. [42243]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Although the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has frequent contacts with non-governmental organisations and individuals on policy issues, no formal consultation papers have been published for public comment since 1 May 1997.

Intelligence Gathering

Mrs. Ann Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the EU report, "Assessing the Technologies of Political Control", what guidelines govern the intelligence-gathering operations of the United States National Security Agency in the United Kingdom in respect of other EU countries. [42044]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 18 May 1998]: The report to which my hon. Friend refers, although commissioned by the European Parliament, is in no way endorsed by them. We do not comment on the intelligence operations of the UK or of its allies.

Sarno, Italy

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contribution Her Majesty's Government are making to disaster relief in Sarno, Italy. [42772]

Mr. Doug Henderson: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has offered assistance should any be required. No request has been received.

War Crimes Tribunal

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much additional money the Government have made available to the War Crimes Tribunal in The Hague since 1 May 1997. [41284]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Since May 1997, the Government have made voluntary contributions of £296,000 for the construction of a new courtroom, and £1.198 million to the Tribunal's 1998 Exhumations Fund, in addition to payments of assessed contributions totalling £2.025 million.

Indonesia

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the delivery of British Aerospace Hawk 200 light multi-role fighters to Indonesia will commence. [41448]

Mr. Spellar: I have been asked to reply.

The current contract to supply Hawk 200 light multi-role fighter aircraft to Indonesia was agreed between British Aerospace and the Government of Indonesia in February 1996. I understand from British Aerospace that the delivery programme for aircraft supplied under this contract is a matter which is confidential between British Aerospace and the Government of Indonesia. The information is therefore being withheld under exemption 13 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Consultation Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the consultation papers published since 1 May 1997 giving the date of publication, closing date for submissions and the number of respondents. [42245]

Angela Eagle: I have today placed details of the consultation papers published by my Department since 1 May 1997 in the Library of the House.

Motor Cycles

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what plans he has to establish a Motorcycling Strategy Group as part of the Integrated Transport Policy; [42314]

(2) what assessment he has made of the role for powered two-wheel vehicles in an Integrated Transport Policy; [42315]

(3) what assessment he has made of the contribution to (a) traffic congestion, (b) optimum land use and (c) pollution, which would be made by promoting use of powered two-wheel vehicles. [42325]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 18 May 1998]: In developing our transport strategy we have had regard to all the implications of the use of motorcycles. Our conclusions will be published in the forthcoming Integrated Transport Strategy White Paper.

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will encourage (a) powered two-wheel vehicle usage in employers' Green Commuter Plans as part of the Integrated Transport Policy and (b) parking schemes which encourage commuters to use two-wheeled vehicles rather than four-wheeled ones. [42327]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We are developing our transport policy for the Integrated Transport Strategy White Paper but Government guidance already recommends that local authorities should bear in mind the needs of motorcyclists when planning and designing on-street parking places. We will, when there is a suitable legislative opportunity, be taking forward measures that will make it easier for highway authorities to provide secure parking.

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the relative environmental impact of powered two-wheel vehicles over other motorised transport. [42328]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Section 2 of Transport Statistics Great Britain 1997 sets out details of the energy consumption and pollutant emissions of various forms of transport. In particular, Table 2.9 shows the relative emissions of various pollutants for different vehicles in urban conditions.

Farms (Health and Safety)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many children under the age of 16 have been killed on farms in each year since 1990 as a result of an accident arising from agricultural work. [42609]

Angela Eagle: The numbers of fatalities to children aged under 16 in agriculture (i) are shown below:

Year	Fatal
1990–91	6
1991–92	2
1993–94	3
1994–95	2
1995–96	3
1996–97	8
1997–98[1]	5
Total	37

[1] Provisional

Notes:

1. For the years 1990–91 to 1994–95 agriculture is defined by Standard Industrial Classification 1980 code '0100' Agriculture and Horticulture, and for 1995–96 to 1997–98 by Standard Industrial Classification 1992 code '0' Agriculture, Forestry, Fishing Hunting and related services
2. Data include injuries to children aged 1 to 15
3. Years commencing 1 April

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many accidents on farms there were in (a) 1995, (b) 1996 and (c) 1997; and how many (i) were fatal and (ii) involved children. [42582]

Angela Eagle: The numbers of injuries in Agriculture[1] are shown in the table:

Year	Total number of injuries	Number of fatalities	Fatalities involving children
1995–96	1,953	45	3
1996–97	2,548	64	8
1997–98[2]	2,373	48	5

[1] Agriculture is defined by Standard Industrial Classification 1992 code '0' Agriculture, Hunting, Forestry and Fishing

[2] Provisional

Notes:

1. Data include injuries to children aged 1 to 15
2. Years commencing 1 April
3. 1996–97 and 1997–98 injury figures, excluding fatalities, cannot be directly compared with those of previous years which were reported under different regulations

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures he is taking to improve health and safety on farms. [42789]

Angela Eagle: The Government are actively promoting improved health and safety in agriculture by informing the industry of hazards and the practical steps to reduce the levels of risk. Most of this work is undertaken by the Health and Safety Executive and includes:

targeted enforcement action and inspection 'blitzes';

the 'Good Health is Good Business Campaign'; attendance at agricultural shows to publicise hazards and provide advice on reducing risks;

the production of guidance material, much of which is free; and working through intermediaries, such as the Transport and General Workers Union and the National Farmers Union.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many fatal accidents there were involving tractors and how many of those involved children in the last 12 months for which records are available. [42773]

Angela Eagle: During the period 1 April 1997 to 31 March 1998 provisional figures for fatal accidents involving tractors in agriculture show that 6 fatalities were reported to HSE. Of these, 2 were to children, neither of whom were directly involved in operating the tractors.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had with the TGWU rural workers section on improving health and safety records on farms. [42790]

Angela Eagle: I last met the Transport and General Workers Union Rural and Allied Workers section to discuss health and safety in October 1997.

Environment Council

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many environmental appraisals were produced by the European Commission to accompany proposals presented to the EU Environment Council on 23 March. [42666]

Mr. Meacher: There were no presentations of new proposals at the EU Environment Council in March. However, all proposals for legislation are accompanied by an explanatory memorandum which sets out, amongst other things, the environmental justification for the proposal.

"Policy Guidance on Policy Appraisal and the Environment"

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many copies of "Policy Guidance on Policy Appraisal and the Environment" have been printed. [42658]

Mr. Meacher: 11,000 copies of "Policy Guidance on Policy Appraisal and the Environment" (April 1998) have been printed.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many copies of "Policy Guidance on Policy Appraisal and the Environment" have been requested by each Government department. [42659]

Mr. Meacher: The number of copies of "Policy Guidance on Policy Appraisal and the Environment" which have been requested by Government Departments is as follows:

Department	Copies
Cabinet Office	125
Customs and Excise	20
Department for Education and Employment	150
Department for International Development	10
Department of Health	150
Department for Culture, Media and Sport	15
Department of Trade and Industry	1,000
Department of Social Security	100
Forestry Commission	125
Foreign and Commonwealth Office	10
Home Office	100
Inland Revenue	20
Lord Chancellor's Department	12
Law Offices	10
Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food	700
Ministry of Defence	200
Northern Ireland Office	1,500
Scottish Office	250
HM Treasury	400
Welsh Office	270

This totals 5,167 copies. In addition, approximately 3,100 were distributed within DETR, its Executive Agencies, NDPBs and advisory bodies.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish a command paper listing, by Department, the environmental appraisals which have been produced in accordance with "Policy Guidance on Policy Appraisal and the Environment". [42661]

Mr. Meacher: Arrangements for ensuring that environmental appraisals are undertaken in appropriate cases are primarily a matter for individual Departments. We shall, however, be considering systems for collective monitoring by Green Ministers in the light of the publication of Policy Guidance on Policy Appraisal and the Environment on 2 April.

Road Humps (Ambulances)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what evaluation his Department has made of the medical effects of road humps on patients being transported by ambulance. [42698]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 19 May 1998]: No evaluation of the medical effects has been carried out. However, in developing published advice for the design of road humps, my Department ensured that passenger discomfort was evaluated. My Department has produced a Code of Practice, agreed with the Ambulance Policy Advisory Group, for consulting on proposals to introduce traffic calming measures, and for agreeing the means of implementing those proposals.

Driving Test Centre (Torbay and South Devon)

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement about the future of the driving test examination centre serving Torbay and South Devon. [42628]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 19 May 1998]: The Driving Standards Agency is required to vacate the driving test centre in Newton Abbott this August. The Agency is searching for suitable alternative premises.

Biotechnology

Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the meetings which he has held to discuss biotechnology with (i) Greenpeace, (ii) Green Alliance, (iii) the Genetics Forum, (iv) Friends of the Earth, (v) Gene Watch, (vi) the Genetic Engineering Network, (vii) the Soil Association, (viii) the Consumers Association, (ix) Monsanto, (x) Zeneca and (xi) AgrEvo. [42774]

Angela Eagle: The Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has not had any meetings to discuss biotechnology with any of the companies or organisations specified. The Minister for the Environment has however had meetings with Greenpeace, Green Alliance, Friends of the Earth, Gene Watch, the Soil Association and the Consumers Association, to discuss biotechnology.

Fly Tipping

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review the legislation governing fly tipping. [42490]

Angela Eagle: The Environment Agency has made clear its commitment to taking firm enforcement action on fly-tipping and we have no plans to review the already stringent controls. The main controls and the maximum penalties for contravention of those controls are set out in the following table:

Maximum penalties for offences relating to waste

Offence	Magistrates' court	Crown court
Section 33(1)(a), (b) or (c) of the Environmental Protection Act 1990
Unlawful deposit, recovery, disposal etc. of non-special waste	Imprisonment for 6 months and/or a fine of £20,000	Imprisonment for 2 years and/or an unlimited fine

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid Board

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is his estimate of the total value of legal charges standing to the benefit of the Legal Aid Board, and of the notional or actual interest earned on that total, for the last five years for which figures are available. [41897]

Mr. Hoon: It is not possible to give an estimate of the total value of charges, because in a significant minority of cases the amount is unquantified. Nor is it possible to give notional or actual figures for interest. No records are available of notional interest, and it is not possible to say how much interest will have accrued by the time each debt is paid off.

All information shown is taken from Note 10 to the annual accounts of the Legal Aid Board for each of the last five years. Interest accrued to the given date is recorded here.

Date	Total value of quantified charges	Of which, interest bearing	Interest accrued as at 31/3 of date shown[1]	Interest recovered as at 31/3 of date shown[2]
1996–97	185,906	113,668	30,623	2,946
1995–96	170,516	98,790	23,987	2,124
1994–95	146,846	78,882	17,587	1,532
1993–94	128,872	62,132	12,517	1,085
1992–93	107,261	43,678	7,573	600

[1] Interest received is paid back into the Fund for the benefit of public expenditure

[2] These are voluntary repayments

The following sets out cases where the Legal Aid Board has not yet received all the information necessary to quantify the charge.

£000

Date	Number of cases	Number of unquantified cases
1996–97	101	16
1995–96	99	17
1994–95	92	17
1993–94	86	17
1992–93	78	16

Serious Fraud Trials

Angela Smith: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will set out his plans for a review of transfer and committal procedures in serious fraud trials. [43178]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor has directed his Department to carry out a Review of pre-trial procedures in serious fraud trials. The purpose of this review will be to conduct a detailed examination of trial procedures in these cases, from the decision to commit or transfer a case to the Crown Court right up to the commencement of the jury trial. The review will assess the extent of current compliance with existing rules and procedures, evaluating their effectiveness and considering whether changes to procedure and case management could aid the delivery of justice in serious fraud cases. The review will involve wide consultation with all bodies involved in serious fraud cases.

The Terms of Reference of the review are as follows:

"To evaluate the existing procedures which follow a decision to commit or transfer for trial in serious fraud cases, in particular compliance with the rules concerning committal or transfer and preparatory hearings:

To determine whether these procedures, when fully complied with, are the optimal mechanism for case management, or if they should be modified in any way:

To assess whether more fundamental changes to such procedures could provide more effective delivery of justice in serious fraud cases; and

To outline and consider any such changes".

The review will commence in May 1998. It is intended that provisional conclusions will be reported to the Lord Chancellor by September of this year.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Standing Committees (Hansard)

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the President of the Council if she will list the occasions since 1968 on which Standing Committee proceedings have not been reported by Hansard in their entirety. [42375]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: There have been no occasions.

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO

Millennium Experience

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will make a statement on the role of people aged 16 to 25 years in the millennium experience. [40812]

Mr. Mandelson: The Millennium Experience, incorporating the Dome and the national Challenge programme of events and activities around the country, will appeal to people of all ages, interests and backgrounds. There will be a number of opportunities available to young people. The project will create training and employment opportunities for people aged 16 to 15, both in terms of the Millennium Dome's operation and its central attraction, which will require performers with a range of skills. Education will also be central to the Experience as a whole, but particularly important in the context of the national Challenge initiative. The Company's regional Education Managers are working with local Further Education colleges to design courses linked to the Millennium Experience.

Millennium Dome

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will list the steps being taken to minimise release to the atmosphere of the gas HFC 134a from the proposed air-conditioning system within the Millennium Dome; and what weight of gas he expects will be released for each year of operation of the Dome. [40553]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 7 May 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 17 March 1998, Official Report, column 602. The chiller units procured by the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) are hermetically sealed and have been designed to be leak-free in operation.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what assessment was made of the air-conditioning systems used by (a) the National Portrait Gallery and (b) the National Trust before deciding which system to use in the Millennium Dome. [40548]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 7 May 1998]: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) took advice from its professional consultants about the design of cooling systems and a wide variety of solutions were considered. The Company put this contract out to tender according to European public procurement requirements, and did not specify in the advertisement either the type of chiller unit or the choice of refrigerant. The Company concluded in the light of tenders received that, given the unique requirements of the Dome, which have no existing direct equivalent, the chiller units selected offer the safest and most flexible solution in the time available.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what instructions he has given to the New Millennium Experience Company regarding the type of air-conditioning to be used in the Millennium Dome. [40547]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 7 May 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave him on 26 March 1998, Official Report, column 247 and 6 April 1998, Official Report, column 77.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if the Living Island within the Millennium Dome will provide information in respect of climate change. [40544]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 7 May 1998]: Yes. The Living Island zone will explore the nature of mankind's relationship with the natural environment and examine the environmental challenges that face the world locally, nationally and globally. The New Millennium Experience Company is working with environmental non-governmental organisations in developing the zone's content.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Civil Service Pensions

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment he has made of the arrangements for providing information about changes in Civil Service pensions to the pensioners concerned; what representations he has received on this matter; and what plans he has to change these procedures. [42278]

Dr. David Clark: Information provided to Civil Service pensioners is compliant with the requirements of The Occupational Pension Schemes (Disclosure of Information) Regulations 1996. I am aware that a number of pensioners were regrettably notified late of their increased rate of pension payable from April following the annual uprating exercise. Difficulties encountered by a contractor to Paymaster (1836) Ltd, the paying agent, resulted in a failure to ensure timely notification in all cases. Payment of the pension at the revised rate was, however, made to all pensioners on the due date.

Public Appointments

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when his Department's action plan for increasing the number of women holding public appointments will be published; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [42822]

Dr. David Clark: My Department's action plan will be published shortly. Copies will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Public Appointments List

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what is the number of staff (whole time equivalent) working on the Public Appointments List; [42623]

(2) what was the total cost to public funds of the collection of names, maintenance and updating of responses, and circulating to departments of responses to their requests for names, for the Public Appointments List in the last available year. [42619]

Dr. David Clark: The Public Appointments Unit has one part-time and six full-time members of staff, whose duties include the maintenance of the Central List, and the provision of names from that List in response to specific requests from departments. In 1997–98, the cost of the Unit was £142,200.

Public Bodies

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what is the average attendance fee of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department; [42821]

(2) what is the average salary of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department. [42820]

Dr. David Clark: The majority of board members of non-departmental public bodies give their time and services voluntarily and receive no payment other than normal travel and subsistence expenses. Where members do receive remuneration, this can vary between an annual salary, an honorarium or an attendance fee (which itself can be a daily rate or a half-daily rate, calculated on a per meeting basis). Individuals' remuneration therefore is not directly comparable. Full details of all payments to board members of non-departmental public bodies by gender, are given in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies". Copies of "Public Bodies 1997" are available in the libraries of the House.

Crown Copyright

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what response he has received to the consultation exercise he held on the Government's green paper, Crown Copyright in the Information Age. [43280]

Dr. David Clark: I am pleased to say that the consultation exercise on the Government's Green Paper Crown Copyright in the Information Age, received a good response with 70 replies drawn from a wide range of individuals and organisations. Many of the respondents praised the Green Paper for the clear and comprehensive way in which it covered the issues and options.

I am today placing in the Libraries of the House a list of those who responded together with copies of their responses received (except where the authors requested anonymity). A paper copy of the set of responses is available from HMSO, within the Cabinet Office.

The consultation exercise has been extremely valuable in identifying the requirements of the public and the information industry regarding access to government information. It also raised a number of issues which are linked to the Government's Freedom of Information initiative. I am now considering the main points arising from the consultation and how we will need to take account of them in developing an appropriate framework for accessing and disseminating official information.

The breakdown of responses by user type is as follows:

User type	Quantity	Percentage of total
A. Private individuals	5	7
B. Business users	16	23
C. Media	3	4
D. Academic and library community	9	13
E. Legal	8	11
F. Public bodies	7	10
G. Trade and professional bodies	17	25
H. Private individuals with specialist knowledge	5	7

PRIME MINISTER

OSCE (UK Delegation)

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Prime Minister what changes he has made to the composition of the United Kingdom delegation to the Parliamentary Assembly of the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe. [43181]

The Prime Minister: Due to her Ministerial appointment Baroness Ramsay of Cartvale has resigned as a member of the United Kingdom delegation to the Parliamentary Assembly of the OSCE.

I have appointed Baroness Hilton of Eggardon as a replacement representative from the Government benches.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister for what reasons he has not yet replied to the question from the hon. Member for Gordon on No. 10 Downing Street staff costs, tabled on 27 April (40221); and if he will make a statement. [42891]

The Prime Minister: A reply will be issued shortly.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Wednesday 20 May. [42395]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with Ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I shall have further such meetings later today. And later today I will be visiting Northern Ireland to assist efforts in bringing about a decisive "yes" vote in Friday's referendum, which I believe to be the only result that can offer peace and stability in the future.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

School Targets

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will announce the requirements for school-level target setting from September 1998. [43104]

Mr. Byers: School based target-setting for pupil performance will be introduced in September 1998 for all maintained schools, including special schools, with a requirement for two targets for 11 year olds, in English and Mathematics at Key Stage 2, and three targets for 16 year olds at GCSE (or GNVQ equivalent) level. We are clear that this process should support school improvement and should not become a burdensome administrative procedure.

All maintained schools (including special schools) with pupils at the appropriate ages will be required to set the following targets from September 1998:

Key Stage 2: % of pupils attaining level 4 or above in English

Key Stage 2: % of pupils attaining level 4 or above in mathematics

Key Stage 4: % of pupils attaining 5 or more GCSEs or equivalent at grades A*-C

Key Stage 4: % of pupils attaining 1 or more GCSEs or equivalent at grades A*-G

Key Stage 4: Average GCSE (or equivalent) points score per pupil.

Targets should be set each Autumn and should relate to those pupils who will take the National Curriculum tests or GCSE examinations or equivalent in the following school year, i.e. five terms later.

The regulatory framework will be laid before Parliament shortly. Schools should receive details of the requirement via a circular in the summer term.

Education Action Zones

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will announce details of the applications to set up education action zones. [43281]

Mr. Byers: A total of 60 applications have been received. The areas covered are:

School Budgets

Mr. Dorrell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will publish a list of aggregated schools budgets for 1998–99 by local education authority. [37761]

Mr. Byers: The following table gives the information requested as a listing of local education authorities in England for 1998–99. The figures are derived from the budget statements produced by the local education authorities under section 122 of the 1996 Education Act.

New Deal

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if any young person will be disqualified from receipt of benefit solely for refusing to take up the proposed New Deal option of serving in the Armed Forces. [42136]

Mr. Andrew Smith: There is no separate New Deal "option" of serving in the Armed Forces. That said, one of the opportunities which the New Deal for 18–24 year olds is able to offer to unemployed young people is the chance to consider a possible career in the Armed Forces. No one will face benefit sanctions solely for choosing not to do so. Employment Service guidelines make clear that entry to the Armed Forces must be voluntary.

Cheltenham and Gloucester HE College

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when Cheltenham and Gloucester College of Higher Education will be formally awarded university status. [42488]

Dr. Howells: Cheltenham and Gloucester College of Higher Education has not yet applied for university status. The Government have agreed with the recommendation of the National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education that there should be no immediate change to the current criteria for university status. Under these criteria an institution should normally have a track record of satisfactorily maintaining degree standards for at least three years following the award of taught and research degree awarding powers. Cheltenham and Gloucester College of Higher Education obtained taught course degree awarding powers in 1992 and research degree awarding powers in February 1998.

SCOTLAND

NHS Trusts and Health Boards

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will state for each NHS trust and health board the (a) names, (b) dates of appointment and (c) party affiliations of the non-executive directors who have (i) been appointed since 1 May 1997 and (ii) resigned since 1 May 1997. [37796]

Mr. Galbraith [holding answer 6 April 1998]: As the information is rather lengthy, I have arranged to have a copy placed in the House Library.

Small Business Loans Scheme

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the future of the Small Business Loans Scheme. [40645]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 12 May 1998]: The Small Business Loan Scheme was introduced by the Scottish Enterprise network in 1994, with the aim of trying to encourage small businesses, when utilising banking facilities to finance investment, to place greater reliance on term loans and less on overdrafts. Having been introduced on a pilot basis, the scheme was discontinued last year after an independent evaluation concluded that the scheme had not sufficiently met its objectives.

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to extend the Small Business Loans Scheme to the tourism sector. [40646]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 12 May 1998]: The Small Business Loan Scheme has been discontinued. My right hon. Friend has no plans to extend it to the tourism sector.

Prawn and Scallop Fishing

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made towards introducing a weekend ban on prawn and scallop fishing off the west coast of Scotland; what measures are being taken to preserve stocks; and if he will make a statement. [41640]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 19 May 1998]: The Government are keen to ensure that the scallop fishery continues to be conducted on a sustainable basis. With this in mind, a range of possible options for scallop conservation are being looked at. Conservation measures for the west coast prawn (nephrops) stock are already in place in the form of a total allowable catch set on the basis of independent scientific advice from the Advisory Committee on Fishery Management. The Scottish Fishermen's Federation and the Clyde Fishermen's Association have urged the Government not to introduce any sea-time restrictions on the nephrops fleet and we have no plans at present to do so.

Breast Cancer

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many women in Scotland waited over (a) one month, (b) three months, (c) six months and (d) 12 months for breast cancer treatment in the year ended 31 March (i) 1996, (ii) 1997 and (iii) 1998. [41721]

Mr. Galbraith [holding answer 12 May 1998]: The precise information requested is hot held centrally since the waiting times data collected nationally do not explicitly identify patients waiting for breast cancer treatment. Information is collected nationally on the number of women who were admitted to hospital from the waiting list with a breast cancer-related diagnosis and who were later discharged following medical or surgical treatment. The relevant information for the years ending 31 March 1996 and 1997 and the latest available for the year ending 31 March 1998 is set out in the table.

	Year ending 31 March
Patients waited	1996	1997	1998[1]
Over one month	390	357	283
Over three months	14	13	11
Over six months	9	5	2
Over twelve months	3	2	0

Leukaemia

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many leukaemias were (a) observed and (b) expected in the 0–24 age group in the postcode sector DG7.3 (Castle Douglas) in the periods (i) 1990 to 1994 and (ii) 1995 to the present time; and if he will make a statement on the incidence of leukaemia in Castle Douglas relative to the rest of Scotland. [42135]

Mr. Galbraith: No cases of leukaemia were observed in the 0–24 age group in postcode sector DG7.3 during the periods 1990–94 or 1995–96 (the most recent year for which information is available). For postcode sector DG7.3, based on background rates in Scotland as a whole, the expected numbers of cases of leukaemia in this age group, by period of diagnosis are shown in the following table:

Observed and expected numbers of cases of leukaemia in age group 0–24 years in DG7.3 in the periods 1990–94 and 1995–96

Time period	Observed number of cases	Expected number of cases
1990–94	0	0.19
1995–96	0	0.06

Euro (Teaching Materials)

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to monitor the content of teaching and information materials about the Euro currency funded by the European Commission supplied to schools in Scotland and to ensure its compliance with the terms of the Education Act 1996. [42681]

Mr. Wilson: The provisions of the Education Act 1996 do not apply in Scotland where education authorities and headteachers are responsible for the delivery and management of the curriculum. Guidance is, however, offered by the SOEID and this guidance provides adequate opportunity for issues relating to the Euro currency to be included in the curriculum.

In the National Guidelines on Environmental Studies, 5–14, the European Union is a fairly common topic to select for study under the heading of People and Society. There is opportunity in the Modern Studies Standard Grade to cover currency questions relating to the European Union. This is also an option at Higher Grade and there are National Certificates that concentrate on Europe. Finally, under the Higher Still arrangements materials are being developed which will be sent to schools later this year. These also provide opportunity for covering issues relating to the European Union.

In addition, the Scottish Consultative Council on the Curriculum have produced a Handbook entitled "Thinking European" which provides ideas for integrating a European dimension into the curriculum.

Forestry Commission Land (Hunting)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the agreement was signed between the Forestry Commission and the Masters of Foxhounds Association incorporating standard terms and conditions for hunting with hounds on Forestry Commission land. [41887]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 18 May 1998]: Although the Forestry Commission and the Masters of Foxhounds Association agreed the terms and conditions for licences to hunt foxes on Commission land earlier this year, the formal agreement has not yet been signed.

New Deal

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list (a) by Employment Service region and (b) in total (i) the number of personal advisers in post to administer the New Deal programme and (ii) the number of New Deal applicants expected in 1998–99; and if he will calculate by Employment Service region the ratio of expected New Deal applicants to personal advisers, indicating the average for Scotland. [42149]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 18 May 1998]: The information for those eligible for the 18–24 programme by New Deal Units of Delivery within Scotland is tabulated. The planning assumption is that New Deal Personal Advisers will have an average caseload during Gateway of 33 clients with sufficient time being available to allow advisers to visit a further 12 clients a month who are on one of the 4 options.

[1] Indicative assumptions based on current unemployment levels. These are not forecasts of the actual numbers who will participate but they do help to ensure that adequate resources are in place to meet potential demand

Note:

The ratio of expected applicants to Personal Advisers is a largely meaningless statistic because due to the rolling nature of the programme, it does not indicate the number of young people a Personal Adviser would be required to deal with at any one time

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many sites of special scientific interest there were in Scotland on 31 March; and what was their total area in hectares. [42443]

Mr. Macdonald: At 31 March 1998, there were 1,441 Sites of Special Scientific Interest in Scotland, covering 917,071 hectares in total.

Women Offenders

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to receive the Fairweather/Skinner report on "Women in Jail"; and if he will make a statement. [42124]

Mr. McLeish: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Kilmarnock and Loudoun (Mr. Browne) on 13 May 1998, Official Report, column 131. The high level steering group which will be set up to direct the work of the inter-agency project on women's offending in the Glasgow area will be chaired by Professor Sheila McLean of Glasgow University.

Child Care Qualifications

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if Lord Cullen's recommendation for the development of a Scottish vocational qualification in respect of work with children has now been fully implemented; and if he will make a statement. [42419]

Mr. Dewar: A considerable amount of ground work has been undertaken by The Scottish Office in considering Lord Cullen's recommendation on a suitable qualification. Scottish Vocational Qualifications (SVQs) are work-based qualifications derived from national occupational standards. The then SCOTVEC (now part of the Scottish Qualifications Authority) was therefore unable to develop an SVQ prior to the development of standards by appropriate lead bodies (the relevant National Training Organisations for the various sectors involved in work with children and young people). An SVQ, however, might not in any case be the most suitable approach to training for a sector with a high incidence of volunteers. To date, priority has been given to consideration of Recommendation 27 in Lord Cullen's report for the accreditation and vetting of adults working with children and young people, the outcome of which could have a significant bearing on the training and qualifications requirements. A consultation paper on various options for training will be issued shortly.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Guardsmen Fisher and Wright

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent representations she has received from the Scots Guards Association and Mr. Charles Turnock on behalf of the Commandos Old Comrades Association on the conduct of the trial of Guardsmen Fisher and Wright. [37144]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 8 April 1998]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received a number of representations from members of the Scots Guards Association, and Mr. Charles Turnock, about the conduct of the trial of Guardsmen Fisher and Wright. However, questions as to what evidence to call were issues for the prosecution and defence to consider, and for the trial judge to decide.

Firearms

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if a resident of Great Britain may join a rifle or pistol club in Northern Ireland; if such a person may apply to have a firearms certificate in Northern Ireland on the basis of his firearm being kept in a rifle club premises with approved security facilities; and if she will make a statement. [40757]

Mr. Ingram: A resident of Great Britain may apply to join any firearms club in Northern Ireland. Membership is a matter for individual clubs to decide.

The firearms legislation provides that residents of Great Britain can apply to the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary for a Northern Ireland firearm certificate. When considering such applications the Chief Constable must satisfy himself that the normal legislative criteria for the grant of a certificate are met. These criteria comprise matters of suitability, good reason and public safety, including arrangements for the secure storage of firearms.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps a member of a licensed gun club in Northern Ireland wishing to carry his licensed firearm through other parts of the United Kingdom to compete abroad in competitions would be required to take; and if she will make a statement about the movement of licensed firearms for sporting competitions. [41142]

Mr. Ingram: Under the Firearms (Northern Ireland) Order 1981 (Amendment) Regulations 1992, which implemented the requirements of EU Directive No. 91/447/EEC (on the control of the acquisition and possession of weapons) a resident of Northern Ireland wishing to take his legally held firearm to a EU country must first obtain a European Firearms Pass from the Chief Constable of the RUC. Persons travelling to a non-EU country should write in advance to the country of destination to ensure they satisfy the licensing requirements of that country.

In Great Britain target pistols are prohibited weapons and as such their possession requires specific authority from either the Home Secretary or the Secretary of State for Scotland as appropriate under section 5 of the Firearms Act 1968. I understand that such authority would not normally be granted to private individuals, including those who wished simply to travel through Great Britain. In the absence of an authority, target pistols would be expected to be transported by carriers holding the appropriate authority under section 5 of the 1968 Act.

Prisoner Releases

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when she expects the first release of prisoners under the terms of the Belfast Agreement. [41126]

Mr. Ingram: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland referred to those parts of the Belfast Agreement relating to prisoners in her statement to the House of 20 April 1998, Official Report, columns 479–482, and placed a document containing further details in the Library. If the Agreement is endorsed by the referendums to be held on 22 May, the Government said that they would seek to enact the appropriate legislation by the end of June. The timing of the first releases under the scheme will therefore depend on when the legislation is enacted, the procedures adopted by the review body once appointed and whether the necessary conditions for accelerated release are fulfilled.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to her answer of 6 May 1998, Official Report, columns 412–13, on prisoners, if she will list or estimate for the 781 prisoners in custody who had been convicted of scheduled offences, how many had no connection with terrorism; of those how many will be eligible for release in (a) 1998, (b) 1999, (c) 2000, (d) 2001, (e) 2002 and (f) in the following five year period; and how many of those in each year are serving life or other indeterminate sentences. [41715]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him on 6 May 1998, Official Report, columns 412–13, which indicated that details provided on prisoners convicted of scheduled offences may include offences unconnected with terrorism. Data on the number of prisoners convicted of scheduled offences who had no connection with terrorism are not centrally recorded and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to her answer of 6 May 1998, Official Report, columns 412–13, on prisoners, if she will list for each of the years from 1998 to 2002 and for the following five years by the categories shown the average number of years served at the expected date of release. [41716]

Mr. Ingram: The average number of years served at the expected date of release would be as follows:

Year	UDA/UFF	UVF	LVF	PIRA	INLA
1998	3 years 1 month	3 years 8 months	—	7 years 4 months	4 years 6 months
1999	4 years 9 months	4 years 6 months	2 years	7 years 8 months	4 years 6 months
2000	6 years 8 months	6 years 2 months	3 years 6 months	7 years 8 months	8 years
2001	7 years 6 months	7 years 5 months	6 years 9 months	9 years 6 months	4 years 6 months
2002	6 years 10 months	8 years 5 months	7 years 8 months	9 years 9 months	—
2003	—	7 years	—	10 years 6 months	—
2004	—	—	—	12 years 3 months	12 years 6 months
2005	12 years 6 months	—	—	11 years 8 months	13 months
2006	—	—	—	12 years	—
2007	—	—	—	15 years	—

Note:

The data in the table relate to those persons convicted of scheduled offences and sentenced to three years or more who were in custody in Maze on 26 January 1998. The complete record was not available for a small number of prisoners when the research on which this table is based was carried out and so the table does not include data on average years served for that small group.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the prisoners convicted of terrorist offences who have been transferred to prisons in Northern Ireland from Great Britain in the last three years, indicating (a) the date of transfer, (b) the date of sentence, (c) the length of sentence, (d) the crimes for which convicted, (e) the organisation to which they claimed allegiance and (f) the date of release under the rules governing such release in (i) Great Britain prior to the recent agreement, (ii) Northern Ireland prior to the recent agreement and (iii) under the terms of the recent agreement. [41717]

Mr. Ingram: Sixteen prisoners convicted of offences in Great Britain related to terrorism have transferred to Northern Ireland in the last three years. It is not normal practice to disclose the personal details of individual prisoners and details of claimed allegiance are not maintained. However, due to the segregation of prisoners in HMP Maze in paramilitary affiliated groups it is possible to construe that of the sixteen prisoners transferred 10 aligned themselves to the Provisional IRA, 4 to INLA and 2 to the LVF.

The table indicates the offence, date of sentence, length of sentence, date of transfer to Northern Ireland, the prisoner's current transfer status, date of release applicable in Great Britain and the date of release under remission arrangements in Northern Ireland at the current time.

The impact of the proposed accelerated release scheme on the individual's release dates has required a re-calculation exercise to be undertaken. The exercise is almost complete and the information will be issued shortly to the hon. Gentleman in a written response.

Salmon and Sea Trout

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the papers published by her Department in relation to salmon and sea trout in each of the last 10 years indicating which originated from work carried out at Bushmills. [41659]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland has published 78 papers relating to salmon since 1987. All of them originated from the research work carried out at the Bush Salmon Station at Bushmills. A full list of the publications has been placed in the Library of the House. The Department has not published any papers relating to Sea Trout.

Police Reservists

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) numbers and (b) percentage of police reservists have not had their contracts renewed in the last three years. [42165]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 18 May 1998]: Over the last 3 years 25 RUC reservists were refused renewal of their 3-year contracts and 34 were refused one-year extensions. This represents an average of 1.62%. The renewals or extensions were refused for: (1) being medically unfit for the full range of duties; (2) poor attendance; and (3) unsatisfactory performance.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Edgar Fernandes

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps (a) the Police and (b) his Department are taking to investigate the death of Edgar Fernandes; [42101]

(2) if he will review the police investigation into the death of Edgar Fernandes; [42102]

(3) what representations he has received on the circumstances of Edgar Fernandes's death. [42103]

Mr. Michael: The investigation into the death of Edgar Fernandes is a matter for the police in Turkey, where Mr. Fernandes died. The United Kingdom law enforcement agencies which are assisting in the investigation in this country, the Metropolitan Police Service and the National Central Bureau of Interpol (part of the National Criminal Intelligence Service), are liaising with the authorities in Turkey, Malta and Egypt and the Consular Division of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

We have received no representations on the circumstances of Mr. Fernandes' death. My Department is liaising closely with the agencies involved in this country to ensure that all possible steps are taken to assist with the inquiry, but the responsibility for investigating the case lies with the Turkish police.

Firearms

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, (1) pursuant to the letter of 5 May from the Scottish Office, Home Department, Police Division, to Mr. T. McCarthy, Secretary Scottish SPA, regarding consultation on matters affecting the administration of Firearms Acts for what reasons Mr. McCarthy has not been (a) supplied with documents and (b) consulted by the Home Office Operational Police Policy Unit in London in connection with their review and proposed changes to the firearms rules or forms; [42411]

(2) what consultations the Home Office Operational Police Policy Unit held with (a) Scottish Firearms Clubs or Associations and (b) the Deer Commission for Scotland on their proposed changes to the Firearms Rules and Firearms Forms. [42413]

Mr. Michael: The Home Office commenced consultation on the revision of the firearms forms on 5 December 1997. In accordance with established practice, the Home Office consulted bodies representing shooting sports in Great Britain as a whole. Consultation between branches and affiliates of those bodies in England, Wales and Scotland is principally a matter for the bodies themselves.

Consultation on the forms formally concluded on Thursday 5 May 1998. The Scottish Home Department informed the Home Office on that day that the Scottish Pistol Association wished to be included in future consultation exercises. This has been noted for future reference, but until then we had not received any suggestion that any specific Scottish group wished to be consulted independently of the Great Britain organisations.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on asylum seekers from the Democratic Republic of the Congo. [43105]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My right hon. Friend announced in his reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Nuneaton (Mr. Olner) on 16 May 1997, Official Report, column 3, that he had made a declaration under the Social Security (Persons from Abroad) Miscellaneous Amendments Regulations 1996, that the former Zaire had undergone such an upheaval that we would not seek to enforce the return of refused asylum seekers to that country for the time being.

The new government of what is now the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) have been in power for a year. The situation in the country has been carefully monitored and there have been consultations with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and with other European partners. Information has also been obtained from a range of sources, including the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. Although there is conflict in the east of the country, security conditions in Kinshasa and in western areas of the DRC have been relatively stable for some months.

The information received about conditions in the DRC enables me to make an informed assessment of the merits of asylum applications made prior to the upheaval and subsequently, in accordance with our international obligations. My Department will review all outstanding claims, including those which have previously been refused and are awaiting appeal hearings. Individuals whose claims have already been refused and determined by the independent Immigration Appellate Authority and who are either liable to removal or are awaiting further consideration will be able to submit fresh applications for consideration which, if refused, will attract a fresh right of appeal. If an applicant is able to demonstrate that his fear of persecution is well-founded then asylum will be granted. Also, consideration will be given where there are exceptional and compelling humanitarian reasons for not enforcing return. If asylum or exceptional treatment is not merited, the normal course will be to expect applicants to return to the DRC. We will continue to monitor developments in the region.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Arms Exports

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many (a) routine and (b) unannounced visits her Department's inspectors have made to British companies to verify the company's compliance with the requirements of Open Individual Export licences covering the export of military, security or police equipment since 1996; if she will provide details of action taken against companies or individuals found in contravention of the OIEL procedures; and if such information will form part of the Annual report to Parliament on arms exports. [40386]

Mrs. Roche: Officials of Export Control Organisation have made 561 routine visits to British companies holding Open Individual Export Licences covering the export of military, security, or police equipment between 1 January 1996 and 28 April 1998 to verify their compliance with licence conditions. They do not make unannounced visits.

A range of action has been taken against licence holders found to be failing to comply with such conditions, the strongest being revocation of the licence in full. Disclosure by the Government of the outcome of particular visits could reasonably be expected to harm the competitive position of the companies concerned. Therefore the information comes within the category of information 'third party's commercial confidences' which is exempt from the commitment to provide information in the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

As regards the Annual Report on Strategic Export Controls and their application specifically, I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office to the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock) on 8 April 1998, Official Report, column 321.

Customs and Excise, as the Export Licensing Enforcement Agency, has the power to make unannounced visits.

Biotechnology

Dr. Gibson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the European Patent Directive on Biotechnology. [41016]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 7 May 1998]: The European Parliament voted on 12 May to adopt this Directive. The text adopted by the Parliament is identical to that of the Common Position which was agreed, with the support of the United Kingdom, by the Council of Ministers in February of this year. Formal adoption by the Council will follow, and the Directive will be published in the Official Journal of the European Communities. Member States have two years from the date of this publication in which to implement the provisions of the Directive into national law.

It is nearly ten years since the European Commission first made its proposal for a Directive. Search for the correct balance between the needs of industry for patents to foster research, and genuine ethical concerns about commercial rights in the biotechnological field have occupied much of this time. Now consensus has emerged, the Directive will make a significant contribution in reducing uncertainties presently surrounding patenting in Europe.

The Directive will not require substantial change to current United Kingdom law (the Patents Act 1977). In particular it would not render anything patentable which is not currently patentable in the UK. However, the Common Position does clarify that patents cannot be obtained in certain sensitive subject areas, that is human cloning, modifying human germ lines, and commercial uses of human embryos, thus strengthening UK law in these key areas of ethical concern. Patents will also not be obtainable for genetic modifications of animals unless there is substantial medical benefit.

Objective 5b Funding

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received regarding the eligibility for Objective 5b funding of projects involving the private sector. [42323]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 18 May 1998]: Rules were published by the Department in May 1995 allowing private sector involvement in European Regional Development Fund (ERDF) infrastructure projects. These rules remain in place. We have not received any representations about them.

Officials within the Department and Government Offices regularly discuss the eligibility of individual private sector projects and their compliance with the relevant Objective 5b programme. Of particular importance in these discussions is the European Commission requirement that public sector contributions to programmes are not replaced by private sector funds. Failure to achieve the expected level of public sector contributions is likely to lead to reduced payments of Structural Funds grant by the Commission. Private sector projects will not therefore be able to be supported if they replace necessary public sector contributions.

Cabouchon Jewellery

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will institute inquiries under section 432 of the Companies Act 1985 into the price paid and arrangements made for the sale and distribution of the assets, including stock, of Cabouchon jewellery and the Cabouchon trade mark. [42565]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: My Officials have liaised with the administrative receivers and a petition has just been presented in the High Court for the compulsory winding up of the company. The petition will be heard on 3 June 1998 and if, as expected, the company is wound up, the Official Receiver will have a statutory duty under the Insolvency Act 1986 to investigate the causes of the company's failure. In such circumstances no purpose would be served in using Companies Act inquiries to duplicate the Official Receiver's investigation.

Energy Council

Mr. Sawford: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the outcome of the Energy Council meeting on 11 May. [43180]

Mr. Battle: The Council considered several issues and received reports on matters of interest. I chaired the meeting.

I am particularly pleased to report that the Council was able to adopt the gas directive following the European Parliament's second reading. I regard this as an important development towards the completion of the single market in energy. It will lead to a more competitive market and a better deal for consumers.

The Council held a positive and constructive open debate on energy and the environment. It focused on three questions: enhancing renewable energies by making them cost competitive; promoting energy efficiency and CHP; and promoting environmental objectives. Member states underlined the importance of linking an energy response to Kyoto and outlined their actions at national level. My right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment as President of the EU Environmental Council was able to attend for the open debate demonstrating a joint approach to environmental issues between Energy and Environment Ministers.

Following the open debate Council adopted a Presidency proposal for Council conclusions on the energy response to Kyoto which agreed the need for action both at national and EU level in the areas of renewable energies, combined heat and power and energy efficiency. The Council also adopted a Resolution in response to the Commission's White Paper on renewable energy sources which urges Member States to develop national strategies with a view to bringing about a substantial increase in the use of renewables throughout the EU. The Council agreed that the White Paper's indicative target of 12 per cent. for the European Union as a whole by 2010 provides useful guidance for these increased efforts. I regard such action as a win win win situation where new jobs in new energy services and new technologies will be created as a result of tackling environmental challenges.

The Council held an orientation debate on the energy framework programme to bring together all community energy specific programmes e.g. ALTENER, SAVE to support energy efficiency as well as a new programme to promote clean solid fuel technology. There was broad consensus on the approach and the text, and progress was made on technical aspects of the decision. The discussion on the budget was deferred until after the opinion of the European Parliament.

The Council received presentations from the Commission on the development of the single market in electricity and harmonisation requirements following the electricity directive. The Commission also gave a progress report on the Energy Charter Treaty and presentations on a proposal for a Council directive amending the Directive on minimum oil stocks, a review on Coal State Aids Decision Coal and information on the oil refining market. Political agreement was also reached on the ALTENER II decision following the European parliament's second reading.

DEFENCE

Overseas Training Exercises

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the most recent major unit overseas training exercise; and what was its cost (a) without and (b) including air movement costs. [41868]

Dr. Reid: The most recent major unit overseas training exercise was Medicine Man 1 which commenced on 14 April and will run until 25 May 1998. The exercise is being held at the British Army Training Unit in Suffield, Canada.

The cost of the exercise without air movement charges will be approximately £12.76 million. Air movement costs will be a further £1.02 million.

Public Bodies

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the average attendance fee of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department; [42830]

(2) what is the average salary of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department. [42829]

Mr. Spellar: The majority of board members of non-departmental public bodies give their time and services voluntarily and receive no payment other than normal travel and subsistence expenses. Where members do receive remuneration, this can vary between an annual salary or an attendance fee, and in some cases, board members choose not to claim the attendance fees to which they are entitled. Individuals' remuneration therefore is not directly comparable, but is regardless of gender where made. Full details of all payments to board members of non-departmental bodies, by gender, are given in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies". Copies of "Public Bodies 1997" are available in the Libraries of the House.

Public Appointments

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when his Department's action plan for increasing the number of women holding public appointments will be published; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [42831]

Mr. Spellar: My Department's action plan for increasing the number of women and ethnic minorities holding public appointments will be published shortly. A copy will be placed in the Library of the House.

Defence Bills Agency

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Defence Bills Agency for 1998–99. [43078]

Dr. Reid: Targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Defence Bills Agency for the financial year 1998–99 in accordance with the Agency's aim of meeting the requirements of its Service Level Agreement with the Ministry of Defence in a manner which offers best value for money.

The roles of the Defence Bills Agency as defined in its Framework document are: the authorisation and payment of bills from MOD's suppliers and contractors; the invoicing and collection of MOD receipts; the maintenance of accounting records for the MOD central ledger; and the provision of financial management information to budget holders.

The Chief Executive's key targets for 1998–99 build on the high standards of service already achieved by the Agency since its formation in January 1996 and are as follows:

1. To pay 97 per cent. of correctly-presented bills within 11 working days of receipt and 100 per cent. within 30 calendar days.
2. To raise 100 per cent. of invoices within 5 working days of receipt of correctly-presented instruction.
3. To meet the criteria contracted for in the Service Level Agreement covering debt recovery, management information systems, maintenance of contract records, reduction of overpayments and clearance of credit notes. To deliver these services within the agreed price of £15.587 million for the financial year 1998–99.
4. To achieve a further efficiency improvement over that specified in the Service Level Agreement for 1998–99 of 2½ per cent. in the bills process to staffing ratio. For 1997–98 the ratio was 6,395 bills processed for each member of staff. The target for 1998–99 is 6,555 bills processed for each member of staff.
5. To ensure that, by 1 January 1999, the Agency's internal financial systems are fully compliant with the Department's Resource Accounting and Budgeting system.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence at what time and on what date he first saw a copy of the letter addressed to the Foreign Secretary from S. J. Berwin & Co. on behalf of Sandline International dated 24 April. [42129]

Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he was first informed of the existence of the Customs and Excise investigation into the involvement of Sandline International in operations in Sierra Leone; [42317]

(2) when his Private Office was first informed of the existence of the Customs and Excise investigation into the involvement of Sandline International in operations in Sierra Leone. [42319]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 18 May 1998]: The first my Private Office knew of the existence of the Customs and Excise investigation into the involvement of Sandline International in operations in Sierra Leone was the afternoon of Friday 24 April 1998, when they received a faxed copy of the letter from S. J. Berwin & Company to my right hon. Friend the Foreign and Commonwealth Secretary. This letter was passed for action that day to the Private Office of the relevant Minister, my hon. Friend the Minister for the Armed Forces. His Private Office placed the letter in his weekend box, and he saw it the following day (Saturday 25 April). The letter was placed in my overnight box on Wednesday 29 April and, to my recollection, I first saw it in the early hours of the morning of Thursday 30 April.

Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when his Private Office was first informed of the involvement of Sandline International in operations in Sierra Leone; [42322]

(2) when he was first informed of the involvement of Sandline International in Sierra Leone. [42321]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 18 May 1998]: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Mid-Sussex (Mr. Soames), on 18 May 1998, Official Report, column 258.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence between what dates HMS 'Monmouth' was deployed off the coast of Sierra Leone. [42557]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 18 May 1998]: HMS Monmouth was stationed in the vicinity of Sierra Leone from 0600Z on 14 February to 1200Z on 23 February 1998. The ship berthed alongside Conakry, Guinea from 1900Z on 17 February to 1600Z on 20 February.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what standing orders were issued by his Department concerning assistance by British forces in Sierra Leone. [42154]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 18 May 1998]: The instructions to HMS Monmouth (and later HMS Cornwall) were to deploy to the vicinity of Sierra Leone to be prepared to provide immediate humanitarian assistance to the people of Sierra Leone, to support our diplomatic efforts there, and to assist in the return of the British High Commissioner, should the democratically elected Government be restored.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the dates in 1998 when HMS 'Cornwall' was within 50 miles of the coast of Sierra Leone. [42279]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 18 May 1998]: HMS Cornwall was within 50 nautical miles of Sierra Leone on the following dates:

a. 23 February;

b. 25–27 February;

c. 28 February-20 March;

d. 23–27 April.

Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he was first informed of the plan for military intervention to restore the Government of President Kabbah of Sierra Leone; [42318]

(2) when his Private Office was first informed of the plan for military intervention to restore the Government of President Kabbah of Sierra Leone. [42320]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 18 May 1998]: We were not informed by ECOMOG of its plans for military intervention to restore the government of President Kabbah of Sierra Leone. Nevertheless, potential operations and activities of forces in Sierra Leone, including ECOMOG, were referred to in a number of reports circulated within the Department, including to Ministers' Offices, dating back to May 1997.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Welfare Reform

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list those organisations which submitted responses to the Government's New Ambitions for our Country: A New Contract for Welfare Green Paper; and if she will place copies of their submissions in the Library. [42272]

Mr. Field: Responses to the consultation exercise should reach this Department by 31 July. When analysis has been completed, a list of those respondents who are willing to have their names made public will be placed in the Library and we will also give details of how we intend to publish responses.

Disability Benefits

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list (a) the number of applications each month for each of the components of disability allowance and (b) the number or percentage (i) accepted under each heading, (ii) of those individuals requesting a review, (iii) of those individuals whose application was accepted at review, (iv) of those individuals requesting an appeal to the ITS and (v) of those individuals whose request for either a review or appeal was turned down in the last year for which figures are available. [42128]

Mr. Denham: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the tables.

Public Bodies

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the average attendance fee of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to her Department; [42812]

(2) what is the average salary of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to her Department. [42811]

Mr. Field: The majority of board members of non-departmental public bodies give their time and services voluntarily and receive no payment other than normal travel and subsistence expenses. Where members do receive remuneration, this can vary between an annual salary, an honorarium or an attendance fee (which itself can be a daily rate or a half-daily rate, or calculated on a per meeting or per case basis). Individuals' remuneration therefore is not directly comparable. Full details of all payments to board members of non-departmental bodies, by gender, are given in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies". Copies of "Public Bodies 1997" are available in the Libraries of the House.

Pensions Review

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if the review of pensions will assess the advantages and disadvantages of freezing pensions for expatriates; and if she will make a statement; [41482]

(2) if she will consult the World Alliance of British Expatriate Pensioners before the pensions review is concluded. [41483]

Mr. Denham: The Pensions Review is examining all aspects of the basic State pension and its value, and second pensions including State Earnings-Related Pensions Scheme (SERPS)

Of the 2,000 responses received, 343 are from pensioners and organisations representing pensioners living abroad.

The Government will publish a Green Paper on Pensions later this year. There will be a period of further consultation before final proposals are developed.

Illness and Mortality Rates

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what research her Department has commissioned into the correlation between social class and (a) illness and (b) mortality rates; and if she will make a statement. [29368]

Ms Jowell: I recently announced a £1.7 million programme of research projects on health inequalities. In addition the Independent Inquiry into Inequalities in Health is reviewing existing research on these issues. Further research will be commissioned in the light of the Inquiry's report.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Departmental Buildings

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate he has made of the value of the freehold property of the National Sound Archive building at 29 Exhibition Road; and when the freehold will be disposed of. [40127]

Mr. Fisher: The property at 29 Exhibition Road, currently occupied by the British Library's National Sound Archive (NSA), is held in Trust by the National Sound Archive. It is intended that the property will be sold when the NSA vacates the building later this year. The value of the premises will depend on the property market at the time. The terms of the Trust require that the proceeds from sale of the property should be used to further the NSA's designated activities.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has for the future use of the unoccupied Public Record Office in Chancery Lane; and what estimate he has made of the freehold value of (a) that site and (b) the tenant-free accommodation of the Science Reference Library and Patent Office, at 25 Southampton Buildings and Furnival Street, London WC2. [40145]

Mr. Fisher: The property formerly occupied by the Public Record Office in Chancery Lane is vested in the Crown Estate Commissioners. The property is currently for sale but there is at the moment no indication of its value since this is expected to vary according to its eventual use. The Commissioners intend that the building should be used in keeping with its Grade II listed status.

The freehold of Southampton Buildings, currently occupied by the British Library's Science Reference and Information Service, will be sold on the Library's vacation of the property in the summer of 1999. Proposed options for the sale are currently the subject of discussion between the Department and the Library: the value of the building will depend on the method of sale and the prevailing market conditions.

Consultation Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list the consultation papers published since 1 May 1997 giving the date of publication, closing date for submissions and the number of respondents. [42256]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The details requested are as follows:

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Sierra Leone

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Attorney-General on what date (a) he and (b) officials in his private office were told that allegations of a breach of the UN arms embargo on Sierra Leone had been referred to HM Customs and Excise. [41882]

The Attorney-General [holding answer 14 May 1998]: On 17 June 1996 my predecessor announced the establishment, in accordance with a recommendation by Sir Richard Scott, of new arrangements for supervision by the Attorney-General to cover prosecutions by HM Customs and Excise involving defence related exports and all sanctions enforcement cases. That superintendence does not extend to investigations.

On 3 April 1998 in accordance with those arrangements, my office received advance notification of a suspected breach by Sandline International of the UN arms embargo against Sierra Leone. In my absence from the office on leave over Easter, the papers were submitted (in the usual way) to the Solicitor-General for noting. I noted the position on my return from leave.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Attorney-General whether advice was sought from himself or his officials before the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 10 March formally advised Her Majesty's Customs and Excise of the allegations regarding Sandline. [42074]

The Attorney-General [holding answer 14 May 1998]: As a matter of convention, neither the substance of the Law Officers' advice, nor the fact that they have been consulted, is disclosed outside Government other than in exceptional circumstances. I see no reason to depart from this convention in this case.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list all (a) oral and (b) written communications to and from his Department and (i) the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, (ii) the Ministry of Defence, (iii) the Department of Trade and Industry, (iv) Her Majesty's Treasury and (v) Her Majesty's Customs and Excise with regard to Sierra Leone and the export and import of arms since 1 January. [42072]

The Attorney-General [holding answer 19 May 1998]: HM Customs and Excise have concluded their investigation of allegations, passed to them by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, of a breach of the arms embargo on Sierra Leone and announced their decision that no criminal proceedings will be instituted against any person. The Foreign Secretary has appointed Sir Thomas Legg and Sir Robin Ibbs to conduct a full investigation into events surrounding this case. The report of that investigation will be published.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

India

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what aid programmes her Department is currently supporting in India; at what cost; and what was the comparable figure for 1997–98. [42231]

Clare Short: Britain provides substantial bilateral development assistance to India at a cost of around £80-£90 million a year. Our programme is increasingly focused on the elimination of poverty and consists mainly of support in the areas of rural development, water and sanitation, urban poverty, education, health and energy as well as assistance through non-Governmental Organisations. We also help indirectly through contributions to the European Commission and other multilateral institutions.

The provisional bilateral outturn for 1997–98 is around £75 million—lower than average due mainly to slippage on two large energy projects. This year, we expect spending to revert to the level of previous years.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with her Indian counterparts on the impact on the Warli culture of a deepwater port at Vadhavan in Dahanu Taluka. [42562]

Clare Short: I have not discussed this matter with my Indian counterparts.

Ministerial Briefing

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what instructions she gave, on assuming office, on the information which she wished to be drawn to her attention, in red boxes or otherwise; and what modifications she has made to these instructions. [42301]

Clare Short: I made it clear that I should be given all information necessary to allow me to direct the Department's work effectively and carry out my Parliamentary and Cabinet duties. This included policy recommendations, information on the conduct of the Department's business, Parliamentary questions and correspondence, and relevant public and Government correspondence. I frequently request further information in the course of departmental meetings or consideration of papers. I have had no reason to change these instructions.

Antigua

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the assistance her Department is currently providing to Antigua. [42142]

Clare Short: In recognition of the access to public services provided to Montserratians who have relocated to Antigua, we have given debt relief of £1.25 million and agreed a £3 million grant. The grant will be used for school and health projects. Over the last five years we have spent over £4 million in Antigua and Barbuda.

St. Kitts and Nevis

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the assistance her Department is currently providing to St. Kitts and Nevis. [42143]

Clare Short: We are in the third and final year of a £1.5 million Police Development Project for St. Kitts and Nevis. This project has provided technical assistance, equipment, training and the complete refurbishment of the Police Station in Nevis. Over the last five years we have spent £5.8 million in St. Kitts and Nevis.

Montserrat Building Society

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what discussions her Department has had with (a) private sector financial organisations and (b) other institutions about possible assistance to the Montserrat Building Society; [42145]

(2) what discussions her Department has held with insurance companies about the Montserrat Building Society; and if she will make a statement. [42144]

Clare Short: None. HMG's policy towards the Montserrat Building Society is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary.

Disabled Children (Africa)

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance her Department is providing towards community support for disabled children in (a) Uganda, (b) Kenya, (c) Malawi, (d) Sierra Leone and (e) Rwanda; and at what cost in each case. [42228]

Clare Short: We are not currently funding any activities for disabled children either in Sierra Leone or in Rwanda. Details of our support in Uganda, Kenya and Malawi is as follows:

(a) Uganda

British-Uganda Partnership Scheme 1997–1998

Baliita Centre for the Blind, Luwero: construction materials for a resource centre and workshop for the blind, £4,420. This is in addition to previous support for construction materials for a 4 room dormitory building, latrines, ablutions block and kitchen area for the Centre, £5,800.

Ruharo Eye Centre, Mbarara: teaching materials and assessments for the blind, £2,200.

Buginyanya Disabled Association, Kapchorwa: a maize mill, carpentry tools and sewing machines for an income-generation scheme for the disabled, £4,700.

Heads of Mission Gift Scheme 1997–1998

Mulago Hospital, Occupational Therapy Unit, Kampala: training videos for occupational therapists, £1,700.

Uganda Association for the Mentally Handicapped, Kampala: hortcultural tools for their agricultural programme for the mentally handicapped, £230.

Uganda National Association for the Blind, Kampala: batteries for tape recorders to assist with educational programmes for the blind, £110.

Butambala School for the Deaf, Mpigi: construction materials for a maize mill, £1,760.

DFID Small Grants Scheme 1998–1999

District Disabled Persons of Lira: construction of a workshop for the repair of appliances and provision of welding and hand tools, £5,500.

The above projects aim to give support to the disabled, in general, and not specifically disabled children. However, the children will no doubt benefit either directly or indirectly from this support.

Contributions through the Joint Funding Scheme

Uganda Society for Disabled Children (USDC): Community Orientated Rehabilitation Activities, Uganda.

USDC run a disability programme which aims to improve the decentralised support systems and service provision for disabled children in West Nile—Province of Uganda.

Start Date: 1 April 1994

End Date: 31 March 1999

Offered: £476,818.

Action Health: Occupational Health Training Programme, Uganda

Action Health are supporting a training programme for Occupational Therapists (OTs) at Mulago Hospital. Aim is to train OTs to serve health needs in Uganda and particularly to work with handicapped/disabled families to help them lead a more productive life in their communities.

Start Date: 1 April 1997

End Date: 31 March 2000

Offered: £43,410

Action on Disability and Development (ADD): Deaf Community Development, Uganda

Project addresses the needs of deaf people who are socially and economically marginalised due to their limited oral communication and low level of education. Project targets children and women who are particularly isolated within communities.

Start Date: 1 April 1996

End Date: 31 March 1998

Offered: £227,456

Bilateral Programme

We have also supported the work of the Uganda Society for Disabled Children; this community based rehabilitation project, which started in October 1994 and ended on 31 March 1998, has helped disabled children to lead more independent and productive lives in Luwero and Arua districts, £320,700.

(b) Kenya

DFID Small Grants Scheme 1998–1999

Kaptwai Primary School for Physically Disabled Children: construction of and equipment for two workshops, £11,000.

Karen Technical Training Institute for the Deaf: rehabilitation of a borehole, £1,550.

(c) Malawi

British-Malawi Partnership Scheme 1997–1998.

Sue Ryder Foundation: traction bars, £6,080.

DFID Small Grants Scheme 1998–1999.

Sue Ryder Foundation: project vehicle costs, £1,250.

Child Soldiers

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development in which countries her Department has supported rehabilitation projects for former child soldiers in the past year; and what are her plans for the future. [42230]

Clare Short: Since 1997, we have supported projects in Angola, Liberia, Uganda and Rwanda, which, as part of wider support for war affected populations, have rehabilitated child soldiers. We contributed £400,000 to the International Organisation for Migration to assist the return and resettlement of war disabled in Angola which included child demobilised soldiers. In northern Uganda, we jointly funded with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office a local NGO skills training programme to rehabilitate demobilised child soldiers. Through the UK's share of aid to the European Commission, we supported the Government of Rwanda's Demobilisation and Reintegration Programme which demobilised and provided sustained support for 2,500 child soldiers. In March 1998, a further £1 million was provided to the UN Development Programme as additional support to the second phase of the Government of Rwanda's programme. In addition, we have contributed £37.8 million in financial year 1997–98 (preliminary estimate) to support UN agencies and NGOs who are working to protect and assist vulnerable children in conflict situations.

We will explore what further assistance we can provide to help former child soldiers at a ministerial meeting, in London on 23 June, which my Department will host to give exposure to the work programme and priorities of the UN Secretary-General's Special Representative on Children and Armed Conflict to our European partners.

Bangladesh

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what aid programmes her Department is currently supporting in Bangladesh and at what cost; and what was the comparable figure for 1997–98. [42233]

Clare Short: The Department for International Development has a substantial programme in Bangladesh, offering support for the Government of Bangladesh's policy of promoting growth alongside poverty reduction. The key themes of our aid strategy are poverty reduction and support for good government and institutional development. The programme works with both Government and non-governmental organisation (NGO) partners to address these goals, and also helps indirectly through contributions to the programmes of the European Commission and other multilateral institutions.

Spending statistics for the 1997–98 year are not yet finalised, but are expected to be somewhat lower than the £44.39 million spent in 1996–97 due to delay in implementing new projects. From 1998–99, we hope to see an increase in the spending levels of recent years. More than half of the current programme is spent on direct poverty assistance, with projects in health and education, micro-credit, employment generation, and food production. Other projects target institutional strengthening, infrastructure development, and public sector reform. Examples of significant current projects include:

Agricultural Services Support Project: £5.5m for strengthening Government agricultural extension work.

INTERFISH, a £5.6m project with the NGO CARE, promoting fish production in rice fields.

An £11.6m contribution to micro-credit and social development programmes of the national NGO, Proshika; and a £9.2m contribution to similar programmes of BRAC.

£8m support for non-formal primary education programme again with BRAC, working with poor children, particularly girls.

£20.6m support for the Government of Bangladesh Fourth Population and Health Project.

Bridge improvement project £15.6m.

Reforms in Budget and Expenditure Control, £9.8m helping the development of improved Government of Bangladesh systems for financial management.

Key elements of current work on new projects include strengthening Government of Bangladesh primary education services, and supporting a new National Health and Population Strategy.

Millennium Dome

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with the (a) Minister without Portfolio and (b) Chancellor of the Exchequer about a Third World debt reduction project at the Millennium Dome; and if she will make a statement. [42716]

Clare Short: My Department and the Treasury have consulted carefully with each other about the so-called "Bondfire Project". Earlier this month I wrote to the Minister without Portfolio, stressing the need to ensure if the project went ahead that bond purchasers' money went to help poor countries, not their creditors. I understand the proposal is now being revised.

Westminster Foundation for Democracy

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what funding her Department provided to the Westminster Foundation for Democracy in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; and what sums she plans to provide in 1998–99. [42444]

Clare Short: The Department for International Development (DFID) did not provide any funding to the Westminster Foundation for Democracy in 1996–97 or 1997–98.

I have no plans to provide funding in 1998–99, but we will seek closer coherence between the activities of the Foundation and the related activities of DFID.

Human Rights

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations she has received regarding Her Majesty's Government's first annual human rights reports from (a) foreign Governments, (b) international aid agencies and (c) British charities and non-Governmental organisations. [42347]

Clare Short: I have not yet received any formal representations on the Annual Human Rights Report. We are, of course, engaged in discussion about the issues in the Report.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much her Department spent in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98 in the areas of (i) human rights and (ii) democracy and good governance; in which countries; and what provision she has made for similar expenditure in 1998–99. [42467]

Clare Short: Commitments on human rights were not recorded as such until 1 April 1998. However, civil and political rights are related to our commitments on democracy and good governance which amounted to £72.9 million in 1996–97 and £78.5 million in 1997–98. Commitments were made in these years to the following countries:

1996–97

Albania
Anguilla
Bosnia
Botswana
Bulgaria
China
Dominica
Ethiopia
Gambia Ghana
Guyana
Hungary
India
Jamaica
Jordan
Kenya
Lesotho
Malawi

Tanzania
Turks and Caicos Islands
Uganda
Ukraine
Vietnam
West Bank and Gaza
Yugoslavia
Zambia
Zimbabwe.

In addition, many other commitments made by the Department for International Development are related to economic, social and cultural rights, for example those in education, health, water and sustainable livelihoods, and are designed to enhance the capacity of states and civil society to achieve these rights.

We have no plans to limit the financial amounts which may be committed to human rights, democracy and good governance by making a specific provision for expenditure in 1998–99.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance her Department is giving to human rights projects, and at what cost, in (a) Malawi, (b) Zambia, (c) Sierra Leone and (d) Nigeria. [42468]

Clare Short: Expenditure on our human rights work was not recorded as such until 1 April 1998. However, much of our work contributes to the civil and political, economic, social and cultural rights of poor and disadvantaged peoples, such as our work on good governance, support for education, health, water and rural livelihoods.

In Malawi and Zambia we support access to basic health and education for poor and disadvantaged groups (nearly £70 million in Malawi, over £60 million in Zambia). We support anti-corruption institutions in both countries, other human rights bodies (e.g. the Malawi criminal legal system, the Zambia Human Rights Commission), and provide human rights training for the Malawi police. We also support the development of civil society organisations, including civic education on women's rights and training for journalists in Zambia. These total some £3 million in Malawi and £1 million in Zambia. We plan to help both countries further to implement the international Conventions they have signed.

In Nigeria we have committed £15 million to basic health projects and £2.2 million to education programmes. We have also committed £300,000 to help a range of local non-governmental organisations through workshops and in-country training to strengthen accountability and transparency (e.g. workshops for local journalists, improving access to justice), human rights (e.g. gender training), democracy, and training in conflict management. In Sierra Leone, we have contributed £2 million to the International Committee of the Red Cross, part of which supports human rights monitoring.

Botswana

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance her Department is giving towards promoting the human rights of remote area dwellers in Botswana; and at what cost. [42466]

Clare Short: We have offered support for a consultative process to ensure that the needs of Remote Area Dwellers, many of whom are Basarwa (or San) people, are effectively addressed in implementation of the Botswana Government's new National Development Plan. We are also considering support to the Ngamiland West Participatory Development Initiative, to help local communities make effective use of natural resources, at a cost of up to £1,100,000.

Information

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if her Department operates a monitoring exercise of persistent inquirers for information. [42640]

Clare Short: The Department for International Development has few persistent inquirers and has not put in place any formal monitoring exercise.

WALES

Hill Farmers

4. Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the current situation of hill farmers. [41416]

Mr. Ron Davies: Farm incomes fell sharply in 1997. The Government therefore provided £85 million in agrimoney compensation for cattle and sheep producers, and this provides substantial help for hill farmers.

In addition, the Government have provided £35 million to pay for the start up costs and first year running costs for the Cattle Tracing System and a further £35 million to relieve the industry of extra charges related to the new Specified Risk Material (SRM) regulations. These measures represent considerable assistance to the industry. The Government will continue to keep the case for further agrimoney compensation under review.

EU Structural Funds

12. Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress he has made in gaining financial assistance from the European Union for areas of severe economic deprivation in Wales. [41424]

Mr. Hain: The UK Government in conjunction with all other Member States are currently negotiating draft Structural Funds Regulations for the period 2000–2006 with the European Commission. The Welsh Office is fully involved with these negotiations. An integral part of these Regulations are the criteria which will determine future eligibility.

18. Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with other Government departments on the review of European structural funds in Wales. [41431]

Mr. Hain: We are in regular discussions with a number of Government Departments, on all aspects of Structural Funds policy.

Local Authority Expenditure

13. Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was public expenditure, including lottery grants, in each of the last five years for (a) Cardiff Bay, (b) Cardiff and (c) all other county borough councils or their predecessors; and what are the figures for each of those areas for (i) 1998–99 and (ii) 1999–2000. [41425]

Mr. Ron Davies: Information on total public expenditure by Local Authority area is not available. Information on total local authority expenditure, lottery funding and grant in aid to the Cardiff Bay Development Corporation for the past five years, is as follows.

Class Sizes

14. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning class sizes in primary schools in Wales. [41426]

Mr. Hain: We have received letters from hon. Members, school governors, headteachers, class teachers, parents and the Welsh Local Government Association—all of them supportive of the policy to reduce infant classes to a maximum of 30 pupils.

Farming

15. Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning farming in Wales since 1 March. [41428]

Mr. Win Griffiths: My right hon. Friend and I have received considerable numbers of representations, both written and oral, in respect of the condition of Welsh agriculture since the start of the crisis and continue to do so.

National Assembly

16. Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the work of the national assembly advisory group. [41429]

Mr. Ron Davies: The Group is making excellent progress in meeting the remit I have given to it; it published a detailed consultation document on 17 April and is currently seeking views on its proposals. I look forward to receiving its report in the summer.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultation he is undertaking concerning the brief for architects for the competition to design the National Assembly building in Cardiff; what studies his Department is undertaking of new parliamentary buildings in other countries; and at what stage he will specify the financial parameters for the construction of the building. [42474]

Mr. Ron Davies: The Design Competition Assessment Panel will see the design brief before it issues.

Information on the broad principles for the Assembly Chamber has already been provided and was informed by reference to Parliament buildings in other countries.

The design brief which will be issued to the short listed Architects will indicate the financial parameters within which to cost the design.

Freight Transport

17. Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his freight transport strategy for Wales. [41430]

Mr. Ron Davies: The Government will publish shortly a UK Transport White Paper setting out our integrated transport policies, including measures to encourage and develop freight transport. At around the same time, I will publish a complementary Transport Policy Statement for Wales which will reflect the particular circumstances and transport needs in Wales.

We have already taken a significant step forward with the announcement on Monday of a new Eurofreight terminal in South Wales.

Rural Schools

19. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning the closure of rural schools in Wales. [41432]

Mr. Hain: Since February 1998 I have answered 4 Parliamentary Questions and received correspondence from hon. Members, Directors of Education, parents and others.

Renewable Energy Sector

20. Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to encourage the growth of the renewable energy sector in Wales. [41433]

Mr. Hain: The Government's policy review of new and renewable energy is currently under way. It is considering various options for delivering 10 per cent. of electricity demand from renewable sources by 2010. The outcome will be announced later this year.

I certainly hope that Wales will be able to benefit further from opportunities presented by this review.

Local Government Finance

21. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the implications of the changes to advance corporation tax in the current budget on the financing of local authorities in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [41434]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to him on 7 May 1998, Official Report, column 479.

Ambulance Service

22. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning the restructuring of the ambulance service in Wales. [41435]

Mr. Win Griffiths: A single ambulance trust for Wales was established on 1 April 1998. A summary of the representations that my right hon. Friend and I received during the public consultation period has been placed in the Library of the House. I also met a number of local representative groups including hon. Members, Trade Unions, Community Health Councils and Ambulance Services.

Great Western Trains

23. Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from (a) Welsh businesses and (b) others on the impact of the recent punctuality record of Great Western trains between London and South Wales; and if he will make a statement. [41436]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friend and I have received a total of four representations, including one from a business in Wales. Over recent months we have become increasingly concerned about the marked deterioration in the standard of Great Western services between London and South Wales. On 29 April I met senior representatives of both Great Western Trains and Railtrack to make clear my concern, particularly in view of the likely impact of late and unreliable trains on Wales and the Welsh economy. Both companies have undertaken to provide me with details of the steps which they will be taking to restore performance to an acceptable standard.

Agri-environmental Scheme

24. Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the all-Wales agri-environmental scheme. [41437]

Mr. Win Griffiths: My right hon. Friend and I have received proposals for detailed management prescriptions for the new scheme which we are presently considering.

Public Health

25. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he has taken to improve public health in Wales. [41438]

Mr. Win Griffiths: In order to continue in our efforts to improve public health in Wales, last Thursday I launched the public health green paper "Better Health—Better Wales" which sets out the basis of our new approach and seeks views on how this can be taken forward.

Drug Misuse

26. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps his Department has taken to extend information on the dangers of drug misuse to primary schools. [41439]

Mr. Hain: The Welsh Office has issued circular guidance to schools "Drug Misuse: Prevention and Schools" (WO Circular 54/95). In partnership with health and social services, police and the community, schools have a responsibility to respond to drug misuse through appropriate education, including the teaching of certain aspects as part of the National Curriculum, and through appropriate management of incidents on school premises. The circular advocates that each school should have a drug prevention policy.

A Strategic Prevention Action Plan on Drugs and Alcohol in Wales was developed by the Welsh Drug and Alcohol Unit (WDAU) and launched in November 1997 by my hon. Friend as part of "Forward Together"—the Government's national strategy to combat drug and alcohol misuse in Wales. This includes the recommendation that substance misuse prevention activities should be targeted at children of primary age.

As part of its prevention campaign the WDAU has developed "Lets Talk" for children of primary school age. The "Lets Talk" resource, which is unique to Wales, consists of six comic strip postcards which depict situations where young people are likely to be introduced or exposed to drugs, solvents and alcohol. The postcards serve as a lively trigger to participative learning about substance misuse and related issues. A copy of this resource is currently being distributed to every school in Wales.

New Deal (Participating Companies)

27. Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the number of companies participating in the new deal. [41440]

Mr. Hain: I am very encouraged by the enthusiastic response from employers.

In the South-West Wales Pathfinder area, where the programme has been in place since January, nearly 400 employers have pledged some 1,600 jobs. In the rest of Wales, we have received pledges from a further 400 employers, bringing the total number of opportunities to more than 2,000.

We will continue to ensure that the widest range of top quality placements are made available under the New Deal.

Transport Costs (Rural Areas)

28. Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning the costs of running a car and access to public transport in rural Wales. [41441]

Mr. Hain: The Welsh Office received a large number of responses from individuals, local authorities and interested organisations on a wide range of transport issues affecting rural Wales as part of the consultation exercise last year on the development of an integrated transport policy. These responses have been taken into account in the preparation of a UK wide White Paper on integrated transport, which will be published shortly. At around the same time, a Welsh Transport Policy Statement will be published drawing out those issues of particular relevance and importance to Wales.

Child Care

29. Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he plans to produce his child care strategy for Wales. [41442]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Member for Newport, East (Mr. Howarth), on 12 May 1998, Official Report, column 85. We will publish our proposals for the implementation of the child care strategy in Wales shortly.

Rough Sleepers Initiative

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received urging that funds be made available for a Rough Sleepers Initiative programme in Wales. [42225]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I have received representations from three sources. These were from my hon. Friends the Members for Preseli Pembrokeshire (Ms Lawrence) and for Gower (Mr. Caton), and from Shelter Cymru. They have all made representations that we should introduce a Rough Sleepers Initiative in Wales similar to that in England.

Our initial analysis of local authorities' Housing Strategies and Operational Plans shows that few have surveyed the level of rough sleeping or made any estimate of numbers. Nor has a case been made for substantial investment of capital. However, I believe that it is important that all local authorities have the strategies and structures to respond to the needs of rough sleepers in their area, and my officials will be discussing this with authorities over the coming months.

We have said that we would welcome hard information about the level of rough sleepers from organisations other than local authorities, including Shelter Cymru, but we have received nothing substantial.

Consultation Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the consultation papers published since 1 May 1997 giving the date of publication, closing date for submissions and the number of respondents. [42257]

Mr. Ron Davies: A list of the consultation papers issued from my Department since 1 May 1997 has been placed in the Library of the House.

Environmental Education

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the role of environmental education in Wales. [42308]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Environmental education has an important part to play in delivering our sustainable development policy. I am pleased to say that the Environmental Education Council for Wales, set up to develop and co-ordinate efforts to further environmental education, is developing an environmental education strategy for Wales and will launch the first phase of its environment Network centres this summer.

Euro (Teaching and Information Materials)

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to monitor the content of teaching and information materials about the Euro currency funded by the European Commission supplied to schools in Wales and to ensure its compliance with the terms of the Education Act 1996. [42680]

Mr. Hain: It is important that there is a full understanding of the euro currency but under section 407 of the Education Act 1996 schools must offer a balanced presentation of political issues.

Factory (Buckley)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress has been made in finding a tenant for the factory at Drury, Buckley in Flintshire which was previously occupied by the Optec D.D. [42453]

Mr. Hain: As I indicated in my reply to my hon. Friend on 25 March 1998, Official Report, column 172, the Welsh Development Agency is actively marketing the company's premises at Buckley and will continue to do so until a tenant has been found.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many modern apprenticeships will be available in each training and enterprise council area for 1998–99; [42682]

(2) what will be the budget for each training and enterprise council in Wales for 1998–99; and if he will indicate the change in the Budget in money and percentage terms compared with those of 1997–98. [42683]

Mr. Hain: I will write to my hon. Friend with this information when contracts with TECs for 1998–99 have been finalised, and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Agricultural Grants and Payments

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the terms of reference for the consultants he has engaged to make recommendations on a new system of administering agricultural grants and payments in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [42434]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The terms of reference of the study, as set out in my right hon. Friend's letter of 15 March to all Welsh MPs, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House are

"to assess the cost-effectiveness of options for Common Agricultural Policy administration in Wales which deliver a bi-lingual service to farmers that meets the Department's objectives and the standards set out in the Charter Standard for Farmers in Wales, and complies with the requirements of EC regulations."

Public Appointments

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when his Department's action plan for increasing the number of women holding public appointments will be published; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [42875]

Mr. Ron Davies: My Department's action plan to increase the number of women holding public appointments in Wales will be published shortly. Copies will be placed in the Library of the House.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Antibiotics

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he proposes to reduce the use of antibiotics in farming. [41615]

Mr. Rooker: We take this matter very seriously and are considering very carefully the recent reports of the Select Committee on Agriculture and the House of Lords Select Committee on Science and Technology.

As with all such matters, our policy will be based on the best available scientific advice. The independent scientific Veterinary Products Committee will be considering the use of antibiotics in animal production at its meeting on 18 June, and the Advisory Committee on the Microbiological Safety of Food is expected to report later in the year.

I invited the noble Lord who chairs the House of Lords Select Committee, Lord Soulsby of Swaffham Prior, to meet me and officials for a preliminary discussion a few days after the report was published. We had a useful discussion.

Research Stations

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many staff were made redundant from agricultural research stations in England and Wales in each year between 1980 and 1997; [42295]

(2) if he will list the agricultural research stations that were privatised in England and Wales in each year between 1980 and 1997; [42296]

(3) if he will list the agricultural research stations in England and Wales that were closed in each year between 1980 and 1997; what was the total number of closures and the location of each closed centre. [42294]

Mr. Rooker: ADAS, the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service and formerly a "Next Steps" Agency of MAFF, was privatised on 1 April 1997. It now operates as ADAS Consulting Ltd. There have been no other privatisations of Ministry-owned agricultural research stations in the period specified. As part of the privatisation, laboratories and offices at Wolverhampton were sold to the new company. It also currently leases a number of research stations from MAFF, as set out in the table.

Research stations
Arthur Rickwood	Cambridgeshire
Boxworth	Cambridgeshire
Bridgets	Hampshire
Brimstone Farm	Oxfordshire
Drayton (part only)	Warwickshire
Gleadethorpe	Nottinghamshire
High Mowthorpe	Yorkshire
Pwllpeiran	Dyfed
Redesdale	Northumberland
Rosemaund	Hereford
Terrington	Norfolk

The following Ministry-owned agricultural research stations were closed in the years noted:

Research stations	Closed
Great House Experimental Husbandry Farm, Rossendale, Lancs	1981
Rosewarne Experimental Horticulture Station, Camborne, Cornwall	1989
Lea Valley Experimental Horticulture Station, Hoddesdon, Herts	1989
Luddington Experimental Horticulture Station, Nr Stratford on Avon	1989
Liscombe Experimental Husbandry Farm, Nr Dulverton, Devon	1989
Brogdale Experimental Horticulture Station, Nr Faversham, Kent	1990
The Cattle Breeding Centre, Shinfield, Nr Reading, Berkshire	1991
Trawgoed Experimental Husbandry Farm, Nr Aberystwyth, Dyfed	1993

Note:
The Trawsgoed Experimental Husbandry Farm was sold to the then Agriculture and Food Research Council and is now part of the Institute of Grassland and Environmental Research.

A number of laboratories, listed in the table, were closed during the period specified. In most cases the work was transferred to other facilities, with some minor research or analytical work continuing to a later date.

Research stations	Closed
Shardlow, Nottingham	1980
Bangor, North Wales	1985
Cardiff, Glamorgan	1985
Bristol	1988
Leeds	1993
Wye, Kent	1993
Starcross, Nr Exeter	1993
Reading	1995
Newcastle	1995
Cambridge	1995
Trawsgoed, Nr Aberystwyth	1995

I regret that records of the number of any individuals made redundant as a result of particular closures of former ADAS sites are no longer held by MAFF.

Veterinary Inspection Centres

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list the veterinary inspection centres in England and Wales that were closed in each year between 1980 and 1997, the overall aggregate number and the location of each centre closed; [42305]

(2) how many staff were made redundant from veterinary inspection centres in England and Wales in each year between 1980 and 1997. [42306]

Mr. Rooker: The information requested is a matter for the Veterinary Laboratories Agency. I have asked its Chief Executive to reply to the hon. Member direct.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Mr. Richard Livsey, dated 20 May 1998:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your request for a list of Veterinary Investigation Centres (VICs) that were closed in each year between 1980 and 1997.

The attached table lists the VICs that were closed between these dates as well as new ones opened.

Centres were closed and new ones opened as follows:

Year	Closed	Opened	Total
1980			24
Aberystwyth

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Mr. Richard Livsey, dated 20 May 1998:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your request for information on how many staff were made redundant from Veterinary Investigation Centres (VICs) in each year between 1980 and 1997.

The VICs merged with the Central Veterinary Laboratory (CVL) in October 1995 to form the Veterinary Laboratories Agency (VLA). Staff made redundant in VICs since the merger are as follows:

1996–97: 5 redundancies

1997–98: 0 redundancies.

Sheep Dip

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many people have been recorded as having died as a result of exposure to sheep dip in each of the last 10 years. [42239]

Mr. Rooker: Under the suspected adverse reaction surveillance scheme, officials at the Veterinary Medicines Directorate are aware of a total of four deaths in connection with organophosphate sheep dips since the records were computerised in 1984.

Public Bodies

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what is the average attendance fee of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department; [42833]

(2) what is the average salary of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department. [42832]

Mr. Morley: The majority of board members of non-departmental public bodies give their time and services voluntarily and receive no payment other than normal travel and subsistence expenses. Where members do receive remuneration, this can vary between an annual salary, an honorarium or an attendance fee (which itself can be a daily rate of a half-daily rate, or calculated on a per meeting or per case basis). Individuals' remuneration therefore is not directly comparable. Full details of all payments to board members of non-departmental bodies, by gender, are given in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies". Copies of "Public Bodies 1997" are available in the Library of the House.

Flood Defence

Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information was held by his Department on the state of flood defences prior to the current exercise by the Environment Agency to compile an asset register of flood defences. [42384]

Mr. Morley: This Department holds a summary of the results of the survey of sea and tidal defences undertaken by the Environment Agency's predecessor body (the National Rivers Authority). With regard to inland flood defences, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave on 8 May 1998, Official Report, column 516. A central national record of the state of repair of inland flood defences does not exist.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the Environment Agency began compiling its asset register of flood defences; and when it expects to finish it. [42381]

Mr. Morley: Regions of the Environment Agency (and its predecessor bodies) have held information on the condition of flood defence assets for many years. However the first nationally consistent survey of sea defence assets, covering 805 km of coastline, was undertaken in 1991. In April 1997 the Agency introduced the national Flood Defence Management System for the identification, justification and prioritisation of programmes of work; an asset register of defences is included in this computer system. The Agency expects to complete the major exercise of converting existing data, collecting up-to-date information and collating in to the system on some 35,000 km of "main" river flood defence assets by 2000.

Inquiries for Information

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if his Department operates a monitoring exercise of persistent inquirers for information. [42631]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 19 May 1998]: Although requests for information under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information are routinely monitored, it has not been found necessary to introduce specific procedures for persistent inquiries. The Department and its agencies follow the guidance on interpretation of the Code issued by the Office of Public Service.

Quarantine Kennels

Mr. Gale: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 13 May 1998, Official Report, column 145, on quarantine kennels, what were the findings of his inspectors' visits to the quarantine kennels named in the television programme transmitted on 5 May; and what action will be taken by his Department as a result of those visits against (a) those responsible for the conditions and (b) his Department's veterinary officers. [42688]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 19 May 1998]: Dover and Folkestone Quarantine Kennels was inspected on 6 May. Following this inspection, the authorisation of part of the premises was withdrawn. Minor deficiencies were found in the remainder of the premises and the owner has been required to carry out remedial work by 18 May. Rutland Quarantine Kennels was inspected on 7 May. The premises were found to comply with the standard requirements relating to disease security.

The allegations made about conditions in these premises at the time of filming are still under investigation.

Milk Marque

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to review the rules governing the way Milk Marque operates, with particular reference to the way it sells milk; and if he will make a statement. [42481]

Mr. Rooker: The competition authorities are responsible for these matters. At the request of the Director General of Fair Trading, the Monopolies and Mergers Commission are currently examining the supply of raw milk in Great Britain.

Farming Issues (Discussion Forums)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what forums exist for the discussion of farming issues between the Government, farmers and other connected parties; and what plans he has to create additional forums. [42489]

Mr. Rooker: Ministers and officials meet farmers and other organisations on a regular basis to discuss issues of interest to them. In addition farmers and others are represented in: Meetings by Ministers on regional tours; Regional Liaison Groups, chaired by Regional Directors; National Agri-Environmental Forum and Regional Agri-Environmental Consultation Groups; County Targeting meetings for the Countryside Stewardship Scheme; Regular Environmentally Sensitive Area (ESA) Agreement Holders meetings; Liaison Group meetings for Individual ESAs; Pesticides Forum; and other forums for discussion.

Food Standards Agency

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what jurisdiction the Food Standards Agency will have over the production of foreign food imported into the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [42486]

Mr. Rooker: The Food Safety Act 1990 requires that all food offered for sale in this country must comply with food safety requirements. The proposed Food Standards Agency will have no jurisdiction over the production of food in other countries. It will negotiate in the EU and other international bodies to ensure that the high regulatory standards which apply to producers in this country are fully reflected in the legal framework which governs international trade in food.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has made to European Commission officials dealing with the CAP about the levels of prices for products paid to British farmers. [42485]

Mr. Rooker: We maintain regular contact with the European Commission on all matters regarding the CAP mechanisms which influence the prices received by British farmers for their products.

Badgers

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with farmers relating to diseased badgers. [42484]

Mr. Rooker: I met representatives from the National Farmers Union on 19 May to discuss implementation of the Krebs report on TB in cattle and badgers.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will assess the advantages of extending the right of farmers to cull diseased badgers; and if he will make a statement. [42483]

Mr. Rooker: Badgers are protected under the Protection of Badgers Act 1992 and may not be killed, taken or their setts interfered with except under licence. The Report on bovine tuberculosis in cattle and badgers by Professor Krebs and the Independent Scientific Review Group makes clear that there is at present no scientific basis for a general policy of killing badgers to control bovine TB. It recommends a proper experimental study to determine the effectiveness of badger culling as a disease control strategy. We are planning such a study and have meanwhile brought to an end the "interim strategy" of limited badger culling by Ministry staff. In the light of the Krebs report, we see no basis for issuing licences to farmers to kill badgers to prevent the spread of bovine TB to cattle.

Green Pound

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from farmers about the revaluation of the green pound from 1999. [42482]

Mr. Rooker: We have received a number of representations from farmers and organisations representing farmers regarding the introduction of new agrimonetary arrangements from 1 January 1999. We remain in close contact with all interested organisations on this subject.

Rendering Subsidies

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to re-introduce the rendering subsidy. [42487]

Mr. Rooker: None. The objective of the rendering industry support was to avert the disorderly collapse of the red meat/animal waste chain in the immediate aftermath of the BSE crisis in March 1996. This objective was achieved.

Whaling

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking in respect of the plans by Iceland to resume whaling described as scientific whaling. [42168]

Mr. Morley: I intend to raise this issue with the Icelandic Fisheries Minister when I visit Reykjavik later this month. I shall make clear our opposition to any possible resumption of whaling.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to influence the Norwegian and Japanese Governments in respect of their whaling policy. [42169]

Mr. Morley: My Government colleagues and I take every opportunity to draw to the attention of the Japanese and Norwegian Governments our continuing opposition to their whaling activities. The United Kingdom delegation will be making our views very clear at the meeting of the International Whaling Commission that is currently taking place in Oman.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Public Bodies

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when his Department's action plan for increasing the number of women holding public appointments will be published; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [42849]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: This Department's action plan will be published shortly. Copies will be placed in the Library of the House.

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what is the average salary of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department; [42847]

(2) what is the average attendance fee of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department. [42848]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The majority of board members of non-departmental public bodies give their time and services voluntarily and receive no payment other than normal travel and subsistence expenses. Where members do receive remuneration, this can vary between an annual salary, an honorarium, and an attendance fee (which itself can be a daily rate or a half-daily rate, or calculated on a per meeting or per case basis). Individuals' remuneration therefore is not directly comparable. Full details of all payments to board members of non-departmental bodies, by gender, are given in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies".

Staff Car Mileage Allowance

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the total number of staff of all grades employed by his Department; and what percentage of these staff were eligible to claim a car mileage allowance on 31 March in each year since 1990. [42550]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The total complement of UK-based staff in all grades employed by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 31 March in each year since 1990 are listed in the following table:

Year	Number
1990	6,605
1991	6,730
1992	6,646
1993	6,546
1994	6,346
1995	6,050
1996	5,904
1997	5,800
1998	5,800

All staff with a valid driving licence and vehicle insurance are eligible to claim car mileage allowance when using their private vehicles for travel on official business. The Department does not record the number of staff who hold such documents.

Congo

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on human rights in the Congo and the expulsion of UN representatives. [42799]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We deeply regret the circumstances which necessitated the UN Secretary-General's decision to withdraw the UN inquiry team which had been investigating alleged human rights violations since 1993 in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. We and our partners in the EU consistently urged the Congolese authorities to ensure the fullest co-operation with the inquiry team. Despite some improvements, the team never enjoyed full co-operation. We fully endorsed the decision to withdraw the team, but did so with considerable regret, as we believe a thorough and impartial investigation into human rights violations could make a valuable contribution to long term stability, security and sustainable development in the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the Great Lakes region as a whole.

Kenya and Uganda

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will take further steps to assist the Governments of (a) Kenya and (b) Uganda to resolve conflicts in their countries. [42397]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We have consistently urged the Government of Kenya. and political parties in Kenya, to avoid confrontation, and violence, and to pursue political dialogue on Kenya's further democratic development.

We do not believe there can be a purely military solution to the problems of Northern and Western Uganda. We have urged the Government of Uganda to pursue opportunities for dialogue as a means of resolving these conflicts. We are always prepared to consider the merits of requests for practical assistance with conflict prevention and resolution, in Africa and elsewhere.

Information

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department operates a monitoring exercise of persistent inquirers for information. [42639]

Mr. Tony Lloyd [holding answer 19 May 1998]: The FCO does not operate a policy of monitoring persistent inquirers. The FCO's Open Government Unit routinely logs and monitors all formal requests for information received under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. This is to ensure that each inquiry is correctly answered on a case by case basis within the twenty working day target. These statistics (which do not include names) are also required for inclusion in the annual Report on the working of the Code of Practice, which is co-ordinated and published by the Cabinet Office. In 1997 the FCO dealt with 55 formal requests, 48 of which (87.3%) were answered within the deadline.

Regional and Minority Languages

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to sign the Convention on Minority Languages. [41427]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for St. Ives (Mr. George) on 5 May 1998, Official Report, column 341.

HEALTH

Mental Health Services

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the means by which primary care groups are able to purchase appropriate mental health services, including counselling and psychotherapy for their patients. [23465]

Mr. Boateng: Primary Care Groups will provide a direct means by which general practitioners, their primary care team and community nurses, working in co-operation with health authorities, and other health and social care professionals, will lead the process of securing appropriate, high quality care for local people. Commissioning of all services will be determined in accordance with national priorities and local health improvement programmes.

School Nursing

Audrey Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the (i) short-term and (ii) long-term outcome of various patterns of school nursing provision. [25024]

Mr. Boateng: Research has been commissioned into the effectiveness of school entry nurse health checks and consideration is being given to a further study of the effectiveness of health checks undertaken by nurses in school. There are also specific studies into the trial of an injury prevention programme in primary schools and into service support for children with special health needs attending mainstream schools which may reflect outcomes associated with school nurse involvement. The results will assist evaluation of how the health care needs of children in community settings may best be met.

Alternative Health Register

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to establish an alternative health register; and when. [27360]

Ms Jowell: The statutory register for osteopaths, established under the Osteopaths Act 1993, opened on 9 May. Arrangements for the opening of the statutory register for chiropractors, to be established under the Chiropractors Act 1994, are in preparation, but we are not yet in a position to say when it will open.

We have no plans to regulate by statute other complementary therapy groups, some of which maintain, on a voluntary basis, a register of their membership.

Conferences

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of his officials attended conferences (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) overseas; and how many and what percentage made (i) oral and (ii) written contributions to the matters under discussion in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [31174]

Ms Jowell: The information available is shown in the table.

	United Kingdom conferences	Overseas conferences
Officials attended conferences between 1-2-97 and 1-2-98 (totals)	1,559	250
Number of officials who made oral contributions at those conferences (totals)	851	177
Percentage	55	71
Number of officials who made written contributions to those conferences (totals)	266	75
Percentage	17	30

The Department does not maintain centralised records of individual attendance of conferences. The information provided in the table was obtained through a trawl of officials' diaries and is the best available. Only conferences which were organised from outside the Department are included. Where an official attended more than one conference during the year the figure included in the table reflects the number of conferences attended. The Department values officials participating in selected conferences to share knowledge and keep up to date with relevant developments and to ensure, in the international context, that the United Kingdom perspective is adequately represented.

Unpasteurised Milk

Mr. Singh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the number of people made ill over the last 10 years by (a) unpasteurised milk and (b) its products. [31306]

Ms Jowell: The majority of cases of food poisoning are sporadic and the vehicle of infection is not known. Cases may also occur as part of outbreaks and for some of these the vehicle of infection may be established. Information on the number of people affected in general outbreaks of infectious intestinal disease in England and Wales associated with (a) unpasteurised milk, and (b) its products can be found in a detailed table, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Elderly People

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 13 February 1998, Official Report, column 432, if he will introduce measures to require social services to backdate financial assistance for elderly people living in residential or nursing homes who did not claim assistance immediately their savings fell below £16,000 because they were unaware that assistance was available. [31873]

Mr. Boateng: We have no plans to introduce backdating provisions for financial assistance for elderly people in residential care or nursing homes to cover a period before they were assessed by the social services department as requiring such care.

Dental Services (East Midlands)

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the ratio of dentists to population in the area of each health authority in the East Midlands. [32001]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is given in the table.

General Dental Service: population per dentist on health authority lists at 31 December 1997. Trent Regional (East Midlands)

Health Authority	Number of persons per dentist on health authority lists
Barnsley	3,607
South Humber	4,264
Doncaster	3,172
Leicestershire	3,526
Lincolnshire	4,631
North Derbyshire	3,673
North Nottinghamshire	3,799
Nottingham	3,007
Rotherham	3,596
Sheffield	2,914
South Derbyshire	3,348

3M Capital Hip System

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he received from the Medical Devices Agency about the 3M Capital Hip system. [31978]

Mr. Milburn: In January 1998 we were advised of the anecdotal information on the poor performance of the Capital hip system and that the Medical Devices Agency (MDA) was investigating the clinicians' experience at several United Kingdom centres. We have been regularly updated on the latest information as it has become available to the MDA. Conclusive data confirming the unacceptably high rates were established in February 1998 by the MDA. Advice to the National Health Service was issued as a Hazard Notice on 18 February 1998.

Ambulance Service

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if response times of ambulances to emergency calls are monitored from the time the call is received or from the time the call is answered. [35097]

Mr. Milburn: Until recently ambulance services varied in when they started recording response times. However, from 1 April 1998 ambulance response times are monitored from when the following essential details are obtained:

i) the caller's telephone number

ii) the exact location of the incident

iii) the nature of the chief complaint.

This is set out in the "Review of Ambulance Performance Standards—Final Report" (July 1996), copies of which are in the Library.

Reviews

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the reviews instituted in his Department since 1 May 1997; what is the estimated cost of the reviews; and which reviews have reported and when the others will be completed. [41553]

Ms Jowell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Teignbridge (Mr. Nicholls) on 14 May 1998, Official Report, columns 207–08.

In addition, three reviews instituted in the Department since 1 May 1997 have already reported. Information on these reviews is set out in the table.

Review	Date of report	Costs £
Review of the breast screening programme in Devon and the implications for the breast cancer screening programme as a whole	3 November 1997	[1]11,700
Strategic review of health services in London	18 November 1997	[2]90,000
Independent review of proposals for the transfer of bulk blood processing from Liverpool to Manchester	8 April 1998	[2]3,600

[1] Costs include officials' time since in this case they can be differentiated from the normal running costs of Departmental business

[2] Costs exclude officials' time since they cannot be differentiated from the normal running costs of Departmental business

Public Bodies

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the average salary of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department; [42826]

(2) what is the average attendance fee of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department. [42827]

Mr. Milburn: Full details of all payments to members of non-departmental public bodies are given in the Cabinet Office publication, Public Bodies 1997, copies of which are available in the Library.

Complementary Medicine

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make complementary medicine therapies more readily available under the NHS to those on lower incomes. [42566]

Ms Jowell: Health authorities are able to include complementary therapies within the range of services commissioned to meet local health needs, if they wish to do so. No charges are made to patients for such services when provided in the National Health Service. Access to NHS services is based on clinical need, not the patient's ability to pay.

Availability of complementary therapies within the NHS reflects, therefore, the decisions taken locally by health authorities and general practitioners about the clinical and cost effectiveness of such services, and the priority to be given to their provision in the light of other competing demands for the resources made available for local health needs.

NHS Estates Agency

Mr. Goggins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the corporate plan and key tasks and targets for 1998–99 for the NHS Estates Agency. [43179]

Mr. Milburn: I have agreed the Agency's corporate plan, and key tasks and targets for 1998–99 and have placed copies in Library.

Kent and Canterbury NHS Trust

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) to what extent problems over cervical screening arrangements in the NHS contributed to the retirement of Mr. Edward Pearson as Chief Executive of the Kent and Canterbury NHS Trust; [42290]

(2) if Mr. Edward Pearson, Chief Executive of Kent and Canterbury NHS Trust, has been questioned by his Department on his role in problems that arose in the area of cervical screening in Kent; [42291]

(3) if Mr. Edward Pearson, former Chief Executive of the Kent and Canterbury NHS Trust, received a full pension entitlement on his retirement in June 1997. [42292]

Mr. Milburn: Sir William Wells, Chair of the National Health Service Executive South Thames Regional Office, led an independent review on cervical screening at Kent and Canterbury Hospitals NHS Trust which was published in October 1997. Mr. Edward Pearson was interviewed as part of this review.

On 7 July 1997, Mr. Pearson took early retirement because, as Chief Executive, he felt personally accountable for what happened at the hospital. Mr. Pearson received a pension in accordance with the regulations set out in the NHS superannuation scheme.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if Mr. James Bird, former chairman of the Kent and Canterbury NHS Trust, received any consideration on his retirement as chairman. [42293]

Mr. Milburn: Mr. Bird was entitled to receive appropriate remuneration as trust chairman up to and including his last day in office. He did not receive, nor was he entitled to receive, any additional consideration on standing down.

Watford and St. Vernon Hospital

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has received for the closure of the Watford and St. Vernon hospital. [42645]

Mr. Milburn: None.

TREASURY

Individual Savings Account

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to issue the regulations for the operation of ISAs. [40244]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: The Inland Revenue are today publishing draft tax regulations for consultation. Copies are available in the Libraries of both Houses. Responses are sought by 26 June and we intend to lay final regulations before the House of Commons in July.

Euro

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for how long national mints of states participating in EMU will continue to print and mint distinctive national versions of the single currency; and what effect non-repatriation of banknotes to country of origin will have on this. [41477]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 12 May 1998]: No time limit has been placed on the national mints of member states participating in the single currency minting distinctive national versions of the euro coin.

Those countries joining the single currency on 1 January 1999 have opted not to have distinctive national features on their euro notes. Thus non-repatriation of euro banknotes will not be an issue.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 7 April 1998, Official Report, column 150, what quantity of the metal known as Nordic Gold will be required for the single currency coinage; and from what source it will be acquired. [41579]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 12 May 1998]: Mint Directors of the EU member states have estimated that the approximate quantity of Nordic Gold required to mint the euro coins would be 140,000 tonnes for all 15 EU member states. Nordic Gold is derived principally from Copper which is readily available.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 18 February 1998, Official Report, column 689, to the hon. Member for Ludlow (Mr. Gill), what volume of bulk redistribution of euro banknotes he estimates will occur in the euro zone; and what factors will lead to such redistribution. [41510]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 12 May 1998]: The Chancellor has made no estimation of the volume of bulk redistribution of euro banknotes that might occur between countries in the euro zone. The European Central Bank, together with the national central banks of those countries joining the single currency will be responsible for monitoring the situation.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will publish the internal guidelines in use by his Department on 7 May 1997 on the manner of responding to written Parliamentary questions; [41954]

(2) if he will publish the internal guidelines currently used by his Department on the manner of responding to written parliamentary questions indicating any changes made since 7 May 1997. [42040]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson [holding answer 14 May 1998]: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the answer which the Prime Minister gave him on 19 May 1998, Official Report, column 314.

"European Community Finances"

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his Department's paper, "European Community Finances", if he will calculate the United Kingdom's net payments to European Community institutions in 1998–99, on the same basis as the figures given for European Communities' expenditure in Table B18, page 128 of the Financial Statement and Budget Report, March 1998. [41979]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 18 May 1998]: The figure for 1998–99 given in Table B18 of the Financial Statement and Budget Report, March 1998, represents the latest estimate of trended net payments to EC Institutions for that year. There are no plans to recalculate and publish this figure on a trend basis. The Government are, however, currently assessing more detailed cash flow figures for 1998–99. These will be published as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Public Bodies

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is the average salary of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department; [42850]

(2) what is the average attendance fee of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department. [42851]

Mrs. Liddell: The majority of board members of non-departmental public bodies give their time and services voluntarily and receive no payment other than normal travel and subsistence expenses. Where members do receive remuneration, this can vary between an annual salary, an honorarium or an attendance fee (which itself can be a daily rate or a half-daily rate, or calculated on a per-meeting or per-case basis). Individuals' remuneration therefore is not directly comparable. Full details of all payments to board members of non-departmental bodies, by gender, are given in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies". Copies of "Public Bodies 1997" are available in the Libraries of the House.

Public Appointments

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when his Department's action plan for increasing the number of women holding public appointments will be published; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [42852]

Mrs. Liddell: The Treasury's action plan will be published shortly. Copies will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will reduce rates of vehicle excise duty on powered two-wheel vehicles; and if he will set a zero rate for vehicles with engines under 50 cc. [42329]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chancellor will make his proposals for vehicle excise duty rates in the next Budget in the light of the consultation on vehicle excise duty that he announced in his last Budget.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Dilapidated Housing

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to assist with the renovation of dilapidated housing stock in (a) Barnsley and (b) Doncaster. [42655]

Mr. Raynsford: It is for local authorities to decide how best to apply the resources available to them for investment in housing to meet local needs and priorities. The table shows resources allocated by the Government for housing in 1998–99 to the Metropolitan Borough Councils of Barnsley and Doncaster:

£ million

	Barnsley	Doncaster
(i) Housing Annual Capital Guidelines	2,905	3,137
(ii) Private Sector Renewal support grant	700	775
(iii) Disabled Facilities Grant	284	345
(iv) Capital Receipts Initiative	3,035	3,424

In Doncaster, we are supporting ongoing Estate Action work to renovate housing in Stainforth and Dunscroft villages and SRB Challenge Fund projects which include renovation of housing in the Balby and Northern Corridor areas.

Thames River Crossings

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received from (a) local hon. Members, (b) local authorities, (c) private sector businesses and (d) other organisations on Thames river crossings. [42797]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Between 1 May 1997 and 1 May 1998, a total of 176 written representations about new East Thames River Crossings were received. They can be categorised as follows: (a) 15 from local hon. Members, (b) 61 from local authorities, (c) 107 from private sector businesses and (d) 93 from other organisations.

East Thames Appraisal Framework

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the East Thames Appraisal Framework results and the Secretary of State's consequent decision will be published. [42796]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We are currently considering the case for new river crossings east of Tower Bridge following an assessment of options using the East Thames Appraisal Framework (ETAF). No decisions have yet been taken. The ETAF results will be made available in due course.

Planning Applications

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in each of the years from 1992 to 1997 how many planning applications in England were referred to his Department (a) because they were applications raising issues of more than local significance, (b) following referral by the local planning authority as proposals which depart from the local development plan and (c) following voluntary referral by the local planning authority; and how many in each category were called in. [42153]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 18 May 1998]: Information is readily available only in the form set out as follows from 1995 onwards. The approximate total number of planning applications referred to this Department as departures from the local development plan, and the total number of planning applications called in, in each of the years from 1995/96 to 1997/98 are as shown. The figures for departure applications include applications referred under the "Shopping" Directions in the West Midlands and South West Regions. Information on departures for 1992 to 1994 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Year	Departures	Call-ins
1995–96	1,010	144
1996–97	985	139
1997–98	1,088	147

London Assembly

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if an environmental appraisal was produced for the 'A Mayor and Assembly for London' White Paper. [42665]

Mr. Raynsford: Our Green Paper, "New Leadership for London" (Cm 3724), invited views on a range of proposals for an environmental role for the new Greater London Authority. Our White Paper, "A Mayor and Assembly for London" (Cm 3897), sets out our detailed proposals, taking into account consultation responses.

Under our proposals, the Greater London Authority will have extensive environmental responsibilities. It will be placed under a duty to promote the environmental, economic and social well being of Londoners. It will also be placed under a duty to promote sustainable development. The Mayor will also be placed under a duty to produce an air quality management strategic plan and an integrated municipal waste strategy for London, and to take action to promote efforts to reduce the impact of noise. The Mayor will have power to promote Local Agenda 21 and biodiversity within London. The Mayor will produce a report every four years on the state of the environment in London and, in consultation with the boroughs, will produce a further report every four years on the contribution made by London towards the Government's national programme for reducing greenhouse gas emissions.

Park and Ride

Sir Raymond Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 13 May 1998, Official Report, column 118, if he will list the Park and Ride schemes initiatives, by local authority funded by his Department. [42792]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The table shows the single scheme referred to in the answer of 13 March 1998, Official Report, column 362–64, for which a local authority has received a specific allocation, and lists those which authorities could pursue using their block allocation from the Department.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Paul Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what assessment his Department has made of the impact of a fast rail link from the Channel Tunnel to the north via Ebbsfleet, Stratford and St. Pancras on levels of road freight transport; [43096]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact on investment of a fast rail link from the Channel Tunnel to the north via Ebbsfleet, Stratford and St. Pancras; [43094]

(3) what estimate he has made of the total cost to the Government of (a) continuing the Channel Tunnel rail link as proposed under the Channel Tunnel Rail Link Act 1996, including the incorporation of the Ebbsfleet and Stratford international stations, (b) opting for an upgraded link to Waterloo and (c) delaying the project. [43028]

Ms Glenda Jackson: On 27 March 1998, Official Report, columns 295–96, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister said that the cure period under the Channel Tunnel Rail Link (CTRL) Development Agreement within which London and Continental Railways (LCR) could bring forward any improved proposals to the Government had been extended to 29 May 1998. Proposals have now been received and we are discussing them with the company. The economic and transport implications (including freight) of decisions on the CTRL will be a key consideration for my right hon. Friend in assessing the proposals put to him by LCR.

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 27 March 1998, Official Report, column 295, if he has received revised proposals from London and Continental Railways; and if he will make a statement. [43546]

Mr. Prescott: I have received revised proposals from London and Continental Railways which are being discussed with the company. I will make a statement to the House as soon as I can after the Whitsun recess.

Greater London Authority

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to announce the date of the elections to the Greater London Authority. [42977]

Mr. Raynsford: We hope to announce the proposed date of the elections to the Greater London Authority later this year.

Council Tax

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what proposals he has to grant local authorities discretion to vary the level of council tax imposed upon the owners of second homes; [42996]

(2) if his review of the council tax system has included the issue of varying the level of council tax imposed upon the owners of second homes from the present mandatory 50 per cent; and if he will make a statement; [42997]

(3) what representations he has received from (a) South Lakeland District Council, (b) South Lakeland residents and (c) others on the subject of the level of council tax imposed per owner of second homes. [42995]

Ms Armstrong: The consultation paper "Improving local financial accountability" invited views on whether there is a case for change to the council tax. We have received a number of representations about discounts given on second homes including from the South Lakeland District Council and from other local bodies, and individuals. Our proposals will be set out in a White paper which we shall publish in the summer.

Agrochemical Levy

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will define the terms of reference of the inquiry into the feasibility of an agrochemical levy. [42713]

Angela Eagle: Work has recently been commissioned by the DETR into whether a tax or charge on pesticides would be an effective way to reduce water pollution and negative impacts on the terrestrial environment, and to consider how such a tax or charge might work. The terms of reference for the study, to be carried out by ECOTEC research consulting limited cover inter alia detailed design issues; potential distributional impacts; and assessment of the issues affecting competitive positions of sectors of the UK economy.

Motor Cycles

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the relative risks of (a) cycling and walking and (b) powered two-wheel vehicle use; and if he will ensure that the latter is not excluded from the Integrated Transport Policy on the grounds of safety. [42330]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Table 1.6 of Transport Statistics Great Britain 1997 shows that, for every billion passenger kilometres travelled in 1995 (latest figures), there were 1,507 two-wheeled motor vehicle users killed or seriously injured. The comparable figures for pedal cyclists were 881 and 611 for pedestrians. Motorcycle use, like other modes of transport, will be addressed in the Integrated Transport Policy White Paper.

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to end the requirement that provisional motorcycle licence holders who fail to pass their driving test within two years are subject to a one year ban. [42331]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We are preparing a consultation paper that will consider the options for amending the current rule, whilst ensuring that any alternative arrangements provide that learner riders are properly trained and tested.

Drink-driving

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what percentage of drivers randomly tested were found to be over the legal alcohol limit in the last year for which figures are available. [42714]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The police do not have powers to take breath samples from motorists on a random basis. Motorists may be breath tested following an accident, when they appear to have committed a moving traffic offence or where there is a suspicion of alcohol use.

In 1996, the latest year for which figures are available, 781,100 breath tests were administered in England and Wales and in 13 per cent. of those, either the test showed a positive (over the limit) reading or the driver refused to provide a sample.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his Department's policy on the amount of alcohol which may be safely consumed by those intending to drive; and if he will make a statement. [42715]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The limit up to which a person can legally drive after consuming alcohol is 80mg of alcohol in 100ml of blood. However, alcohol affects people in different ways according to factors such as the person's sex, body weight and whether food has been consumed. Even a small amount of alcohol can impair performance. The Department's advice, which is endorsed by its current drink-drive publicity campaign, is therefore not to drink and drive.

School Transport

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list (a) the average number of school children in England travelling by school transport each day and (b) the number of (i) fatalities and (ii) injuries of school children involved in road accidents associated with school transport in each of the last five years. [42423]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The average number of children (aged 4–16) resident in Great Britain in 1992–96 who travelled to school by bus each day was about 1.7 million. Of these, about 0.5 million used a school bus.

The number of road accident casualties in England who were school pupils going to or from school by bus or coach is as shown for each of the last five years for which figures are available. It is not, however, possible to identify how many of these were travelling in a school bus.

Motorway Service Areas

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to allow local planning authorities fully to determine applications for motorway service areas. [42924]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We have no plans to change the existing arrangements under which motorway service area planning applications are dealt with in the same way as those for any other development. Applications which are called in for determination by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, or are the subject of an appeal by the intending developer, will normally be considered at a public inquiry before an independent Inspector. In such cases, the Inspector reports to my right hon. Friend who takes the final decision. In all other circumstances, the decision rests with the local planning authority.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to take direct responsibility for the location of motorway service areas; and if he will make a statement. [42923]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Planning Policy Guidance Note 13 ("Transport") and Roads Circular 1/94 give advice to intending developers and local planning authorities on the spacing of motorway service areas (MSAs). We are considering whether there is any need to amend that advice but we have no plans to review the underlying policy that, within the constraints set by the spacing guidance, identification of specific sites for proposed new MSAs is a matter for the private sector.

Planning Inspectorate

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will publish a revised Framework Document for the Planning Inspectorate. [43344]

Mr. Caborn: I have today arranged for copies of the Planning Inspectorate's revised Framework Document to be published and for copies to be placed in the Library.

It is part of the usual arrangements for Next Steps Agencies to review their operation and revise their Framework Document every three to five years. The revised Framework Document will set out the relationship between the Planning Inspectorate executive agency and its parent Departments (the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions and the Welsh Office).

Rents

Dan Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress he has made in drawing up proposals to address the problem of fair rent increases affecting tenants under the Rent (Agriculture) Act 1967 and the Rent Act 1977; and if he will make a statement. [43437]

Ms Armstrong: The Government are very concerned that private tenants with regulated tenancies and secure tenants of registered social landlords have faced exceptional rent increases in recent years. After market rents were introduced in 1989 for all new lettings, these tenants continued to have the protection of the fair rent system. However, they could never have anticipated the high level rent increases that some of them have faced. Many of them are elderly and on fixed incomes. They have planned their affairs on the basis that they would be able to remain in their present homes and are now faced with real financial difficulties. My Department is today issuing a public consultation paper setting out how we propose to tackle this problem.

The proposals would apply to those private tenants and secure tenants of Registered Social Landlords who have a fair rent registered under the Rent (Agriculture) Act 1976 or the Rent Act 1977. Increases would be limited by an Order made under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985. The limits would be RPI plus 10% for the first re-registration after the Order comes into effect and RPI plus 5% for subsequent re-registrations. The limits would not apply if the rent had not previously been registered or a substantial increase in rent was due as a result of repairs or improvements by the landlord to the property. The limits would not apply to rent increases for assured and assured shorthold tenancies.

Comments on the proposals are invited by 24 July. Copies of the consultation paper have been placed in the Library. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales is issuing a similar consultation paper in Wales.

Passenger Ferries

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on recent developments in the safety of roll-on roll-off passenger ferries. [43438]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I am pleased to announce the publication of an updated list of ferries operating to and from UK ports detailing the dates by which they must comply with the higher survivability standard specified in the Stockholm Agreement. We believe that it is important to continue to provide public information on ferry safety and will publish further lists when there are significant changes.

Officials from my Department recently attended a conference hosted by the Swedish Government in Stockholm to consider the Report of the Joint Accident Investigation Commission of Estonia, Finland and Sweden into the loss of the ESTONIA in September 1994. The conference was a welcome initiative from the Swedish Government and I thank them for it. It considered whether or not international action since the ESTONIA tragedy had sufficiently addressed the Report's recommendations. It was agreed that most issues, particularly the potential problem of capsize due to water entering the car deck, had been satisfactorily addressed, confirming the significant progress which has been made in recent years. The conference also agreed that there were areas where research might identify further potential safety enhancements. We will look closely at these to establish whether there are any further measures we can take to enhance the already very high safety standard of ferries operating to and from UK ports.

Trains

Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the HSC will make proposals on Mark 1 rolling stock and on train protection. [43439]

Dr. Strang: I am pleased that the Commission has today launched a consultative document proposing regulations on the installation of train protection systems (to all trains and at key signals) and on Mark 1 rolling stock. Copies of the consultative document have been placed in the Library. Rail is already one of the safest forms of transport but I welcome the Commission's proposals for making the network even safer.

Building Regulations Advisory Committee

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has for the future of the Building Regulations Advisory Committee. [43176]

Mr. Raynsford: The Building Regulations Advisory Committee is a statutory advisory non-departmental public body constituted under Section 14(1) of the Building Act 1984. The Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions is statutorily obliged to consult the Committee on Building Regulations and other subjects connected with those regulations. The regulations apply in England and Wales. Appointments to the Committee are made jointly by the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions and by the Secretary of State for Wales.

The Government are continuing a programme of regular "Financial Management and Policy Reviews" of non-departmental public bodies. Under that programme, I have now received and accepted a Financial Management and Policy Review report relating to the Building Regulations Advisory Committee for the period 1992–96.

The report traces the history and policy development since the establishment of the Committee in 1962. In particular, it traces the evolution of the early Building Regulations—which provided a very prescriptive regime of building control—to a far more flexible process based on functional requirements. The report also highlights some of the more important procedural and technical areas which have evolved over the years—for example, providing for private sector involvement in the building control process at the election of applicants, and the rise in concern within the regulations for energy conservation and access and facilities for disabled people.

Financial Management and Policy Reviews are essentially concerned with assessing and reviewing the policy relevance and the cost-effectiveness of the body concerned. I am happy to say that BRAC scores high on both counts. I have no doubt that its experience with examining the core relevance of regulations will be of great value to this Government's policy of "better regulation".

As the report illustrates, the fact that members of BRAC are unsalaried, and that many willingly put in many hours in working parties, means that the cost effectiveness of the Committee is excellent compared with what could be achieved by contracting out to consultants for the provision of expert advice. As the report also indicates, consultants in this context would not necessarily provide the full breadth of expertise I have to hand on BRAC and could also not necessarily provide the continuity of knowledge which is so essential.

Members are appointed to the Committee usually for terms of two or three years. The Committee's numbers had dwindled over the last year or so and, in addition, some appointments came to an end at the turn of the year. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I therefore had the opportunity of appointing fresh blood to the Committee—thirteen members in total. We have also within the discipline of the Nolan recommendations considered it right for the benefit of continuity and the excellent public service which has been offered, to re-appoint five existing members. Details of the new Committee membership were released in a letter dated 20 April 1998 to Editors of the Construction and Property Press.

I had the opportunity to meet the new Committee in February and was able to say in person how much the Government valued the work of BRAC. I was also able to thank all those members who had served, or who were continuing to serve, on the Committee. In giving a particular welcome to the new members I expressed the view that they should find the Committee an interesting one to serve on. Having now studied the FMPR, I have no doubt about the on-going importance and relevance of the Committee.

I have arranged for a copy of the FMPR report and the letter to Editors to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Dounreay

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place in the Library copies of (a) The Hydrogeology of Dounreay Nuclear Power Development Establishment (1978), prepared by the Institute of Geological Sciences, (b) Environmental Radioactivity in Caithness and Sutherland, AERE-R17999 (1988), (c) the annual health and safety reports for Dounreay since 1956 and (d) the earliest report made by the UK Atomic Energy Authority to the Government on the accident at its waste shaft, D1225, at Dounreay in May 1977. [39673]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 30 April 1998]: I have been asked to reply.

I have arranged to place in the Library a copy of the Hydrogeology Report, the Report on Radioactivity in Caithness and Sutherland and the UKAEA's report on the 1977 incident at the Intermediate Level Waste Shaft at Dounreay. The Library already holds copies of the Health and Safety Executive's Reports covering the period 1987–94.

More Group

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received in respect of the takeover bid by J. C. Decaux for the More Group; and how many of these were from local authorities. [43042]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My right hon. Friend has received correspondence from J. C. Decaux, and the company has outlined its proposals to officials in this Department. I have received no specific representations from local authorities or other bodies. Mergers are a matter for the competition authorities.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Consultation Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the consultation papers published since 1 May 1997 giving the date of publication, closing date for submissions and the number of respondents. [42248]

Mr. Hoon: The information requested is set out in the table.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Montserration Evacuees

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration he has given to the future status of Montserration evacuees in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [43586]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We have decided that Montserration evacuees in the United Kingdom should be allowed to remain here indefinitely if they wish. This offer will also apply to Montserratians still on the island and those who moved elsewhere in the Caribbean because of volcanic activity, should they wish to come to the United Kingdom.

Forensic Practitioners

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy on proposals from the forensic science community for the creation of a Registration Council for Forensic Practitioners; and if he will make a statement. [43620]

Mr. Straw: I am pleased to announce the Government's support for the creation of a Forensic Science Registration Council, in line with the central recommendations made by the industry's own Working Group in December 1997. The Working Group, which was chaired by Lord Lewis, was established following an initiative by the Forensic Science Service.

The Council's aim will be to promote and maintain high standards of competence, practice, discipline and ethics amongst forensic science practitioners. It will be non-statutory, self-financing, self-regulating and independent, with input from users. The Council will operate on a three tier basis, comprising:

- a Council, to include legal, lay and expert members, and incorporating a disciplinary panel;
- an Executive/Registration Board, which would set the criteria for registration and operate the register; and
- Assessment Panels, which would assess qualifications and competence for each specialism within the forensic science community.

The Council will build on and incorporate existing expertise and infrastructure using the experience of a wide range of professional bodies which already operate in this field.

While considering the Working Group's recommendations on this issue, the Government also looked at the other outstanding proposals for the oversight of forensic science put forward by the Royal Commission on Criminal Justice (which reported in 1993) and by Professor Caddy in his report of December 1996 into the contamination incident at the Forensic Explosives Laboratory. The Royal Commission and Professor Caddy recommended the establishment of a Forensic Science Advisory Board and an Inspectorate of Forensic Science Services respectively.

The Government considered all three sets of proposals very carefully. In light of the progress made in recent years by the forensic science industry to promote quality and standards, including the external accreditation of laboratories by the United Kingdom Accreditation Service and the British Standards Institute, we believe that the Registration Council offers the most practical way forward. The Registration Council would undertake a number of the tasks proposed for the Advisory Board and Inspectorate, but would do so in a way which complemented existing structures for maintaining standards in the industry. We share the view of the previous Administration, as set out in their final response to the Royal Commission (published in June 1996), that there is no need for the far wider remit envisaged for the two alternative oversight bodies. Many of the functions identified for the Advisory Board and Inspectorate could be fulfilled effectively only with some form of statutory regulation which the Royal Commission itself did not see as justified. The Government concur with this view.

It is important that any new arrangements for oversight command the support, not only of forensic practitioners, but the end users of their services. I am pleased that the proposals to establish the Registration Council for Forensic Practitioners have received the overwhelming support of the forensic science community, as well as considerable backing from those in the wider criminal justice system.

Once fully established, the aim would be for registration with the Council to become expected of those presenting expert forensic evidence in court. This would not preclude those who are unregistered from giving such evidence, although I believe such instances will become rare. It will also remain open to the courts to hear evidence from non-registered persons whose expertise is in a field outside the normal range of forensic science. As now, such decisions will remain a matter for the court to determine.

Although it is the intention that, once fully established, the Registration Council will be self-funded, the Government have agreed that it will provide financial support to help with the start-up costs. Such funding will be for an initial period of two years.

The setting up of the Registration Council will be a significant step forward in further raising quality and standards in the forensic science industry. Taken together with the other measures already taken by the industry, the Council will do much to enhance the standing of forensic science in the criminal justice process.

Race Relations Forum

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 13 May 1998, Official Report, column 125, if he will list the persons appointed to the Race Relations Forum. [40841]

Mr. Straw: I am pleased to announce that the first meeting of the Race Relations Forum will be held on 23 June. The following have confirmed that they are willing to serve as members of the Forum:

Mr. Rumman Ahmed; Ms Yasmin Alibhai-Brown; Mr. Michael Boye-Anawomah JP; Ms Rachel Campbell; Mr. Thomas Chan; Ms Gobnait Ní Chrualaoí; Mr. Lincoln Crawford QC; Mr. Mohammed Dhalech; Lord Navnit Dholakia OBE JP; Mrs Zerbanoo Gifford; Mr. Bernie Grant MP; Ms Ros Howells OBE; Mr. Lee Jasper; Mr. Makbool Javaid; Dr. Gus John; Ms Mukami McCrum; Mr. Norman McLean; Dr. Dwain Neil; Sir Herman Ouseley; Mr. Adam Hafejee Patel; Ms Shushila Patel; Mr. Trevor Phillips; Ms Rachel Pickavance; Mr. Iqbal A. K. M. Sacranie; Mr. Gurbux Singh; Mr. Ranjit Sondhi; Dr. Richard Stone; The Rt. Revd Wilfred Wood.

Sexual Abuse

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) teachers and (b) care staff are currently under investigation for retrospective allegations of sexual abuse of former pupils. [41132]

Mr. Michael: It is difficult to answer my hon. Friend's question with any precision because it refers to investigations rather than convictions and it is difficult to see how such information could be collected centrally. Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary is undertaking a thematic inspection on child protection, which will look at how records and intelligence are collated and shared across agencies, and what good practice can be promoted on how to conduct major abuse inquiries.

The Department for Education and Employment maintains a list of individuals who are barred from working in schools: (List 99), while the Department of Health consultancy index also contains information about individuals who are considered to be unsuitable to work with children and young people.

A Ministerial group chaired by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health is following-up work across Government arising from Sir William Utting's report 'People Like Us'. Among the issues arising from that report is the need to strengthen recruitment and vetting procedures for adults who work with children living away from home.

Young Offenders

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe), of 30 March 1998, Official Report, column 391, of the two young men held in adult prison accommodation which was not separate from adult prisoners, if he will list (a) their ages, (b) the prison or prisons in which they were held, (c) the reasons they were held in accommodation not separate from adult prisoners, (d) the period for which they were held in such accommodation and (e) the number of other young men held in accommodation not separate from that of adult prisoners since 1 May 1997. [38578]

Ms Quin: I will write to the hon. Member.

Parc Prison

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a breakdown of the staff, transport and subsistence costs incurred on each occasion other prisons had to provide staff to support Parc Prison, Bridgend; what effect this had on staffing levels at the prisons which provided staff; how many prison officers are employed at Parc and at each of the prisons which provide staff in proportion to the number of prisoners; and if Parc's staffing level was at full complement at the time of each occasion when other prisons provided staff. [42070]

Ms Quin: Parc Prison has requested assistance from neighbouring prisons for help with disturbances on three occasions since it opened on 17 November 1997.

On 20 February 1998, a total of 43 staff from Swansea, Cardiff and Usk prisons provided assistance to Parc. The staffing costs were £1,788.00, and the travel and subsistence costs were £708.26. Swansea reports no effect on its staffing levels and Cardiff and Usk report minor disruption to regimes and association.

On 18 April, a total of 43 staff from Swansea, Cardiff and Bristol prisons provided assistance to Parc. The staffing costs were £1,806.00, and the travel and subsistence costs were £560.58. Swansea and Bristol prisons report no effect on their staffing levels and Cardiff reports minor disruption to regimes.

On 6 May, a total of 119 staff from Swansea, Cardiff, Bristol, Usk, Long Lartin, Gloucester and Erlestoke prisons provided assistance to Parc. The staffing costs were £11,199.00, and the travel and subsistence costs were £2,338.28. Usk and Erlestoke prisons report no significant effect on their staffing levels. Swansea, Cardiff, Bristol, Long Lartin and Gloucester prisons report minor disruption to regimes.

The number of staff and prisoners at Parc prison, and the establishments which assisted them on 6 May, is set out in the table (The staffing figures are for all unified staff):

Establishment	Number of staff	Number of prisoners
Parc	193	738
Bristol	334	599
Cardiff	258	700
Erlestoke	102	301
Gloucester	137	305
Long Lartin	634	379
Swansea	136	330
Usk	90	334

Parc Prison's staffing complement for the three occasions when assistance was provided was: on 20 February 1998, 211 staff in post against a target staff figure of 225; on 18 April 1998, 204 staff in post against a target staff figure of 225; and on 6 May 1998, 193 staff in post against a target staff figure of 225.

Hillsborough and Stephen Lawrence Inquiries

Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of public money disbursed to assist families and relatives of victims was provided (a) to individual victims and families, (b) family support groups and (c) collectively in respect of (i) the Hillsborough disaster and (ii) Stephen Lawrence's murder; and by what method the allocations were determined. [42983]

Mr. Michael: The Criminal Injuries Compensation Board advise that injuries sustained in the Hillsborough disaster were not regarded as the result of a crime of violence for the purposes of the criminal injuries compensation scheme, and that, accordingly, no compensation in respect of that disaster was awarded under the scheme.

As regards the Stephen Lawrence murder, in accordance with the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, it is not the practice of the Board, or the new Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority (which deals with applications lodged on or after 1 April 1996), to disclose details about individual applications, including whether applications have been made.

Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provisions were made out of public funds in respect of costs to (a) commission expert evidence and (b) challenge expert evidence put by another party at the public inquiries into (i) the Hillsborough disaster and (ii) Stephen Lawrence's murder; what was the outturn cost to public funds of such assistance for each inquiry; and how costs were agreed, verified and disbursed. [42981]

Mr. Michael: The original papers relating to the Taylor inquiry into the Hillsborough Stadium disaster are being examined to see what information was kept on costs. I will reply to my hon. Friend when that has been done.

The Stephen Lawrence inquiry is still in progress. The Chairman of the inquiry, Sir William Macpherson of Cluny, has been asked to recommend how the costs of the inquiry should be met. The inquiry was called under section 49 of the Police Act 1996. There is power under section 49 to defray any costs of the inquiry out of the police fund.

Drink-driving

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drivers have been banned from driving for one year for drink-related offences in the last year. [43081]

Mr. Michael: Information is not available in precisely the form requested because the published motoring offences are based on offences rather than offenders, and offences involving drugs cannot be separated from those involving drink. There were 35,287 disqualifications imposed for 'Driving etc after consuming alcohol or taking drugs' in England and Wales in 1996, the latest year for which figures are available.

Such figures are published annually in "Offences relating to motor vehicles. England and Wales 1996. Supplementary tables", copies of which are available in the Library.

Operation Charlie

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 14 May 1998, Official Report, column 181, how many children involved in Operation Charlie (a) received the specific tuition and (b) were used for comparison; and how many hours tuition the children received. [42901]

Mr. George Howarth: The number of children involved in Project Charlie that (a) received the intervention was 44; (b) the number of comparison children was 233; the Project Charlie children received a lesson of at least 30 minutes each week for 39 weeks.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 14 May 1998, Official Report, column 181, if the review of the value of Operation Charlie recommended further investigation. [42902]

Mr. George Howarth: The report on the follow up evaluation of Project Charlie strongly suggested that primary school drugs education programmes can have a delaying effect for the onset of drug use. It also recommended that further research be carried out. The Government's anti-drugs strategy signifies clearly the value of drugs education in schools from age 5 upwards, and identifies the commissioning of long-term evaluation's of the effectiveness of prevention and education programmes as a priority.

Firearms

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offences involving a loaded antique firearm have been committed in the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [42800]

Mr. Michael: It is not possible, from the statistics held centrally, to determine how many offences are committed with antique firearms.

Drivers (Drugs)

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of people driving under the influence of drugs have been reported by South Yorkshire Police in each of the last five years. [42656]

Mr. Michael: The information requested is not available centrally.

There is no information collected centrally that distinguishes between driving under the influence of drugs and driving under the influence of alcohol.

The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions have in the past produced an estimate of the number of drug/driving cases based on information supplied by the Forensic Science Service, but this does not enable a police force breakdown to be made. Neither do South Yorkshire police themselves have any local information.

Police (Training)

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the training courses offered to Metropolitan Police officers in 1997 and 1998 to date. [42805]

Mr. Michael: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis has provided a copy of the Metropolitan Police's Training Prospectus for courses held centrally at Hendon's Training Schools under the Director of Training and Development. I have placed a copy of the prospectus in the Library.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total training budget of the Metropolitan Police for the current financial year. [42807]

Mr. Michael: The Commissioner tells me that training in the Metropolitan Police is delivered on three levels: centrally; by area; and by divisions.

In addition, some training is purchased from outside trainers through the use of external budgets. As a consequence, the information requested is not readily available and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, the Commissioner tells me that the total resource budget for centrally-delivered training is £24 million. Centrally based training under the Director of Training and Development is responsible for approximately 40 per cent. of all training delivery in the Metropolitan Police Service.

Association of Chief Police Officers

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the funds and assistance provided in each year since 1994–95 to the Association of Chief Police Officers of England, Wales and Northern Ireland from (a) the Home Office, (b) other Government Departments and (c) each police authority or board; [42410]

(2) if he will list the grades within the uniformed police or civilian police service which make up the membership of the Association of Chief Police Officers of England and Wales and Northern Ireland. [42406]

Mr. Michael: The membership of the Association of Chief Police Officers of England, Wales and Northern Ireland comprises:

- the chief constables, and assistant chief constables, including assistant chief constables (designated), of the forces in the police areas listed in Schedule 1 of the Police Act 1996 (full members)
- the commissioners, assistant commissioners and commanders of the Metropolitan Police Service and the City of London Police (full members)
- the chief constable, deputy chief constable and assistant chief constables of the Royal Ulster Constabulary (full members)
- the chief police officers appointed/seconded to the National Criminal Intelligence Service and National Crime Squad (full members)
- senior civilian staff of the forces and organisations listed above who are deemed by the Association to hold a post equivalent to that at least of an assistant chief constable (associate members)
- those chief police officers of other police forces who accept the Association's invitation to become members (associate members).

In respect of the Association of Chief Police Officers of England, Wales and Northern Ireland, the Home Office contributed £466,000 in 1994–95, £470,000 in 1995–96 and £458,000 in 1996–97 towards staff salaries and administrative costs of the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) Secretariat under the common police service arrangements. In 1997–98, under different arrangements, the Home Office contributed a further £458,000 towards these costs.

Contributions from police authorities in 1997–98 are listed in the following table. Before 1996–97, ACPO was organised differently with a limited central function. Work undertaken in the ACPO cental office from part-way through 1996–97 was previously carried out in forces for which no specific costs are available. Police authorities contributed £330,000 as a part-year cost for setting up the reorganised ACPO in 1996–97. In 1994–95, the police authorities' contribution was 49 per cent. of the total net cost of all common police services, of which the contribution to the costs of ACPO was a small part. This was apportioned between police authorities on the basis of a per capita charge based on the authorised establishment of each force. From 1995–96 to 1997–98, the costs of common police services were taken into account when the level of police grant was set for police authorities. These arrangements followed detailed discussions and agreement between the parties involved.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Malawi

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when she expects to announce the results of her review of the aid programme to Malawi; and if she will make a statement. [41952]

Clare Short: I expect to complete the review in July. I am optimistic that we can build partnerships with the Government and others aimed at systematically reducing poverty in Malawi.

Debt

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what initiatives her Department is taking to relieve developing countries' debt during the United Kingdom presidency of the European Union; and if she will made a statement on how she is taking these forward. [43092]

Clare Short: We work with the Treasury to seek to mobilise increasing international commitment to assist heavily indebted poor countries. In addition, we have contributed $10.5 million to help the African development bank meet its costs of providing debt relief under the heavily indebted poor countries debt initiative, and are encouraging other donors to do likewise. We have signalled our readiness to contribute $10 million to an international fund for Mozambique, an action which helped break the impasse among creditors earlier this year.

I convened an informal meeting of donors to Rwanda in Brussels on 19 May, which considered among other matters ways of helping resolve that country's debt problems. At the donors' meeting in Stockholm on 2–3 June, Britain will announce a significant contribution to the multi-donor debt trust fund, which will provide debt relief to Rwanda over the next few years. We are providing nearly £500,000 in the form of technical assistance to help developing countries improve the management of their debt portfolios. We are continuing to urge other donors to follow the UK's example and write off their aid loans to the poorest developing countries.

Trauma Counselling

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance her Department gives to agencies providing trauma counselling in post-conflict situations. [42873]

Clare Short: We recognise that trauma counselling is an important component of health care in post-conflict situations. We support a number of projects which provide direct assistance to children affected by conflict, including after-care for traumatised children. In the past, we have supported a major social rehabilitation programme with World Vision for children abducted by the Lord's Resistance Army in Uganda. More recently, we have provided assistance to non-governmental and UN agencies working in Liberia.

Strategic Exports

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her Department's contribution to the drawing up of the Government's annual report of strategic exports. [42872]

Clare Short: My Department does not lead on the Government's annual report of strategic exports. We take part in interdepartmental discussions and will be consulted on the report before it is published.

Arms Exports

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions her Department has had with other Government departments on arrangements for the monitoring of arms export licences to less developed countries. [42877]

Clare Short: The Export Control Organisation of the Department of Trade and Industry is the licensing authority. All relevant individual licence applications are circulated by the DTI to other Government Departments with an interest, in line with their policy responsibilities. These include the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Ministry of Defence and my Department.

Indonesia

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development who represented her Department at the World bank meeting in Washington on 1 April on international humanitarian aid efforts for Indonesia; what was discussed; and if she will make a statement. [42762]

Clare Short: The purpose of the meeting, which was attended by a member of the Department for International Development's Asia division, was to discuss the social consequences for Indonesia of the Asian financial crisis and prospects for mobilising additional support from multilateral and bilateral sources. Copies of a press release issued by the bank after the meeting have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The conclusions of the meeting has been largely overtaken by current developments in Indonesia. As circumstances permit, we shall continue to explore opportunities of working with civil society, non-governmental organisations and other donors to bring effective help to poor people, including those affected by the crisis.

Public Bodies

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what is the average salary of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to her Department; [42814]

(2) what is the average attendance fee of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to her Department. [42815]

Clare Short: The majority of board members of non-departmental public bodies give their time and services voluntarily and receive no payment other than normal travel and subsistence expenses. Where members do receive remuneration, this can vary between an annual salary, an honorarium or an attendance fee (which itself can be a daily rate or a half-daily rate, or calculated on a per meeting or per case basis). Individuals' remuneration therefore is not directly comparable. Full details of all payments to board members of non-departmental bodies, by gender, are given in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies". Copies of "Public Bodies 1997" are available in the Libraries of both Houses.

Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her policy towards providing aid to countries with extensive military programmes, including the development of weapons of mass destruction. [42390]

Clare Short: My Department seeks to develop long-term partnerships with countries that are committed to the elimination of poverty and are pursuing appropriate economic, social, environmental and political policies. In considering the opportunities for partnership, we take into account a wide range of factors. These would certainly include the impact on the poor of excessive military expenditure and the development of weapons of mass destruction.

Zimbabwe

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has further to fund Zimbabwean police and army training at United Kingdom establishments. [41583]

Clare Short: The Department for International Development is supporting an organisational development project with the Zimbabwe Republic police, to reduce crime and the costs of policing through improved management and operational efficiency. Under this project, we have agreed to fund 12 curriculum development officers to attend training programmes at the Scottish police college over the next 12 months. The Department for International Development does not provide assistance for military personnel.

Sudan

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment her Department has made of the type of food and levels of supplies available for (a) adults and (b) children in Sudan. [42871]

Clare Short: Last week, my officials visited some of the seriously affected areas. Food supplies are adequate at present. Bulk grain (sorghum) and pulses are being provided to vulnerable communities. Children are also receiving Unimix and other specialised food mixtures. Access remains the major constraint, together with freedom for relief agencies to operate unhindered. Unless a ceasefire is implemented and people can plant their crops, food needs will continue throughout the year.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations she has received about the resources available to Operation Lifeline Sudan; and if she will make a statement. [42761]

Clare Short: In February, the UN inter-agency consolidated appeal sought US$109 million for Operation Lifeline Sudan in 1998. To date, some US$33 million has been committed to the appeal. A number of donors, including the UK, announced additional contributions at a meeting held on 18 May. Since February, Britain has committed £10.23 million to OLS.

Debt Relief

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions her Department has had with the IMF and World bank concerning debt relief to Rwanda; and if she will make a statement. [42878]

Clare Short: Rwanda's debt burden is severe, and one of a number of constraints on the Government's capacity to make progress towards achieving the poverty reduction targets. On 19 May, I convened an informal meeting in Brussels to discuss how external assistance could help relieve these constraints. The IMF and World bank were represented. These discussions will continue at a donars' meeting that the Government of Rwanda and the World bank will hold in Stockholm on 2–3 June. At that meeting, Britain will announce a significant contribution to a new multi-donor debt trust fund designed to ease Rwanda's debt burden in the period leading up to eligibility under the heavily indebted poor countries initiative become available.

Leaders at the G8 Summit in Birmingham recognised the need to respond to the exceptional needs of poor post-conflict countries such as Rwanda as they rebuild their political, economic and social systems, and agreed that, particularly for those countries with arrears to the international financial institutions, there was a need for debt relief mechanisms to be used to release more resources, and more quickly, for essential rehabilitation. We shall be pressing for this work to be taken forward urgently.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimate she has made of the cost to her Department of the accelerated programme of debt relief proposed under the Mauritius mandate. [42879]

Clare Short: The main element of the Mauritius mandate is to press for faster implementation of the heavily indebted poor countries debt initiative. To help achieve this aim, the Department for International Development is prepared to contribute to international efforts to ensure speedy debt relief to HIPC countries. We have contributed $10.5 million to help Uganda, have pledged $10 million to help Mozambique, and may contribute to others, but at this stage it is not possible to quantify the total likely cost.

As part of the mandate, I indicated that I was willing to cancel the remaining aid debts owed to the UK Government by lower-income Commonwealth countries, provided the poor benefited from this action. The potential cost of this is up to £132 million. The mandate also signalled our readiness to finance through the aid programme technical assistance to poor countries, particularly those in the Commonwealth, to assist in debt management. We are providing over £750,000-worth of technical assistance to the Governments of Tanzania and Nepal for this purpose. We have also agreed to contribute £400,000 to the core costs of Debt Relief International, an organisation that provides technical assistance in debt management to HIPC countries.

Public Appointments

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when her Department's action plan for increasing the number of women holding public appointments will be published; and if she will place a copy in the Library. [42816]

Clare Short: My Department's action plan will be published shortly. Copies will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

SCOTLAND

Examinations (Continuous Assessment)

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to implement the recommendation of the Scottish Secondary Teachers' Association for a review of the continuous assessment part of standard grade and higher examinations; what advice he has given to teachers in dealing with suspected plagiarism in internal assessment reports; and if he will make a statement. [40252]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 30 April 1998]: Responsibility for the setting and marking of both standard grade and higher grade examinations rests with the Scottish Qualifications Authority. To ensure the quality and rigour of its qualifications, the authority works closely with experts in the education and training fields; it provides schools with clear guidance on internal assessment, including advice on suspected plagiarism; and it closely monitors assessment arrangements in schools.

Independent research has recently confirmed the successful maintenance of standards in higher grade examinations. In relation to standard grade examinations, the Scottish Qualifications Authority decided, having consulted the teaching profession about the continuous assessment aspect and in order to address concerns about work load, that the investigating element should be withdrawn for some subjects from 1999.

These matters are kept under constant review, as befits their importance, and the Scottish Qualifications Authority will continue to take careful account of the views of the teaching profession in relation to future developments.

Agriculture Grants

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost to his Department of administering grants to agriculture in the last year; and how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time staff were involved. [42437]

Mr. Macdonald: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Nuclear Safety

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the annual cost to his Department or public bodies responsible to his Department, since May 1979, of the oversight and implementation of environmental safety at (a) Dounreay nuclear power establishment, (b) Hunterston nuclear plant, (c) Torness nuclear plant and (d) Chapelcross nuclear materials production plant. [39671]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 30 April 1998]: Such information as is readily available is shown in the tables. The first table comprises information relating to charges raised in connection with the Scottish Environment Protection Agency's inspection and monitoring duties at nuclear sites. The site operators are liable for payment of these charges, which are intended to cover the cost to the Agency of undertaking such duties. The second table shows the costs incurred by the Health and Safety Executive in connection with regulation safety at nuclear sites. Nuclear operators pay the HSE charges, which are broadly designed to meet these costs.

Fire Service

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list by fire service board in Scotland, (a) the level of the capital expenditure budget and (b) the number and capital cost of fire appliances expected to be acquired for the current financial year; [41814]

(2) if he will list by fire service board in Scotland, (a) the level of the capital expenditure budget, (b) the number and capital cost of fire appliances acquired and (c) the average age of the fleet of fire appliances for financial years (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii) 1997–98. [41815]

Pensions Agency

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the key performance targets he has set for the Scottish Office Pensions Agency for 1998–99. [43588]

Mr. Dewar: I have set the Scottish Office Pensions Agency the following key performance targets for 1998–99:

To ensure that 99.5% of awards and transfer payments are accurate.

To pay on time 99.5% of all pensions and lumps sums where the target date for receipt of claims is met.

To make transfer payments within 12 working days of members' final instructions to transfer pensions rights.

To ensure that 97% of contributions due from employers of teachers are received within 15 days of the end of the month to which they relate.

To reduce total identified operating costs per member/beneficiary by 5% in real terms.

Criminals (Repatriation to UK)

Mr. Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many United Kingdom citizens convicted of criminal offences abroad and deported back to the United Kingdom in the years 1990 to 1997 have re-offended in Scotland; [41738]

(2) how many criminals convicted of murder or homicide abroad and deported back to the United Kingdom in the years 1990 to 1997 have re-offended in Scotland; [41739]

(3) how many United Kingdom citizens, convicted of murder or homicide abroad have been deported back to the United Kingdom and have come to reside in Scotland in each year since 1990; [41740]

(4) how many United Kingdom citizens convicted of criminal offences abroad have been deported back to the United Kingdom and have come to reside in Scotland in each year since 1990. [41741]

Mr. McLeish: I refer my hon. Friend to the answers he received today from the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office. Neither the information relating to re-offending nor that on place of residence is held centrally.

Forest Enterprise

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes have been made to the previously reported targets for Forest Enterprise for 1997–98 and 1998–99. [43587]

Mr. Dewar: The targets for Forest Enterprise in 1997/98 and 1998/99 were changed to take account of the fall in timber prices and our moratorium on large scale sales of forest land. The original and the amended targets are as follows:

£ million

	Original target	Amended target
1997–98
Cash Surplus	28.7	24.7
1998–99
Cash Surplus	33.7	29.8
Operating Profit	18.6	12.4
Cubic Metres of Wood Harvested	5.0	5.1
Income from Disposals of Buildings and Land	25.0	10.0

Copies of the agency's corporate plan, which contains more detail about the agency's targets, will be placed in the Library of the House when it is published in June.

Forestry Commission Research Agency

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what targets have been set for the Forestry Commission Research Agency for the current financial year. [43590]

Mr. Dewar: The Forestry Commission Research Agency has been set the following targets:

To achieve at least 92 per cent. customer satisfaction by value and by customer numbers.

To have the entomology research programme reviewed by a Visiting Group during the financial year and have confirmation that the research does meet current quality standards.

To increase the output of peer-reviewed scientific papers submitted and subsequently accepted for publication by 5 per cent. on the 1997–98 figure.

To achieve a 2 per cent. real cost reduction in the weighted average unit cost of chargeable staff days in 1998–99 compared with 1997–98.

To achieve full cost recovery from customers.

Copies of the agency's corporate plan, which contains more detail about these targets, will be placed in the Library when it is published in June.

Prison Service

Mr. Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what targets he has set for the Scottish Prison Service, as an executive agency for 1998–99. [43589]

Mr. Dewar: I have set the chief executive of the Scottish Prison Service the following targets:

Performance measures	Key targets
The number of prisoners unlawfully at large	No A category prisoners should escape
	The number of escapes by B category prisoners should be no higher than 1.00 per 1,000 prisoners
	The number of escapes by C category prisoners should be no higher than 1.6 per 1,000 prisoners
The number of serious assaults on staff and prisoners	The number of serious assaults on staff should be no higher than 3 per 1,000 staff
	The number of serious assaults on other prisoners should be less than the 1997–98 outturn
Basic quality of life for prisoners	By end March 1999, 71 per cent. of prisoners will have access to forms of night sanitation
The amount of available opportunities for prisoners' self-development	To ensure that 600 prisoners have completed a cognitive skills programme and 60 prisoners have completed a sex offender programme during 1998–99
Average annual cost per prisoner place	To keep costs within £27,904 per place available for use
The level of absence through staff sickness	To reduce the average number of days lost per person per year through staff sickness to 14

Dounreay

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the remit of the safety review currently being conducted of the fuel cycle area at Dounreay. [43068]

Mr. Macdonald: The review was announced on 15 May and is being carried out by the Health and Safety Executive's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency. The terms of reference are to carry out a detailed audit of the management of safety at Dounreay, including: the effects of contractorisation; the management of reprocessing operations; the management of radioactive waste; the management of decommissioning; the arrangements for dealing with incidents; the interface between Dounreay and UKAEA's corporate management; and to make recommendations and publish a report.

Nurse Prescribing

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what further plans he has to extend prescribing powers to district nurses and health visitors in the two demonstration sites to the whole of Scotland; and what further expenditure has been planned in order to facilitate this process. [42570]

Mr. Galbraith: There is a commitment to continue with the phased roll-out of the nurse prescribing scheme across Scotland.

We have been proactively extending the scheme from the original two demonstration sites in May 1997, and by the end of May 1998 there will be 550 nurse prescribers in Scotland.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list (a) the number of (i) district nurses and (ii) health visitors who are currently able to prescribe from the nurse formulary in Scotland, (b) the locations in which they are currently working, (c) the total public expenditure involved to date and (d) the level of public expenditure per location. [42571]

Mr. Galbraith: (a) By the end of May 1998, there will be 550 nurse prescribers in Scotland. A breakdown of this figure into district nurses and health visitors is not held centrally.

(b) The locations currently covered by those nurse prescribers are:

Location	Number
Ayrshire and Arran	80
Borders	30
Grampian	90
Glasgow	100
Highland	40
Lanarkshire	40
Lothian	90
Tayside	80
Total	550

A further 25 nurses each from Argyll and Clyde, Dumfries and Galloway, Fife and Forth Valley Health Boards began training in April 1998 with an anticipated completion date of September 1998. Training for the 100 nurses eligible to prescribe in the three Island Boards will begin in June with an anticipated completion date of December 1998/January 1999.

(c) The expenditure to end of March 1998 is £123,601.

(d) Each health board is allocated £100 per capita to help support the cost of staff replacement for nurses undertaking nurse prescribing training. The academic institutions providing the training are paid £85 per capita.

Local Government Boundaries

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to publish the Scottish Local Government Boundary Commission proposals for the new local government boundaries in the Scottish Borders council area. [42572]

Mr. Macdonald: The Local Government Boundary Commission for Scotland has not yet submitted its report on the electoral boundaries for the Scottish Borders council, although it is expected by the end of June.

School Transport

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list (a) the average number of school children in Scotland travelling by school transport each day and (b) the number of (i) fatalities and (ii) injuries of school children involved in road accidents associated with school transport in each of the last five years. [42421]

Mr. Wilson: Tables 1 and 2 show the number of schoolchildren in Scotland provided with free transport. The figures are derived from a survey of school transport provided by education authorities in September each year.

Table 3 shows the number of road accident casualties in Scotland who were school pupils going to or from school by minibus, bus or coach for each of the last five years for which figures are available. It is not possible to identify how many of these were travelling in school transport provided by education authorities.

Local Government Boundaries

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to publish the Scottish Local Government Boundary Commission proposals for the new local government boundaries in the Scottish Borders council area. [42572]

Mr. Macdonald: The Local Government Boundary Commission for Scotland has not yet submitted its report on the electoral boundaries for the Scottish Borders council, although it is expected by the end of June.

Dounreay

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the remit of the safety review currently being conducted of the fuel cycle area at Dounreay. [43068]

Mr. Macdonald: The review was announced on 15 May and is being carried out by the Health and Safety Executive's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency. The terms of reference are to carry out a detailed audit of the management of safety at Dounreay, including: the effects of contractorisation; the management of reprocessing operations; the management of radioactive waste; the management of decommissioning; the arrangements for dealing with incidents; the interface between Dounreay and UKAEA's corporate management; and to make recommendations and publish a report.

WALES

New Deal Funding

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the total estimated amount of new deal funding to be provided in Wales for (i) young people and (ii) disabled people. [42672]

Mr. Hain: The new deal is about meeting individual needs, and therefore expenditure will be determined by the number of eligible people taking-up the opportunities and the nature of their requirements.

On the basis of the planning assumptions for 1998–99, we anticipate expenditure in Wales on the new deal for 18–24 year olds to be around £20 million to £25 million.

Expenditure on people with disabilities is more difficult to estimate at this stage because the new deal for disabled people includes a number of initiatives which are currently under development. I am delighted that we have recently secured for Wales one of the first six personal adviser service pilots, which will be in the eastern valleys.

In addition to this, both the new deal for 18–24 year olds and the new deal for those aged 25 and over will provide assistance to people with disabilities who are in receipt of the job seekers' allowance and who join these programmes.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the competitiveness of manufacturing industry in Wales, with particular reference to the steel production centres in Wales. [42447]

Mr. Hain: According to the annual census of production 1996, figures indicate that manufacturing productivity in Wales was around eight per cent. higher than in the UK and around 48 per cent. higher for metals manufacturing compared to the UK. Figures relating to the competitiveness of the steel production centres in Wales are not available.

Redundancies

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action his Department has taken following the recent redundancies announced at Assi Doran Buckley, and Kimberley Clark, Deeside; and if he will make a statement. [42455]

Mr. Hain: The training and enterprise council (CELTEC) and the Employment Service in North Wales are liaising with both companies' consultants to see what help can be given to the staff who are to be made redundant. As a "significant redundancy", employees from both companies can be considered for training for work immediately rather than having to wait six months.

Competitiveness

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how he encourages competitiveness in small businesses in Wales, with particular reference to export-dependent manufacturing businesses. [42450]

Mr. Hain: Improving the competitiveness of small firms will be one of the key issues addressed by the economic strategy for Wales which will be published shortly.

Export-dependent small manufacturing businesses have access to a wide range of overseas trade services provided by the Welsh Office and others. This includes subsidised trade missions, export market advice, and help in identifying potential new customers; and I am keen to see full use made of these important services.

Automotive Industry

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement as to how he assists the automotive industry in Wales, with particular reference to the Toyota Engine Plant, Deeside, North East Wales. [42448]

Mr. Hain: There is a wide range of assistance available to the automotive industry in Wales including, amongst other things, grant aid under the regional selective assistance, regional innovation grant, SMART, SPUR schemes; business advice; export advice; help with training; help with sourcing components; identifying land, property etc. Some of the support mechanisms are restricted to smaller enterprises but the Toyota engine plant at Deeside could avail itself of many of the above sources of assistance.

Further Education

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those further education colleges which are currently in deficit; and by how much. [42613]

Mr. Hain: The further education institutions in Wales that reported historic cost deficits in their audited financial statements for the academic year ending 31 July 1997 are set out in the table.

£000

FE Institution	Deficit
Deeside College	982
Coleg Glan Hafren	11
Gorseinon College	124
Gwent Tertiary College	2,418
Merthyr Tydfil College	800
Pontypridd College	114
WEA North	44

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many students were in further education in Wales at the time of incorporation of the further education colleges; and what have been the annual changes in numbers since incorporation. [42647]

Mr. Hain: The numbers of full-time equivalent students in further education in Wales for the period 1992–98 are set out in the table:

Financial year	Full-time equivalent students
1992–93	41,860
1993–94	47,068
1994–95	50,409
1995–96	54,631
1996–97	59,228
1997–98	61,112

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the budget for further education in each year since incorporation and what the budget will be for 1998–99; and what percentage change has occurred since incorporation. [42646]

Mr. Hain: The total resources made available to the Further Education Funding Council for Wales (FEFCW) on an annual cash basis for the period 1993–99 are set out in the table:

Financial Year	Total resources to FEFCW (£m)	Percentage change
1993–94	143.0	—
1994–95	169.7	18.7
1995–96	175.9	3.7
1996–97	177.7	1.0
1997–98	180.5	1.6
1998–99	176.0	(-2.5)

European Structural Funds

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the nature and scope of his responsibilities in relation to the review of European structural funds in respect of Wales, indicating the timetable for action by his Department. [42473]

Mr. Hain: We are fully involved in the formulation of UK Government policy on structural fund reform, and our primary interests are to safeguard the position of Wales. Welsh Office officials form part of the UK delegation, co-ordinated by the DTI, negotiating the draft regulations with the Commission in Brussels. No deadline has been set for the conclusion of the negotiations, but the new funding period (2000–2006) commences on 1 January 2000.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) temporary, (b) part-time and (c) seasonal staff worked in (i) the agricultural department and (ii) other departments of the Welsh Office in (1) 1997–98 and (2) 1998–99. [42435]

Mr. Ron Davies: (a) The number of temporary/seasonal staff who worked in the Agricultural Department and in the other Departments of the Welsh Office as at 1 April 1997 and 1 April 1998 is as follows:

Date	Temporary/seasonal staff in Agriculture	Other departments of the WO
1 April 1997	74	120
1 April 1998	95	125

(b) The number of permanent part-time staff who worked in the Agricultural Department and in the other Departments of the Welsh Office as at 1 April 1997 and 1 April 1998 is as follows:

Date	Temporary/seasonal staff in Agriculture	Other departments of the WO
1 April 1997	37	240
1 April 1998	34	235

Public Bodies

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to notify the economic development non-departmental public bodies in Wales of his strategic guidance and targets for 1998–99; and if he will make a statement. [43545]

Mr. Ron Davies: I have today written to the chairmen of the Welsh Development Agency (WDA), the Development Board for Rural Wales (DBRW), Cardiff Bay Development Corporation (CBDC), the Land Authority for Wales (LAW) and the Wales Tourist Board (WTB), to inform them of my strategic targets and priorities for 1998–99. Copies of the letters have been placed in the Library of the House.

With the forthcoming establishment of the economic powerhouse, I will need to reconsider the priorities and targets for the enlarged agency later in the year. I have therefore set targets for the WDA, DBRW and LAW for only the first six months of the current financial year. However, the targets I have set are demanding and include private sector investment of over £400 million and the creation or safeguarding of over 8,000 jobs.

National Assembly

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the responsibilities in respect of the (a) regulation of and (b) payment of subsidy to the railways to be transferred to the National Assembly for Wales. [43131]

Mr. Ron Davies: The Government's policy on devolution is that the National Assembly will take over virtually all of my functions as Secretary of State for Wales. This means that responsibility for the regulation and financial support of the railways will remain with the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions. The National Assembly will, however, assume responsibility for the payment of freight facilities grant under sections 139 and 140 of the Railways Act 1993.

Rugby League

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives he is taking with regard to the introduction of professional Rugby League in Wales. [43086]

Mr. Ron Davies: None.

School Transport

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list (a) the average number of school children in Wales travelling by school transport each day and (b) the number of (i) fatalities and (ii) injuries of school children involved in road accidents associated with school transport in each of the last five years. [42422]

Mr. Hain: The average number of children (aged four to 16) resident in Great Britain in 1992–96 who travelled to school by bus each day was about 1.7 million. Of these, about 0.5 million used a school bus. This centrally available information is from the national travel survey. Reliable estimates are not available separately for Wales.

Details of reported accidents to 4 to 16 year olds in Wales on their way to or from school as passengers on buses, coaches or minibuses for the period requested are set out in the following table:

Reported casualties of school children travelling to or from school by bus, coach or minibus (includes motor caravans) in Wales

DEFENCE

Equipment Exhibition

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when and where the next Royal Navy and British Army Equipment Exhibition will be held. [41945]

Mr. Spellar: We are currently considering the future of the Royal Navy and British Army Equipment Exhibition. I hope to be able to make an announcement shortly.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what dates (a) employees of and (b) personnel connected with Sandline International boarded HMS 'Monmouth' during her recent deployment to West Africa. [42558]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 18 May 1998]: So far as we have been able to establish, at no time did any person identified to be an employee of, or known to be connected with, Sandline International board HMS Monmouth during her recent deployment to West Africa.

Bulldog Trainer Aircraft

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will make an announcement on the award of the contract to replace Bulldog trainer aircraft. [43022]

Dr. Reid: "Best and final offers" have been sought from the bidders in this competition. I hope to be in a position to make an announcement of preferred bidder and choice of aircraft as soon as possible after their evaluation.

Royal Tournament

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what are the dates and locations for the Royal Tournament in (a) 1999 and (b) 2000; [43040]

(2) if he will make a statement on the future of the Royal Tournament. [43041]

Mr. George Robertson: The Royal Tournament will be held at Earl's Court between 20 July and 1 August in 1999.

For the next Century, the Royal Tournament will need to attract audiences and present the Armed Forces in a modern and effective manner which will assist recruiting. I have therefore commissioned a study to identify the options to meet that requirement for 2000 and beyond. It will report in the summer.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Rivers Agency

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Rivers Agency for the financial year 1998–99. [43345]

Marjorie Mowlam: The following Key Targets have been set for the Rivers Agency for 1998–99.

- To construct or refurbish 0.59 km of urban flood defences.
- To increase the length of designated sea defences having appropriate standards of protection to 30.25%.
- To accommodate increased storm run-off from 390 hectares of development land.
- To replace/refurbish 2.0 km of dangerous culverts.
- To complete maintenance works on 265 km of urban watercourses and 1,360 km of rural watercourses.
- To construct 17 new water recreation projects throughout Northern Ireland.
- To issue substantive replies to 80% of written inquiries within 15 working days of receipt.
- To respond to 98% of Schedule 6 applications within 3 months.
- To aim to have all navigation locks operable for at least 90% of the year.
- To control programme expenditure to within 0.5% shortfall of the final control total.
- To control DRC expenditure to within 1% shortfall of the final control total.
- To achieve 3% efficiency savings in the 1998–99 financial year.

The Rivers Agency Business Plan for 1998–99 will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament at a later date.

Health and Social Services Estates Agency

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what changes were made to the performance targets for 1997–98 announced on 17 June 1997 for the Northern Ireland Health and Social Services Estates Agency; and what performance targets have been set for 1998–99. [43346]

Marjorie Mowlam: Modifications to some of the 1997/98 targets for the Northern Ireland Health and Social Services Estates agency were deemed appropriate after due consideration of the changes to clients' specifications for services. The modified targets are as follows:

- Deliver to the Health and Social Services Executive (HSSE) the annual Fire Report on the Health and Personal Social Services (HPSS) estate by March 1998.
- Complete for HSS Trust clients 8 Outline Business Cases of total estimated capital value £29m.
- Complete tender process and move to construction stage 4 schemes of estimated capital value £99.24m.
- Project Manage to completion on site, 11 schemes of estimated total capital value £4.435m.
- Provide lead Clerks of Works Inspection Services on Craigavon Hospital, Causeway Hospital, Altnagelvin Hospital and the Royal Group of Hospitals on projects valued at £126.35m.
- Complete an Electricity at Work Regulation compliance survey, and tender a compliance works contract for one Trust hospital site.

The targets which have been set for 1998/99 are in line with the Government's policy of seeking to improve the services provided to clients in terms of both quality and value for money. I am satisfied that the targets present a demanding challenge for the agency. They are as follows:

Delivery of Services

- Provide the Agency's services in accordance with the requirements of the Service Level Agreements with clients.
- Review the Department's fire safety policy documentation for the Health and Personal Social Services and deliver to the HSSE the annual Fire Report on the HPSS estates by March 1999.
- Assess and advise the HSSE on 60% of capital investment business case submissions within 20 working days, subject to a maximum of 15 business cases per annum.
- Provide a report on progress towards meeting Government targets on green issues by March 1999.
- Provide the HSSE with a Defects Centre in relation to the HPSS Estate. Investigate and clear 60% of all adverse incidents within 6 months of notification to Health Estates subject to a maximum of 120 adverse incidents per annum.
- Complete for HSS Trust clients 5 Outline Business Cases of capital value £11.0m approximately.
- Project manage the PFI process for one scheme with estimated capital value £9m.
- Complete planning and design team briefing for 3 schemes with estimated capital value £33m.
- Complete the tendering process and move to on-site construction stage for 2 schemes with total value £1.2m.
- Project manage to completion 6 schemes with total capital value £9m approximately.
- Project manage during construction 4 schemes for which final completion dates fall outside the year (total capital value £126m approximately).
- Complete architectural design or manage clients contracts to achieve Practical Completion of up to 15 schemes (value £4.5m approximately).

Issue Completion of Defects Certificates for 65% of clients schemes within 6 months of Defects Lists being provided to contractor, and for 90% within a further 6 months.

Issue Final Certificates within 3 months of the issue of Making Good Defects Certificates on 60% of architect led contracts, the remaining certificates to be issued within a further 12 months (except where there are outstanding contact matters or other legal process).

Complete 80% of periodic specialist sterilise equipment tests and environmental tests by the programmed dates and the remainder within 7 weeks of that date subject to a maximum client request for this service of 465 man days.

Complete 75% of diagnostic equipment and laboratory equipment acceptance tests, and other tests within 6 weeks of receipt of written request and the remainder within 10 weeks.

Complete 75% of the initial evaluations for Electro-medical Equipment Projects within 6 weeks of receipt of written request and the remainder within 10 weeks. Complete Electro-medical Equipment Projects within 10 months of clients providing their instruction to proceed.

Undertake a review of one third of the plans in place for High Voltage, Low Voltage and Medical Gas Pipelines Systems in the HPSS.

Financial Management and Efficiency

To operate the Agency within its 1998/99 funding allocation and in doing so ensure its 3 year rolling efficiency programme delivers average annual savings at least equivalent to pay and price increases.

Ensure that the Agency's financial accounting and information systems are adequate to support the preparation of auditable accounts for 1998/99.

A copy of the targets is being placed in the Library of the House.

Child Support Agency

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to publish details of the targets for the Child Support Agency; and if she will make a statement. [43347]

Mr. Worthington: The Child Support Agency will publish its 1998–99 Business Plan and Strategic Plan 1998–2001 today. Copies will be placed in the Library.

The targets that I have set for the Child Support Agency for 1998–99 are as follows:

15.8 million of maintenance to be collected or arranged for direct payment from absent parents to parents with care.

97 per cent. of payments made to parents with care to be made within 10 working days of receipt from the absent parent.

The cash value of all assessments checked in the year to be correct in at least 75 per cent. of cases.

Where a client is dissatisfied with a child support officer's decision and requests a review; 80 per cent. to be cleared in 13 weeks.

65 per cent. of new maintenance applications to be cleared within 22 weeks and as at 31 March 1999 no more than 0.5 per cent. of work outstanding to be over 52 weeks.

To manage the Agency's resources so as to deliver its Business Plan within the gross budget allocation as adjusted during the course of the year, this includes the administration of the Belfast CSAC.

The targets in the Business Plan present the Agency with a challenging but attainable objective which should lead to improvements both in client service and in the maintenance flowing between parents.

Roads Service

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken to improve the competitiveness of the Roads Service; and what performance targets have been set for the agency in 1998–99. [43348]

Marjorie Mowlam: Following a re-examination of the Roads Service market testing commitments in the light of the Best Value principles, it has been agreed that the Roads Service should adopt a Best Value approach to the delivery of its services, based on performance measurement and the benchmarking of costs and quality of service with other organisations. This is now being developed in conjunction with the restructuring of the Agency. If internal costs prove to be uncompetitive and cannot be improved sufficiently then market testing and contracting out remain as options.

For 1998/99, the following performance targets have been set for Roads Service:

Finance

1. To maintain expenditure within cash limits and to approved budget plans.
2. Within the provision allocated, deliver an overall efficiency saving of 3 per cent. in running costs.

Output/Effectiveness

3. To maintain the Motorway network so that at least 85 per cent. has a residual life[1] of more than 5 years.
4. To maintain the Trunk Road Network so that at least 75 per cent. has a residual life of more than 5 years.
5. To maintain the condition of other roads so that the overall Road Condition Index[2] does not exceed 85.
6. To reduce by 40 per cent. the total number of injury accidents occurring at treated sites over the 3 years following the works.

Quality of Customer Services

7. To achieve consistently the key standards of service set out in the Road User's Charter Statement.

Efficiency

8. The unit cost of managing the road network to be 2 per cent. lower, in real terms, than the 1997–98 outturn figure.

[1] The maximum period remaining before the road will require major reconstruction. The higher the residual life figure, the better the condition.

[2] Obtained from analysing the results of inspection surveys covering a sample of the network. The lower the condition index figure, the better the condition.

Water Service

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what key performance targets have been set for the Water Service in 1998–99. [43349]

Marjorie Mowlam: For 1998–99, the following key performance targets have been set for the Water Service:

1. To achieve 98.2 per cent. compliance with drinking water standards set in the Water Quality Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1994.
2. To achieve 67 per cent. compliance with the wastewater treatment works discharge standards set by the Environment and Heritage Service.
3. To ensure that fewer than 0.8 per cent. of properties experience unplanned interruptions to water supplies lasting greater than 12 hours.
4. To issue substantive replies to 90 per cent. of written complaints within 15 working days of receipt.
5. To deliver water at a unit cost of 62 p per cubic metre.

6. To treat wastewater at a unit cost of 55 p per cubic metre.

7. To maintain expenditure within cash limits and to approved budget plans.

8. To achieve efficiency gains of 3 per cent. on running costs expenditure.

The targets are included in the Water Service's 1998–99 Business Plan, a copy of which will be placed in the Library.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for Driver and Vehicle Licensing Northern Ireland in 1998–99. [43350]

Marjorie Mowlam: For 1998–99 the following key performance targets have been set for the Agency:

Output

1. To dispatch 96 per cent. of registration books for new vehicles in 16 working days from receipt.

2. To dispatch 95 per cent. of refunds of vehicle excise duty in 10 working days from receipt.

3. To dispatch 95 per cent. of vehicle excise licences in 5 working days from receipt of postal application.

4. To dispatch 95 per cent. of duplicate vehicle registration books in 6 working days from receipt of applications.

5. To dispatch 91 per cent. of ordinary driving licences in 9 working days from receipt of applications.

6. To dispatch 91 per cent. of vocational driving licences in 9 working days from receipt of applications.

7. To dispatch 91 per cent. of provisional driving licences in 9 working days from receipt of application.

8. To dispatch substantive replies to 96 per cent. of written inquiries for information from the drivers and vehicles registers in 3 working days from receipt.

Efficiency

9. To limit maximum waiting time at Local Vehicle Licensing Offices so that 95 per cent. of customers are attended to within 22 minutes during peak periods (the first 8 and the last 2 working days of each months) and within 10 minutes at other periods.

10. To meet an overall efficiency gain of 2.5 per cent.

Financial

11. To reduce the unit cost per vehicle excise enforcement case by 0.5 per cent. in real terms compared with 1997–98.

Quality

12. To limit the error rate (errors on any item sent out by the Agency) to a maximum of 0.5 per cent. of total Agency output.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

National Lottery

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) how many (a) retail outlets in total and (b) public houses, sell National Lottery scratchcards; [34158]

(2) how many (a) retail outlets in total and (b) public houses sell National Lottery tickets. [34159]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 12 March 1998]: The type and number of outlets selling National Lottery tickets and scratchcards ("Instants") is an operational matter for Camelot Group plc. I have therefore asked the Acting Director-General of the National Lottery, who is responsible for regulating the operation of the Lottery, to write to the hon. Member and copies of his response will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Public Appointments

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when his Department's action plan for increasing the number of women holding public appointments will be published; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [42825]

Mr. Chris Smith: My Department's action plan will be published shortly. Copies will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Public Bodies

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what is the average attendance fee of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department; [42824]

(2) what is the average salary of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department. [42823]

Mr. Chris Smith: Most board members of non-departmental public bodies given their time and services voluntarily and receive no payment other than normal travel and subsistence expenses. Where remuneration is payable, it can take the form of an annual salary, an honorarium or an attendance fee (which itself can be a daily or a half-daily rate, or calculated on a per meeting or per case basis). Individuals' remuneration therefore is not directly comparable. Full details of all payments to board members of non-departmental bodies, by gender, are, however, given in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies". Copies of "Public Bodies 1997" are available in the Libraries of the House.

Information

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if his Department operates a monitoring exercise of persistent inquirers for information. [42637]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 19 May 1998]: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport does not operate a monitoring exercise of persistent inquiries for information.

Swimming

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will launch a national media campaign (a) to make children aware of water safety and (b) to encourage them to learn to swim. [41452]

Mr. Banks: Swimming has my full support, as it is one of our healthiest recreational pursuits. I am keen to see children participate at the earliest possible opportunity and through the English Sports Council, the Government are encouraging the Amateur Swimming Association (ASA) to provide an opportunity for everyone to learn to swim. The ASA receives £215,000 grant-in-aid from the English Sports Council, and a proportion of this money helps to fund this initiative.

Indemnity Scheme

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many indemnity undertakings were given by departments under section 16 of the National Heritage Act 1980 for the six-month period ended 31 March; and what was the value of (a) any contingent liabilities in respect of such undertakings given at any time under that section which remain outstanding as at 31 March, (b) non-statutory Government indemnities in respect of loans handled by the Government Art Collection which remain outstanding as at 31 March and (c) non-statutory undertakings to Her Majesty in respect of loans from the Royal Collection which remain outstanding at 31 March. [43579]

Mr. Chris Smith: The provision for the Government Indemnity Scheme is made by the National Heritage Act 1980. The scheme facilitates public access to loans of works of art and other objects for public display made to museums, galleries and other such institutions by private owners and non rational institutions. It does this by indemnifying lenders against loss or damage to their loan. Loans covered by the scheme must be for public benefit. The scheme also covers loans of such objects for study purposes within borrowing institutions where this would contribute materially to the public's understanding or appreciation of the loan. Examples of this are enhancing interpretation or explanation to the public of objects or bringing into the public domain the conclusions of any study.

In the six-month period ended 31 March 1998, the following undertakings to indemnify were given under section 16 by the relevant Departments for objects on loan to national and non-national institutions.

The value of contingent liabilities in respect of undertakings given at any time under section 16 and which remained outstanding as at 31 March 1998 is:

Department for Culture, Media and Sport	1,568,106,674
Scottish Office Education and Industry Department	34,704,728
Welsh Office Education Department	39,141,000
Department of Education for Northern Ireland	9,123,490

The value of non-statutory Government indemnities to cover loans handled by the Government Art Collection and which remained outstanding as at 31 March 1998 is £9,000,000.

The value of non-statutory Undertakings given to Her Majesty in respect of loans from the Royal Collection and which remained outstanding as at 31 March 1998 is £155,667,655.

Sports Clubs (Rate Relief)

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what was the cost in 1997–98 of the discretionary rate relief for voluntary sports clubs in England and Wales. [42911]

Mr. Raynsford: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not available.

The most reliable figures that are available are estimates for 1998–99, when we expect about £35 million of relief to be granted to non-profit organisations in England and Wales. We do not have any breakdown of this figure between sports clubs and other non-profit making bodies.

Some sports clubs have charitable status and are entitled to relief under the separate mandatory relief provisions.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food Standards Agency

Mr. Hill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the responses to the public consultation on the White Paper, "The Food Standards Agency: A Force for Change". [43436]

Dr. John Cunningham: The Government have received over a thousand responses to public consultation on the Food Standards Agency White Paper, reflecting the considerable importance that the British public attaches to issues of food safety and standards. The responses show widespread support for the general thrust of our proposals.

The many useful comments we have received will inform the preparation of draft legislation, which will be published later in the summer for a final round of public consultation. We will also issue a detailed paper for separate consultation on the proposal to charge the food industry for a greater proportion of food safety costs. The Government are considering, alongside the White Paper responses, the comments made by the Agriculture Select Committee in its recent report on food safety, and will publish its response in due course.

I have today placed in the Library of the House copies of those responses to the White Paper for which confidentiality was not requested by the respondent. These are accompanied by an alphabetical index and a summary of comments on individual parts of the Government's proposals. All will be available in the Library for the next six months.

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will set criteria to govern the priorities of the research programme of the proposed Food Standards Agency. [42620]

Mr. Rooker: The proposed Food Standards Agency will have a substantial research budget to support its work on food safety and standards. It will be for the Agency to establish its research priorities, although it will no doubt wish to consult a wide range of interested parties.

Genetically Modified Plant Varieties

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will publish his response to the discussion paper Weed Control of the Farm: Management of Genetically Modified Herbicide Tolerant Crops. [42971]

Mr. Rooker: We expect to make an announcement in the near future.

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which are the first five applications he has received for National Seed Listing of genetically modified varieties for which his Department will make a proposed listing decision; and when such decisions will be taken. [42970]

Mr. Rooker: The timing of applications for addition of plant varieties to the National List depends on crop species. Applications for the addition of two genetically modified spring oilseed rape varieties were submitted in December 1995, under the names "Socrates" and "Archimedes". At the same time, applications for plant breeders' rights were submitted for these two varieties. Applications for plant breeders' rights were also submitted for a further three varieties of spring oilseed rape in December 1995 (reference numbers AFP 35/853, 35/957 and 35/958), but no applications for addition to the National List were submitted in respect of these three varieties.

Addition of a genetically modified plant variety to the National List does not, on its own, permit marketing. Appropriate consents must also be obtained in accordance with Council Directive 90/220/EEC on the release of genetically modified organisms into the environment. A decision about whether to add the varieties "Socrates" and "Archimedes" to the National List will not be taken until the necessary marketing consents have been promulgated by the French Competent Authority, to whom the marketing application was submitted.

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list each application received for National Seed Listing of genetically modified varieties indicating the application number, the company name and the modified trait. [42972]

Mr. Rooker: The information requested is as follows:

AFP number	Species	National list applicant	Trait of genetic modification

Whaling

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Governments of Norway and Japan to bring about an end to the whaling activities of these countries within the designated whale sanctuary in Antarctic waters. [43090]

Mr. Morley: My Government colleagues and I take every opportunity to draw the attention of the Japanese and Norwegian Governments to our continuing opposition to the former's whaling activities in the Southern Ocean Sanctuary and to the latter's commercial whaling in the North Atlantic. The United Kingdom delegation will be making our views very clear at the meeting of the International Whaling Commission that is currently taking place in Oman.

Pesticides

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to publish the report of the inter-departmental committee on organophosphate pesticides; and if he will make a statement. [42615]

Mr. Rooker: The report of the interdepartmental committee of officials on organophosphates is being considered by all relevant Ministers. The report and Ministers' conclusions on it will be published in due course.

Quarantine

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received concerning changes to quarantine regulations for domestic animals returning from EU countries. [42669]

Mr. Rooker: The Department has received numerous representations from members of the public and various organisations with an interest in the future of rabies control policy. I expect to receive the report of the Advisory Group on Quarantine in June. It will then be published and a full public consultation held.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many environmental appraisals were produced by the European Commission to accompany proposals presented to the EU Agriculture Council on 16 and 17 February. [42663]

Mr. Rooker: None.

Public Appointments

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when his Department's action plan for increasing the number of women holding public appointments will be published; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [42834]

Mr. Morley: The Department's action plan will be published shortly. Copies will be placed in the Library of the House.

Salt (Labelling)

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to ensure that consumers are informed of salt levels in processed foods. [42925]

Mr. Rooker: The United Kingdom has proposed that EC legislation on nutrition labelling should be amended in order to require most processed food labels to carry quantitative information about sodium content.

Central Science Laboratory

Mr. Charles Clarke: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the decision on the building of the Central Science Laboratory at Sand Hutton, York, relied upon the closure of the CSC Laboratories at Torry or at Norwich. [42998]

Mr. Rooker: No. The decision in 1991 to build the Central Science Laboratory at Sand Hutton, York took no account of the activities at either the Torry or Norwich Food Science Laboratories.

Hospitality

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list planned expenditure on hospitality for April and May, indicating the date, location and purpose of each event. [35123]

Dr. John Cunningham: At this stage, it is not possible to provide detailed figures for total expenditure on hospitality; engagements will obviously continue to arise up to the end of this month.

However, the major events to take place during April and May have resulted from the UK's Presidency of the European Union. I hosted the Informal Council of EU Agriculture Ministers in Newcastle on 10–12 May, and there have been a number of related meetings at official level. Estimated hospitality expenditure for all these events is in the region of £275,000.

Payments

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the deadlines for all payments to be made by his Department where annual claims are required; and if he will give the timescale for payment after receipt of claim for all other schemes. [41608]

Mr. Rooker: The statutory payment deadlines for schemes administered by the Department, which require annual claims to be made, are as set out. (These do not include scheme payments by the Intervention Board).

Arable Area Payments Scheme for cereals, linseed, proteins and set-aside (other than set-aside used for the production of non-food crops): by 31 December of the year of harvest. Payments on oilseeds are made in two instalments; an advance payment by 30 September of the year of harvest followed by a final payment within 60 days of the date of publication of the Regulation fixing the final regional reference amounts in the Official Journal of the European Communities (generally in February or March of the year following harvest). For set-aside land on which non-food crops are grown, the final date for payment is 31 March in the year following harvest.

Grain Legumes Scheme: 60 days after the date of publication of the final amount of aid, which generally takes place during December of the marketing year in question.

Suckler Cow Premium Scheme and the Beef Special Premium Scheme: except in duly justified exceptional circumstances, by 30 June of the year following the calendar year in respect of which the premium is applied for.

Sheep Annual Premium Scheme: by 15 October following the end of the marketing year in respect of which the premium has been granted.

Agri-environment Schemes: no later than 4 months after the end of the period to which the payment relates. In England, the schemes covered by this provision are: Countryside Stewardship, Environmentally Sensitive Areas, Nitrate Sensitive Areas, the Organic Aid Scheme, the Habitat Scheme, the Countryside Access Scheme and the Moorland Scheme. Payment periods vary both within and between these schemes.

Apple and Pear Orchard Grubbing Up Grant Scheme 1998: not later than 4 months after the land has been inspected by MAFF officials to establish that grubbing up of the trees has taken place.

There are two schemes operated by the Ministry for which statutory payment deadlines apply but for which there is no requirement for annual claims. These are, firstly, the Farm Woodland Premium Scheme, for which the first annual payment is made during the twelve months following the payment of the first instalment of grant under the Forestry Commission's Woodland Grant Scheme, and for which subsequent annual payments are made on 16 October in each year or on such other date as my right hon. Friend may decide; and, secondly, the Farm Woodland Scheme, for which annual payments are made on 1 October in each year or on such other date as my right hon. Friend may decide.

The Department also administers a number of other schemes for which statutory payment deadlines have not been laid down.

Green-top Milk

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will ban the sale of green-top milk. [43186]

Mr. Rooker: I will make an announcement in due course, when we have reviewed the public consultation responses in the light of scientific advice.

Fur Breeders (Compensation)

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his plans to ban fur breeding; and what estimate he has made of the cost of compensation to fur breeders. [42968]

Mr. Morley: The Government remain firmly committed to implementing their pre-election pledge to prohibit fur farming as soon as practicable. Such a ban must be implemented in accordance with national and international law and I am currently considering how our intention can best be implemented. An announcement will be made once I have decided how to proceed and there will be public consultation on any proposals for legislation to ban fur farming.

Agricultural Grants

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the cost to his Department of administering grants to agriculture in the last year; and how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time staff were involved. [42438]

Mr. Morley: The information could be provided in the form requested only at disproportionate cost. However, comprehensive information about the Department's activities, including details of the administration costs associated with each of its principal spending programmes for the year ending March 1998, is contained within the 1998 Departmental Report (Cm 3904), copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

Consultation Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the consultation papers published since 1 May 1997 giving the date of publication, closing date for submissions and the number of respondents. [42252]

Mr. Morley: As the list is lengthy, the information has been placed in the Library.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list by county the total number of herds affected by tuberculosis outbreaks in 1997, separately identifying those where no previous outbreak had been recorded for 10 years. [28029]

Mr. Rooker [pursuant to his reply, 6 February 1998, c. 818]: I regret that some of the information given in my earlier reply was inaccurate. I am now able to give corrected, final data showing the number of herds confirmed by MAFF Divisional Veterinary Managers to have been affected by tuberculosis in 1997.

The figures include those herds which continued to be affected with confirmed disease from previous years (ie those to which herd restrictions continued to apply during at least part of 1997) and those newly affected in 1997.

I have written to the hon. Member with the additional information which he requested, and copies of this letter have been placed in the Library of the House.

Food (Salt Levels)

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research he is (a) commissioning and (b) evaluating on the link between high blood pressure and salt levels in food. [42621]

Ms Jowell: I have been asked to reply.

At the request of the Department, the Faculty of Public Health Medicine, in collaboration with the British Heart Foundation, hosted a seminar to bring together a wide range of scientific opinion from academia and industry to review the link between high blood pressure and salt consumption, and to consider whether a reduction in salt consumption for the general population is advisable. A report is expected later this year.

The Department has not commissioned research on the links between high blood pressure and salt levels in food.

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO

Millennium Dome

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what percentage of the construction workers at the Millennium Dome site in Greenwich have suffered from (a) dermatological and (b) pulmonary, including asthmatic, dysfunctions over the last six months; and how many working days have been lost as a result of (a) and (b). [38214]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 7 April 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 6 April 1998, Official Report, column 78.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what plans he has to exhibit United Kingdom engineering excellence in the Millennium Dome; and if he will make a statement. [41103]

Mr. Mandelson: The structure of the Dome is already a clear demonstration of the United Kingdom's excellence in architecture, engineering and design, and stands as an impressive new landmark on London's skyline. The exhibits in, and construction of the content of, the Dome will also provide many opportunities to demonstrate the UK's engineering excellence. In addition, a number of state-of-the art designs from the Millennium products award scheme will be featured inside the Dome.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if the Guidance on Policy Appraisal and the Environment produced by DETR was fully applied in respect of the choice of the air-conditioning system for the Dome. [41775]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 14 May 1998]: The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions (DETR) "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" guidance concerns appraisal of the environmental effects of policies or programmes, not projects. DETR have issued other guidance and advice on green issues that are more relevant to projects. In particular, DETR's "Green Guide for Buyers" recognises that HFCs have a high total equivalent warming impact if they are allowed to escape into the atmosphere and, as a consequence, their use is discouraged where there is a risk of high emissions. High emissions are defined in the voluntary agreement between the refrigeration industry and the Government as those in excess of 10 per cent. loss of initial charge annually from service and/or breakdown. The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) has set a target of 1 per cent. for the chiller units which they have procured for the Dome. Regular independent audits will be carried out to ensure that the target is met.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Minister without Portfolio in what ways the Millennium Dome will demonstrate environmentally friendly British technology. [41930]

Mr. Mandelson: The exhibit in the Dome currently entitled "Living Island" will explore ways in which individuals can protect and enhance their environment. The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) is in regular touch with DTI and DETR on science and technology and environmental matters, and is consulting and seeking advice from a number of environmental groups about the content and nature of this zone. The NMEC aims to include a range of features on the Dome site which demonstrate applications of environmental technology. The Millennium Experience will also feature a number of environmental state of the art products and services from the Millennium products award scheme.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister without Portfolio (1) what fire prevention measures will be installed in the Millennium Dome; [42654]

(2) what assessment he has made of the risk of release of toxic gases from the structure of the Millennium Dome in the event of a fire. [42616]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company's (NMEC) first concern is with the safety of people visiting and working in the Dome. The Company has been liaising closely with Greenwich Council and the London Fire and Civil Defence Authority (LFCDA) on fire prevention and safety issues. It has carried out detailed investigations into the potential effects of fire on the Dome's structure, with particular attention to the cladding material. The use of PTFE coated glass fibre cladding has been accepted both by Greenwich Council and by the LFCDA.

A number of fire prevention and detection measures will be adopted within the Millennium Dome both to minimise the risk of fire and to ensure early warning and the safety of the public in the event of a fire. Sprinkler systems and smoke extractors will be installed to minimise the impact of fire. Detailed studies have been carried out to ensure effective evacuation should this prove necessary.

Millennium Projects

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what steps he is taking to encourage cheap and concessionary travel to major millennium projects and events. [41480]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 13 May 1998]: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) is discussing with transport providers ways of enabling them to sell Dome entrance and travel tickets in attractive packages for visitors travelling from all parts of the United Kingdom.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Focus Groups

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what guidance has been issued to Government departments and executive agencies on the criteria to be employed in the (a) designing, (b) commissioning and (c) interpretation of the findings of focus groups; [43077]

(2) if he will list the (a) companies, (b) organisations and (c) individuals who have supplied Government departments and executive agencies with information from focus groups and the fees paid in each case. [43076]

Dr. David Clark: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Bognor Regis and Littlehampton (Mr. Gibb) on 20 April 1998, Official Report, column 536.

Information on which companies, organisations or individuals have supplied Departments and Executive Agencies with information from focus groups, and the fees paid in each case is not held centrally.

TREASURY

Inflation

16. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the latest figures for inflation; and if he will make a statement. [41690]

Mrs. Liddell: The latest figures are in line with the Government's forecasts for inflation which were published in the Financial Statement and Budget Report (March 1998).

Work (Financial Reward)

17. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he has put in place to increase the financial reward from work. [41691]

Dawn Primarolo: The Budget contained a number of measures to help ensure that work pays, including the Working Families Tax Credit and reform to National Insurance Contributions.

Finance Bills (Draft Regulations)

18. Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when draft regulations will be published in respect of each Finance Bill provision specifying the need for Treasury regulations. [41692]

Dawn Primarolo: Where appropriate, draft regulations will be published throughout the year.

EU Programmes (Administrative Currency)

19. Mr. David Heath: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what will be the administrative currency for the purposes of the common agricultural policy and other European Union programmes following the introduction of the euro. [41693]

Mrs. Liddell: From 1 January 1999, the euro will replace the ecu as the currency of denomination of the EC budget. The Commission has not yet put forward proposals for how currency transactions with the Member States not participating in the single currency should be handled following the introduction of the euro. The Government understand the Commission still has the matter under consideration but that it proposes to set out its views in the Summer.

Tourism Industry (VAT)

21. Mr. Quinn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the imposition of VAT on the United Kingdom tourism industry. [41695]

Dawn Primarolo: Hotel and tourist accommodation has been taxed at the standard rate since VAT started in 1973, in line with other forms of discretionary expenditure.

Euro

22. Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest assessment of the preparedness of British companies for the introduction of the euro. [41696]

Mrs. Liddell: The introduction of the euro in 11 European countries on 1 January 1999 will impact upon many UK businesses. We are committed to ensuring that all businesses are made aware of the need to examine their own position, and that those firms which will be affected are fully equipped to respond. This is a major task. A recent Treasury survey of over 1,300 small and medium firms revealed that only 11 per cent. knew that the euro will start operating in the participating Member States on 1 January next year. Only 5 per cent. had made any specific preparations for this.

This survey will provide a benchmark to help gauge the success of future efforts to increase business preparedness. The Euro Preparations Unit within HM Treasury will play a key role in helping to co-ordinate private and public sector activities to this end.

Individual Savings Accounts

23. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of potential charges made by insurance companies to existing PEP holders for transferring to ISAs. [41697]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: There are no proposals to allow existing PEP investments to be transferred to individual savings accounts. PEPs in existence at 5 April 1999 can remain tax free, outside the ISA, under the existing rules.

35. Mr. Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from the finance industry regarding the new proposals for ISAs and the use of benchmarking for financial products. [41709]

Mrs. Liddell: The Treasury published a consultation document on 18 May. The document invites contributions from all interested parties. During the pre-consultation period, the Treasury sought the views of a number of firms and organisations on certain aspects of the proposals.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Paymaster General expects to reply to the letter of 9 December 1997 from the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed on behalf of Mr. D. N. Peck of Swallhook, 19 Mariners View, Amble, about individual savings accounts. [42868]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: I have done so today. I very much regret that the right hon. Gentleman's letter was mislaid by the Inland Revenue.

Pensioners' Fuel Bills

24. Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he has introduced to reduce pensioners' fuel bills. [41698]

Dawn Primarolo: In his July 1997 Budget, the Chancellor announced the reduction in VAT on fuel and power for domestic users from 8 per cent. to 5 per cent. This cut took effect from 1 September 1997. VAT on the costs of installing energy saving insulation materials where those costs are funded by certain grant schemes reduced from 17½ per cent. to 5 per cent. This will allow more pensioner and low-income households to improve the insulation of their homes and helps to reduce their fuel bills. This tax cut will take effect from 1 July. The Chancellor also announced that the Gas Levy would be cut to zero with effect from April 1998. The levy distorted the energy market and meant higher prices for consumers.

In his November 1997 Pre-Budget report, the Chancellor announced the introduction of a new Winter Fuel Payment giving additional help for all pensioners with their fuel bills. Last winter, every pensioner household received £20, with the poorest pensioner households receiving £50, to help with their fuel bills. Nearly ten million payments have been made to pensioners in seven million households.

Windfall Levy

25. Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on his policy of spending the windfall levy on an extension of the welfare-to-work programme. [41699]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor announced a major extension of the Welfare to Work initiative in his recent Budget. We will provide additional help to young people, the long-term unemployed, lone parents, people with disabilities and partners of the unemployed. This commitment has been welcomed by employers, unemployed people, the voluntary sector and the wider public. The Chancellor's and Secretary of State for Northern Ireland's initiative to expand the New Deal for the long-term unemployed in Northern Ireland, as part of a wider strategy for investment and enterprise, has been particularly welcomed in the Province.

EMU

26. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of economic and monetary union on the interest rates in participating states. [41700]

Mrs. Liddell: Official interest rates in the euro area will be a matter for the European Central Bank (ECB). The primary objective of the ECB is to achieve price stability in the euro area.

27. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the early entry of the United Kingdom into the economic and monetary union. [41701]

Mr. Gordon Brown: I regularly receive representations from business and other organisations about economic and monetary union.

Capital Gains Tax

28. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the yield from the capital gains tax changes resulting from his recent Budget. [41702]

Dawn Primarolo: The structural changes to capital gains tax are broadly revenue neutral. They are expected to have a negligible effect in 1998–99; to cost £25 million 1999–2000; and to yield £25 million in 2000–01.

Saving

29. Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he has taken to encourage individuals to save. [41703]

Mr. Darling: It is this Government's policy to encourage individuals to save. We have given the Bank of England responsibility for setting interest rates to achieve the Government's inflation target. This, together with the Code For Fiscal Stability, will ensure economic stability and the right conditions in which individuals will be encouraged to save with confidence.

In addition, we have introduced plans for the Individual Savings Account specifically to develop and extend the savings habit. We re also consulting on the introduction of voluntary CAT standards for ISAs to help ordinary people save with confidence. CAT standards will focus on reasonable cost, easy access and fair terms.

36. Mr. Prior: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his forecast for the savings ratio over the next two years. [41710]

Mrs. Liddell: A modest cyclical fall in the saving ratio is expected over the next two years. Over the longer term, the introduction of ISAs and our policies to promote economic growth and stability will increase the incentive to save for investment.

Working Families Tax Credit

30. Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the working families tax credit. [41704]

Mr. Gordon Brown: The Working Families Tax Credit has been welcomed by a wide range of individuals and organisations.

Charity Taxation

31. Mr. Fraser: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Government intend to publish their consultation document in respect of the review of charity taxation. [41705]

Dawn Primarolo: We are planning to publish the consultation document for the Review of Charities' Taxation in the next few weeks.

Knowledge-based Industries

32. Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received regarding the introduction of new tax incentives to stimulate knowledge-based industries. [41706]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: The Government are currently consulting on how the UK can improve its research and development performance. The period of consultation runs until 30 June. The results of the consultation will inform preparations for the next Budget and the DTI's Competitiveness White Paper to be published later in the year.

Banks (Supervision)

33. Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to improve the supervision of banks. [41707]

Mrs. Liddell: The regime for prudential supervision of banks is kept under constant review, both at home and internationally, in fora such as the European Union and the Basle Committee on Banking Supervision. When changes are needed, to reflect the nature of the markets in which banks operate, they are made. As my hon. Friend will be aware, we have announced major reforms to the structure of financial supervision in the UK. On 1 June, responsibility for the supervision of banks will transfer from the Bank of England to the Financial Services Authority.

Third-world Debt

34. Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to reduce the debt burden of the poorest countries. [41708]

Mrs. Liddell: Debt relief was discussed at the G8 foreign and finance ministers meeting on 9 May and the G8 Summit in Birmingham last weekend. The G8 agreed to encourage all eligible countries to adopt the policy measures necessary to embark on the process of securing a sustainable exit to their debt burdens by the year 2000, and agreed that their export credit agencies would seek to ensure their export credits to Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPCs) would be used only for productive expenditure.

The Chancellor's latest initiative has concerned the debt burden of countries that have recently emerged from conflict. The communiqué issued after the Birmingham summit recognised that the present framework of the HIPC initiative was not able to provide debt relief quickly enough to post-conflict countries. These countries have large arrears to the International Financial Institutions (IFIs) and require special assistance in the wake of long conflicts. The G8 urged the IMF and World Bank to look at the possibilities of helping these post-conflict countries—which include Burundi, Democratic Republic of Congo, Liberia and Rwanda—by finding mechanisms for dealing with their arrears payments to the IFIs.

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations he has received about third-world debt; and how much money has been sent to him by people making such representations. [41677]

Mr. Gordon Brown: Since 1 January 1997, the Treasury has received over 12,000 letters and postcards on the subject of third-world debt. To date, more than £7,000 has been sent in as part of these campaigns.

Motor Fuels (Northern Ireland)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reasons the Financial Secretary to the Treasury declined to meet the officers of the Petrol Retailers Association to discuss the illegal importation of petroleum products into Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [42885]

Dawn Primarolo: Both the Chancellor and I have received representations from the Petrol Retailers Association via Northern Ireland MPs. These representations cover both the difference in the selling price of petrol and diesel in Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland, and the illegal importations which are taking place as a result. The letters have received replies explaining the measures which are being taken to counter the threat posed by this illegal trade.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the amounts of motor fuels by type sold in Northern Ireland in each quarter of 1997 and the first quarter of 1998. [42883]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is given in the table:

Year	Deliveries tonnes Leaded petrol	Unleaded petrol	Diesel
1997
Quarter 1	35,515	88,670	91,479
Quarter 2	33,446	92,730	96,101
Quarter 3	25,181	82,349	76,361
Quarter 4	22,570	85,791	73,975
1998
Quarter 1	18,749	78,641	66,827

Note:
Figures supplied by Department of Trade and Industry

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what investigations his Department has carried out into illegal importing of petroleum products from the Irish Republic into Great Britain in recent months. [42886]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Customs and Excise are deploying resources and actively mounting investigations against those involved in the illegal importation of petroleum products into Northern Ireland to counter the threat posed to the revenue and to the Northern Ireland business community. HM Customs and Excise are taking the lead on this issue but are acting in conjunction with other authorities, including the Royal Ulster Constabulary, to make seizures of oil tankers and vehicles carrying oil tanks filled with illegally imported fuel for resale. Wherever possible, cases are progressed with a view to criminal prosecution of the individuals concerned.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he plans to raise the issue of the illegal importation of petroleum products into Northern Ireland at the ECOFIN meeting on 19 May; and if he will make a statement. [42882]

Dawn Primarolo: The Chancellor did not raise the issue of the illegal importation of petroleum products into Northern Ireland at the Ecofin meeting on 19 May.

Both the Government and HM Customs and Excise are aware of the situation with the illegal importation of petroleum products into Northern Ireland for resale and recognise that it is a serious problem which disadvantages legitimate traders. HM Customs and Excise are deploying resources and actively mounting investigations against those involved to counter the threat posed to the revenue and to the Northern Ireland business community.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with the Government of the Irish Republic on the illegal importation of petroleum products into Northern Ireland. [42884]

Dawn Primarolo: The illegal importation of petroleum products into Northern Ireland for resale is a problem of which the Government are aware. No offences are taking place within the Republic of Ireland where the fuel is sold legally and purchased duty paid. HM Customs and Excise are deploying resources and actively mounting investigations against those involved to counter the threat posed to the revenue and to the Northern Ireland business community. HM Customs and Excise are taking the lead on this issue but are acting in conjunction with other authorities, including the Royal Ulster Constabulary, to make seizures of oil tankers and vehicles carrying oil tanks filled with illegally imported fuel for resale. Wherever possible, cases are progressed with a view to criminal prosecution of the individuals concerned. Where inquiries have extended to the Republic of Ireland jurisdiction requests have been made by HM Customs and Excise under the Convention for Mutual Assistance between Member States of the EC to the Irish Customs Investigation Branch for discovery of documentation at premises of oils suppliers in the Republic of Ireland to support intended criminal proceedings in Northern Ireland.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the meetings of the IMF Interim Committee and World Bank/IMF Development Committee he attended in Washington in April. [43585]

Mr. Gordon Brown: On 16 April, I attended the IMF's Interim Committee meeting. I also attended the IMF/World Bank Development Committee meeting with the Secretary of State for Development on 17 April.

One of the key issues we discussed was how to strengthen the architecture of the international system in the light of the Asian crisis. In my speech to the Interim Committee, I placed particular emphasis on the importance of greater openness and transparency to long-term economic stability, and I identified six themes.

First, enhancing transparency of data. I noted that we need to tighten up and enforce the IMF's Special Data Dissemination Standards (SDDS).

Secondly, promoting openness in policy making. I welcomed the progress made in agreeing the Code of Good Practice on Fiscal Transparency and recommended that it be supplemented by a manual to provide more guidance on how to construct and present fiscal policies. I also proposed that the IMF should, in consultation with the World Bank and the BIS, prepare a code of Good Practice on Financial and Monetary policy.

Thirdly, greater transparency by the IMF in providing advice on member countries. I proposed that we should do more to encourage countries to publish the outcome of their Article IV's through Press Information Notices (PINs).

Fourthly, exploring ways to improve the IMF's own accountability. I noted that it is essential for the IMF to perform its responsibilities in an open and transparent way that enhances public confidence. I proposed that we should look again at the option of establishing a new full-time evaluation unit which would report on the IMF's performance both to the Fund's shareholders and to the public.

Fifthly, strengthening surveillance of national financial systems. I noted that the IMF's surveillance function should extend beyond its traditional role of looking at macro-economic policy and in particular it should look at the vulnerability of national financial systems. This will involve looking at financial sector regulation, corporate governance and legal issues. The Fund will need to cooperate closely with the World Bank, the Regional Development Banks and the Basle Committee in this area.

Sixthly, enhancing the role of the International Financial Institutions and cooperation between them. I proposed that consideration should be given to the creation of a new joint department of the IMF and World Bank to deal with financial sector issues in all member countries. This Department would need to work closely with other international agencies and groups. Its tasks would be to help the IMF in its regular surveillance, to support the Bank in its analyses of countries' structural policies and to support both the Fund and the Bank in the advice they give to countries on financial sector restructuring.

We also discussed Capital Account Liberalisation. I noted that free capital flows can bring benefits to all countries in terms of increased productivity and growth. However, capital account liberalisation needs to be backed by measures designed to put the appropriate supervisory and regulatory practices in place. It must also be properly sequenced.

I noted that the IMF is the organisation best placed to oversee orderly and sustainable capital account liberalisation and that we should press ahead with the Amendment to the IMF's Articles of Agreement to give it jurisdiction over the capital account.

The discussions in Washington at the Interim and Development Committees on these themes contributed to the G7 report on Strengthening the Architecture of the Global Financial System, which was published at the Birmingham Summit.

Additionally, we discussed at the Interim Committee the need to take action at an international level to promote fairness and relieve poverty. I stressed that we should not allow our discussion of Asia to obscure the important work that is still needed in the poorer countries. I welcomed the Fund's recognition of the need to promote high quality growth that results in a permanent reduction in poverty, greater equality of economic opportunity, and respects the environment. In this context, I welcomed the completion of the external evaluators' review of the Fund's ESAF programme and agreed with the external evaluator's view that IMF programmes cannot be viewed in isolation from the rest of the development process.

There has been some significant and commendable progress with the Mauritius Mandate for the HIPC Debt Initiative which I launched a year ago. I emphasised to the international community the importance of ensuring that progress is maintained so that the Mauritius Mandate targets are met and we have met our objectives by the millennium.

Copies of my speeches and the Communiques of these meetings have been put in the Library of the House.

The issues discussed at the Development Committee meeting were outlined in a Parliamentary Question answered by the Secretary of State for International Development, on 29 April 1998. Official Report, column 153.

Married Couples

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the impact measures contained in his March Budget Statement will have on married couples. [41689]

Dawn Primarolo: Married couples will, on average, see an increase in their disposable income of about £100 a year by October 1999 from the direct tax and benefit changes in the March 1998 Budget.

Child Benefit

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the receipts generated by taxing child benefit at the higher rate where (a) one parent pays tax at the higher rate and (b) both parents pay tax at the higher rate and both pay tax on the child benefit. [42703]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 19 May 1998]: Information for 1998–99 is given in the table.

£ million

	Yield in a full year
Lone parents or couples with children, receiving Child Benefit, where:
(a) one parent (but not both) is liable at the higher rate of tax	425
(b) both parents are liable at the higher rate of tax and both pay higher rate tax on the full amount of child benefit	35

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many households receive child benefit where (a) one parent pays tax at the higher rate and (b) both parents pay tax at the higher rate. [42702]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 19 May 1998]: Under the current system in 1998–99, there are estimated to be about 1 million lone parents and couples with children who receive Child Benefit and where only one parent is liable at the higher rate of income tax. There are an estimated 50,000 couples with children who receive Child Benefit and where both parents are liable at the higher rate of income tax.

UK Debt Management Office

Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the UK Debt Management Office will be publishing its business plan for 1998–99. [43583]

Mrs. Liddell: I have today placed copies of the Debt Management Office's (DMO) Corporate Overview and Business Plan in the Libraries of both Houses. Copies are also available from the DMO.

Pensions Mis-selling

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the progress by pensions firms in providing redress to the victims of mis-selling. [43584]

Mrs. Liddell: The table shows the progress made in the period up to the end of April 1998 by the 41 firms whose results I have been publishing in the public interest. Most of these firms have continued to make good progress.

Last May, the regulators published figures showing by 31 March 1997 only 15 per cent. of cases had been resolved. I am pleased to say that the latest reports suggest that the largest firms, which together account for almost 85 per cent. of cases, have now dealt with about 74 per cent. of cases.

When I met the Chairmen and senior executives of pensions firms a year ago, I made clear that I would publish information monthly about the progress being made by each firm toward resolving their cases. In my statement in the House on 18 November 1997, Official Report, columns 155–57, I said that I would remove from this list the name of any firm which achieved its target for resolving priority cases.

Information provided by firms to PIA indicates that several firms are close to achieving the targets set for them. If subsequent PIA inspections show that these initial indications are correct, then the firms' names will be removed from the list.

However, this does not mean that their work will be over. The regulators will continue to monitor firms, even after their targets have been met, to ensure that they follow through on offers of redress in a timely manner and establish the arrangements necessary to honour guarantees. I am asking the regulators to keep me informed.

HEALTH

Nurses

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had about retaining the title nurse; and if he will make a statement. [42994]

Mr. Milburn: In August 1997, we commissioned an independent review of the Nurses, Midwives and Health Visitors Act 1979, which is due to report this year. This is one of the issues the review team has raised during their consultation, and we await their recommendations with interest.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to commission research on the effect of changes in (a) staffing levels and (b) staffing mix in NHS trusts on nursing standards. [43008]

Mr. Milburn: In 1996 the Department commissioned a programme of research which focused particularly on skill mix with an overall spend of £3 million. This includes research on new roles and new responsibilities in nursing and medicine, and explores the implications of developments within the clinical team, as well as skill mix in primary care, diagnostic imaging centres and hospital teams. Many of these projects are now close to completion.

In addition to this research, there are plans for a major new research programme on human resources. Proposed themes for this research programme include skill mix as one of the five key areas. The tendering process is likely to begin in September and precise details are still under discussion.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 11 May 1998, Official Report, column 41, if he will list those NHS trusts which have not yet designated a named officer responsible for checking registration before applicants take up a post. [43013]

Mr. Milburn: This information is not available centrally. The Department has recently issued guidance on this matter, but it is for employers to ensure that suitable arrangements are in place.

Health Care Assistants

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has given to NHS trusts on the types of work to be carried out by health care assistants and on which of their duties should be supervised by a registered nurse. [43011]

Mr. Milburn: It is the responsibility of employers to determine the duties that staff carry out. The United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting gives guidance to registered practitioners on their professional responsibilities for supervision.

NHS Research and Development Funds

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce greater accountability into the distribution of NHS research and development funds; and if he will make a statement. [43012]

Ms Jowell: The new system for allocating National Health Service research and development (R&D) funds has introduced greater accountability. R&D support funding for NHS providers is now distributed through a competitive process with bids assessed against published criteria, and successful providers obliged to account regularly to the NHS Executive for the use of these funds. The NHS Executive has in place, and will continue to develop, mechanisms for identifying and prioritising R&D activity which is best funded directly by the Executive itself. The new system will be the subject of evaluation. The Department's Director of Research and Development plans to publish an annual report on Department of Health and NHS R&D later in the year.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list, for each NHS region, the proportion of NHS research and development funding spent on primary care research for each of the past five years. [43009]

Ms Jowell: The research and development (R&D) support funding allocated to primary care led providers in each National Health Service region during 1998–99 is set out in the table. This is the first year under the new R&D funding system that allocations have been made directly to primary care practices. In addition to research carried out by primary care providers, other providers within each NHS region spend some of their R&D support funding on primary care research, and the Department and NHS Executive also centrally commission primary care research projects for the benefit of the NHS as a whole. The total such R&D spending was estimated for 1996–97 at £31 million. Information on the total R&D spend on primary care by NHS region is not currently available.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to ensure that more research and development funding is spent on primary care research; and if he will make a statement. [43010]

Ms Jowell: We gave a commitment in November 1997 to increase spending on primary care research and development (R&D) to around £50 million within five years, and the recommendations of the National Working Group Report on R&D in Primary Care, published at that time, are now being implemented. A Regional Director of Research and Development within the National Health Service Executive has been identified to lead the development of primary care research in the NHS. Primary care practices now have access to R&D funding on the same basis as NHS trusts. Primary care practices and other providers are being actively encouraged to bid for funding for primary care research, and the NHS Executive is promoting primary care research and developing capacity through new research programmes, the establishment of new national training awards, and through nationally commissioned research programmes.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the letters from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton dated 12 February, 18 March and 16 April with regard to Darren Stott of 35 Wisteria Road. [42898]

Mr. Boateng: I replied to my right hon. Friend today following receipt of the original letter on 12 May 1998.

Non-career Civil Servants

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many non-career civil servants have been appointed to his Department since 1 May 1997. [25853]

Ms Jowell: Since 1 May 1997, 137 staff on fixed term contracts have been and are still employed by the Department. In addition, we have employed 123 casuals who are still employed, and 85 casuals who have left. These figures do not include the National Health Service Estates Agency. We have also employed two special advisers.

Hepatitis C

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of people with haemophilia in the United Kingdom infected with the hepatitis C virus; and if he will make a statement. [29003]

Ms Jowell: The Department estimates that around 4,000 people with haemophilia were infected with hepatitis C through blood products prior to the introduction of viral inactivation processes in 1985.

The latest figure quoted by the Haemophilia Society shows that they now assess the total number of haemophiliacs infected with hepatitis C at 4,800.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many meetings have been requested with his Department's Ministers by (a) Labour and (b) Conservative hon. Members; and how many meetings have been granted in each category. [31288]

Ms Jowell: All members of the Department's Ministerial team regularly meet hon. Members from all sides of the House. Records of Ministerial engagements are not kept in the format requested and the detailed information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Faulty Hip Replacements

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on how many faulty hip replacements have been identified in the North West in each of the last 10 years. [31029]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is not held centrally. The successful outcome of a hip replacement operation is likely to be based on an interaction between the surgeon's skill, the artificial joint and the patient's medical condition. Figures showing the number of revision operations carried out in the North West Region between 1991–92 and 1995–96 are shown in the table, but because we do not know when the original hip was implanted, the figures are not an indication of early failure.

Year	Revision operations
1991–92	507
1992–93	515
1993–94	513
1994–95	505
1995–96	529

37.3, 38.3, 39.3, 46.3, 47.3, 48.3

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to establish a national register of patients who have received hip and other joint replacements implants; and if he will make a statement. [31375]

Mr. Milburn: We are considering various options for monitoring orthopaedic implants and systems for controlling the introduction of new implants. A national register is one option under consideration.

Contraception Devices

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines his Department has issued to ensure that contraception devices have clear information on their use and rate of success. [32434]

Ms Jowell: Contraceptive devices which fall under the remit of the Medicines Control Agency are subject to European Directive 92/27/EEC. This Directive details medicine labelling and patient information leaflet regulations. Mention of efficacy levels in these patient information leaflets or licensed product information is considered promotional material and not permitted.

It is not generally appropriate for the Government to guide industry on how to communicate about its products. We would, however, expect manufacturers to follow the general principles of ensuring communication is clear, comprehensive and explicit to ensure potential users can make appropriate choices.

Diabetes

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list by region the number of NHS bed days taken up by patients with diabetic foot complications in each of the last three years for which figures are available; [41139]

(2) if he will list by region the number of (a) major and (b) below the knee amputations carried out in the NHS as a consequence of diabetes in each of the last three years for which figures are available; [41135]

(3) if he will list by region the number of acute medical admissions as a result of diabetic foot complications in each of the last three years for which figures are available; [41138]

(4) what progress his Department has made in meeting the 1989 St. Vincent's Declaration target in respect of half-limb amputations due to diabetic gangrene; [41137]

(5) if he will list by region the number of NHS specialist diabetic foot clinics; [41136]

(6) if he will list by region the number of recorded diabetic foot ulcers treated by the NHS in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [41140]

Mr. Milburn: We are committed to improving health services for people with diabetes. The 1995 report of the St. Vincent Joint Task Force for Diabetes made recommendations about good clinical and management practice in eleven key areas. The Department issued service guidance to the National Health Service in November 1997 on "Key features of a good diabetes service" (Health Service Guidelines HSG(97)45). We have also commissioned clinical guidelines and other clinical effectiveness materials for diabetes, which we expect to be completed by the end of 1999. These will cover prevention and treatment of diabetic foot complications.

The Department welcomes the recent launch of the "Focus on Feet" campaign by the British Diabetic Association, the Royal College of Nursing and the Society of Chiropodists and Podiatrists. We hope that it will be successful in raising awareness of the importance of preventative foot care for people with diabetes.

Information is not collected centrally on the number of NHS specialist diabetic foot clinics. The available information on NHS in-patient treatment has been placed in the Library. It is based on episodes of individual treatment by consultants.

Asthma

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each local authority the total cost and the cost per head of treating asthma and other breathing-related illnesses for each year since 1992. [41946]

Mr. Boateng: I refer the hon. Member to the reply to the right hon. Member for East Devon (Sir Peter Emery) on 22 July 1997, Official Report, column 569. This gave the available information on the costs of drugs dispensed for the treatment of asthma in England by family health services authority for the years 1993 to 1995 and by health authority for 1996 (the most recent year for which data are available). Some of the drugs in question may be used for the treatment of other conditions.

Information on the other costs to the National Health Service is not available centrally for individual conditions. However, a discussion document "Burdens of Disease" was issued in October 1996 which illustrated one approach to estimating the burdens of particular diseases on the NHS. This suggested that in 1992–93 the total of other, non-prescribing costs of the NHS services for treating asthma was of the order of £150 million.

Arachnoiditis

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the risk of myelography causing arachnoiditis; and if he will make a statement. [42391]

Ms Jowell: Any injury to the arachnoid membrane carries a risk of arachnoiditis. However, all medicinal products, such as the contrast agents used in myelography, are subject to stringent assessment of safety, quality and efficacy prior to being licensed. They are closely monitored by the Medicines Control Agency after licensing to detect any previously unrecognised adverse effects or any change in the balance of risks and benefits.

National Blood Authority

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to ensure that the present terms and conditions of staff employed by the National Blood Authority remain in place. [42678]

Mr. Boateng: The terms and conditions of National Blood Authority (NBA) staff are a matter for negotiation between the NBA, their staff and their staff representatives. The new chairman of the NBA, Mr. Fogden, will ensure that negotiations are taken forward with staff and their representatives.

NHS Premises (Safety)

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are taken to ensure that National Health Service trusts have adequate arrangements for recording accidents on National Health Service premises; what encouragement is given to staff to report accidents; and what steps the National Health Service Executive takes to monitor the safety performance of National Health Service trusts. [42461]

Mr. Milburn: The Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1995 require certain types of accidents to be reported to the Health and Safety Executive. The National Health Service Executive has issued guidance emphasising the importance of effective accident and incident reporting systems for NHS employers, and outlining the characteristics of a good incident reporting system. Ensuring staff are encouraged to report incidents is a matter for NHS trusts. The safety performance of NHS trusts is the responsibility of NHS trust chief executives and their boards.

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list his duties in respect of ensuring the safety of (a) staff employed in the National Health Service, and (b) patients and visitors to National Health Service premises. [42464]

Mr. Milburn: We place a very high priority on the safety of National Health Service staff and of patients and visitors to NHS premises. The Management of Health and Safety at Work Regulations 1992 place duties on all employers to assess systematically all workplace risks, and to take all reasonably practicable action to minimise those risks. Chief executives and their boards are statutorily responsible for ensuring the safety of staff, patients and visitors.

The NHS Security Manual gives advice to all trusts on the use of security measures and the NHS Executive continues to support this guidance by regularly publishing best practice on specific aspects of security.

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if National Health Service trusts are required to include reports on their health and safety record in their annual reports. [42463]

Mr. Milburn: The National Health Service Trust Manual for Accounts recommends that trusts should include information on health and safety performance and occupational health in their annual reports. Guidance to trusts on health and safety also commends the inclusion of information on health and safety performance in their annual reports.

NHS Staff

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many working days were lost through sickness, ill health or injury by National Health Service staff in the last year for which figures are available; and at what estimated total cost. [42459]

Mr. Milburn: The numbers of working days lost through sickness, ill health or injury in the National Health Service are not currently collected centrally.

Occupational Health

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what percentage of National Health Service staff in each region have access to an occupational health service. [42462]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is not collected centrally. National Health Service trusts and health authorities are responsible for ensuring that their staff have access to an occupational health service.

EU Health Council

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many environmental appraisals were produced by the European Commission to accompany proposals presented to the EU Health Council on 1 May. [42668]

Ms Jowell: None. These are not normally required for proposals for action in the field of public health.

Health Improvement Programmes

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if health authorities will be obliged to consult voluntary sector service providers as partner agencies in the formation of health improvement programmes; and if he will make a statement. [42892]

Mr. Milburn: We shall expect health authorities to involve the full range of local partner organisations, including voluntary sector organisations, in the development of health improvement programmes.

Coeliac Disease

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will introduce legislation to improve food labelling to assist sufferers of coeliac disease in identifying which processed foods are gluten free. [29921]

Mr. Rooker: I have been asked to reply.

Yes. The Food Labelling Regulations 1996 will be amended on 1 July this year to require ingredients of foods identified as "starch" and "modified starch" to indicate their specific vegetable origin where they may contain gluten.

We are also promoting agreement at international level on food labelling rules which will identify gluten containing ingredients whenever they are used in processed foodstuffs.

Blood Products

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths have occurred in each of the last five years as a result of blood transfusions and faulty blood products; and if he will list the causes of death. [42864]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 19 May 1998]: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from John Fox to Mr. John Maples, dated 20 May 1998:

In the absence of the Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent question on deaths which have occurred as a result of blood transfusions and faulty blood products.

The table below shows the numbers of deaths registered in England and Wales with either (a) an underlying cause of blood transfusion or contaminated blood products or (b) where blood transfusion or contaminated blood products were mentioned on the death certificate as contributing to the death.

	Blood transfusion		Contaminated blood products
	Underlying cause	Other mentions	Underlying cause	Other mentions

1994	3	1	3	4
1995	1	1	1	3
1996	2	13	0	1
1997	2	6	1	8

Note:
The figures for 1993–96 are the deaths that occurred in these years, whereas the figures for 1997 are the deaths registered in 1997

Water Fluoridation

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish and place in the Library the detailed statistical basis for the statement by the Minister for Public Health on 6 May 1998, Official Report, column 700, that more than two-thirds of the public support the fluoridation of water; and if he will publish the particulars of all the areas where consultation has taken place, the identity of the sponsors of the consultation, details of the questions asked, including information as to whether there was any public education of those interviewed, details of the representations received and precise information as to sample sizes. [41982]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 18 May 1998]: Since 1980, 5 nationwide opinion polls have been undertaken which included the question "Do you think fluoride should be added to water if it can reduce tooth decay?"

The results are shown in the table.

Percentages

1985	Gallup	71	17	11
1987	Gallup	76	15	9
1992	NOP	79	15	6
1997	NOP	69	18	13

As is the usual practice, the respondents to the surveys were selected according to a systematic probability sample designed to be representative of all adults in Great Britain.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress being made towards equipment in the (a) Mid-Essex Hospital Trust, (b) Mid-Essex Community and Mental Health Trust and (c) Essex Health Authority areas being millennium compliant; and when he expects the work to be completed. [42895]

Mr. Milburn: All health authorities and National Health Service trusts are working in line with national policy and guidelines set out in Executive Letters EL(96)80 and EL(97)59 and their accompanying guidelines Health Service Guidelines (97)40, and Health Service Circular 1998/091 to address the Year 2000 problem. Copies of the guidelines are available in the Library.

HSC 1998/091 is the latest guidance and states that all chief executives of health authorities and NHS trusts should submit new interim returns to the NHS Executive's Regional Offices on 30 June and 30 September 1998, and quarterly reports throughout 1999; ensure that by 31 December 1998 they have identified and resourced effective solutions for all Year 2000 problems that would otherwise compromise the safety of patients and staff, and the continuity of services; and to ensure that by 30 September 1999 all parts of the NHS are fully prepared with compliant equipment or effective contingency plans in place.

Such information as is available on specific trusts will be placed in the Library shortly. I shall arrange for a copy to be sent to the hon. Member.

Hip Replacements

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to seek reimbursement from manufacturers for those hip replacement prostheses which have been subject to early failures. [31378]

Mr. Milburn: The question of whether to seek reimbursement would depend on the particular circumstances. In respect of the early loosening associated with the Capital Hip implant, the manufacturer, 3M Health Care, has agreed to bear the full costs of identifying, assessing and treating individual patients.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the relationship between the reliability of hip replacement prostheses and their purchase prices; [31374]

(2) what assessment he has made of the reliability record of currently available hip replacement prostheses; and what plans he has to issue guidance to the general public on this issue. [31377]

Mr. Milburn: Copies of an Effective Health Care Bulletin on total hip replacement are available in the Library. This review found that some of the cheaper established implants had the lowest long-term failure rates over 10–20 years follow-up.

Two further systematic reviews have been commissioned through our health technology assessment programme: one to review the effectiveness and cost-effectiveness of total hip replacement prostheses, and the other to review the factors influencing outcomes and costs of hip replacement surgery. Reports are expected later this year.

Interstitial Cystitis

Miss Begg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to raise awareness amongst health professionals of interstitial cystitis, with particular reference to problems in diagnosis. [28113]

Ms Jowell: This is a matter for the professions; we have no current plans to do so. Interstitial cystitis is a rare chronic inflammatory disease of the bladder affecting mainly women. Diagnosis is often difficult and little is known about its cause or the most effective treatment. There are already a number of reviews and articles on the subject which have been published in the professional journals.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Consultation Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the consultation papers published since 1 May 1997 giving the date of publication, closing date for submissions and the number of respondents. [42250]

Dr. Howells: I have placed in the Library a table showing the consultation papers produced by the Department of Education and Employment since 1 May 1997.

Key State Results

Mr. Dorrell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many schools did not submit (a) papers and (b) results for (i) the key stage 2 tests and (ii) the key stage 3 tests in 1997. [40940]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 7 May 1998]: Twenty-three maintained mainstream schools did not submit 1997 key stage 2 national curriculum assessment results, and two maintained mainstream schools did not submit 1997 key stage 3 national curriculum assessment results. It is not possible to determine the number of special schools which did not submit results, as it is impossible to differentiate between those schools whose pupils were all disapplied from the national curriculum assessments, and therefore had no results to return, and those schools which chose not to return results. Participation by independent schools in the national curriculum assessment test is voluntary, so they have not been included in this analysis. It is not possible to differentiate between results and papers.

Braille Certificates

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will require examination boards to produce certificates in Braille for blind candidates. [42056]

Dr. Howells: The Department has no powers to require awarding bodies to produce certificates in Braille at present. However, I would expect awarding bodies to consider sympathetically requests for such certificates from blind candidates.

Special Education Provision

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the Teacher Training Agency-funded higher education providers that deal with special education needs in the south west; and if he will make a statement. [42173]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Teacher Training Agency does not hold information about the higher education institutions that currently deal with special educational needs in the south west. The following are the providers in the south-west which submitted bids to the Teacher Training Agency for in-service training provision which included elements of provision relating to SEN and who will receive funding for 1998–99:

The University of Bath;

Bath College of Higher Education;

Cheltenham and Gloucester College of Higher Education;

University College of St. Mark and St. John;

The University of Plymouth;

The University of the West of England.

I understand that the Teacher Training Agency reached its decisions on the allocation of the relevant funding on the basis of competitive bids from providers to deliver in-service training for teachers judged according to their quality in meeting identified national priorities. The Agency has issued contracts for the academic year 1998–99. It will be considering shortly the basis of the interim bidding rounds in respect of 1999–2000 and 2000–01.

Autism

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the number of schoolchildren with autism in each year since 1992. [42798]

Ms Estelle Morris: It is for local education authorities to identify children with special educational needs and plan provision to meet expected demand. The national figures which the Department collects on the number of children with SEN are not disaggregated by type of special need. The National Autistic Society has estimated that 5,200 school aged children have Kanner's or classic autism; other children will have autistic spectrum disorders, often in association with other types of SEN.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what assessment he has made of the Lovaas intensive behaviour therapy; [42793]

(2) what research his Department has commissioned into the (i) causes of autism, (ii) the treatment methods offered by local education authorities and (iii) the effectiveness of different treatments. [42795]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Department has commissioned a review of the research findings on educational programmes for children with autism. A report will be published in the near future. It will cover research into the Lovaas programme. The report will inform the design of research the Local Government Association is commissioning, following discussion with DfEE, into the comparative outcomes from a number of these educational interventions.

Higher Education (Rural Areas)

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to improve the availability of higher and further education to residents in rural areas. [42581]

Dr. Howells: Our proposals for encouraging lifelong learning for people throughout the UK, including rural communities, are set out in the consultation paper "The Learning Age". Higher education is available in England from over 100 higher education institutions, including the Open University, and from many further education colleges. The Further Education Funding Council has a duty to secure the provision of adequate and sufficient facilities for further education.

Higher Education Students

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the maximum grant and loan available to higher education students in 1998–99 will be; what the maximum loan available in future years will be; and if he will make a statement. [42374]

Dr. Howells: Students living away from home and studying outside London will normally be entitled to a maximum of £3,545 by way of grant and loan in 1998–99. New entrants to higher education in 1998–99 will be eligible for £810 grant and £2,735 loan. This reflects the transitional arrangements for student support that have been put in place for 1998–99 in preparation for the new student support system, based on 100 per cent. income-contingent loans, being introduced for 1999–2000 and beyond.

Students who are already receiving mandatory awards in 1997–98, together with those new entrants who are exceptionally being treated as continuing students in 1998–99, will be eligible for £1,810 grant and £1,735 loan. The amount of grant available can be enhanced by certain additional allowances, such as the disabled students allowance or the dependants allowance. The rates for 1998–99 were announced in December, and a memorandum giving full details of these rate was placed in the Library.

The maximum loan rates for 1999–2000 will be announced later in the year, in line with normal practice.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) mature and (b) regular students took up higher education places in (i) 1996 and (ii) 1997; and how many in each case are predicted to do so in 1998, in (1) England, (2) Wales and (3) the UK. [42417]

Dr. Howells: The information for 1996 and 1997 is given in the table:

Home entrants (thousands) to HE courses in higher education institutions

	1996–97		1997–98[1]
Country of study	Young	Mature	Young	Mature
England	222.1	290.5	234.1	293.1
Wales	17.7	18.5	17.6	16.8
UK	276.2	339.1	290.1	342.9

[1] Provisional.

Mature students are defined as postgraduates aged 25 and over, and undergraduates aged 21 and over. The figures include both full-time and part-time students. Figures do not include those entering to study for a higher education qualification in further education colleges.

The Department does not publish forecasts of entrants by age or by country of study.

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage change has taken place in the numbers of (a) mature students applying for courses of higher education and (b) lone parents applying for courses of higher education as mature students in each of the last three years. [42403]

Dr. Howells: The available data are given in the table.

Mature[1] home applicants to full-time and sandwich undergraduate courses in the UK applying via UCAS

	Year of entry:
	1995	1996	1997
Numbers	97,643	90,687	97,401
Percentage change compared to previous year	+2.9	−7.1	+7.4

[1] Defined as applicants aged 21 or over

The latest figures from UCAS on applicants for autumn 1998 entry show that, as at 20 March, the numbers of mature applicants are down by 14 per cent. compared with the previous year, though this indicates a recovery from the position earlier in the cycle. This fall in part reflects trends in demographics and the numbers of potential entrants with the relevant entry qualifications. However, these figures are not a particularly good guide to final numbers for mature applicants as mature students tend typically to apply later in the applications cycle. Moreover, the UCAS figures do not cover applicants to part-time or postgraduate courses. Information on the numbers of lone parents who applied as mature students is not held centrally.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many claims have been (a) terminated in each year since the implementation of the jobseeker's allowance because of a breach of the jobseeker's agreement and (b) subsequently reinstated following their referral to an adjudication officer; [42386]

(2) what was the average time between termination of a jobseeker's allowance claim because of a breach of the Jobseeker's Agreement and reinstatement following referral to an adjudicator in each year since the implementation of the jobseeker's allowance. [42387]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Failure to comply with the terms set out in the jobseeker's agreement does not, in itself, result in the loss or termination of jobseeker's allowance. It may, however, give rise to a doubt as to whether the jobseeker is available for, and actively seeking, employment. If this is the case, then it is those questions that will be referred for adjudication.

The Employment Service's quarterly analysis of adjudication officers' decisions is available in the Library.

Employment Service (Toilets)

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for what reasons it is the official policy of the Employment Service not to provide public toilets in its buildings. [42768]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Dr. Brian Iddon, dated 21 May 1998:

The Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me to reply to your question regarding the reasons why the Employment Service does not provide public toilets in its buildings. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Employment Service.

Historically, the Employment Service has not provided public toilets in its buildings largely because of the high cost of provision and maintenance which would be needed in our 1,000 plus Jobcentres. The majority of Jobcentres are in fact located in town centres where public toilet provision is available. I would also expect staff to by sympathetic to anyone with an urgent need to use a toilet, especially children, if they were made aware of the difficulty and public toilets were not to hand.

In addition, in response to the requirements of the Disability Discrimination Act, we are installing toilet facilities for disabled clients on a rolling basis, where it is feasible to do so. More generally, with the introduction of the New Deal programmes including the impending extension of the New Deal programme for Lone Parents later this year, we are reviewing our current policy on the provision of public toilets. The recommendations arising from the review should be available within the next month.

I hope this is helpful.

Euro

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to monitor the content of teaching and information materials about the euro currency funded by the European Commission supplied to schools in England and to ensure its compliance with the terms of the Education Act 1996. [42679]

Ms Estelle Morris: We cannot, and would not wish to, prevent information from being used in schools in a spirit of healthy debate. Under section 407 of the Education Act 1996, however, schools must present political issues to pupils in a balanced way. Any complaint of political bias should be made to the school's governing body in the first instance. We can also consider such a complaint, once the local procedure has been exhausted and if the complainant remains dissatisfied.

Public Bodies

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what is the average salary of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department; [42838]

(2) what is the average attendance fee of (a) male and (b) female members of boards of non-departmental public bodies responsible to his Department. [42839]

Dr. Howells: The majority of board members of non-governmental public bodies give their time and services voluntarily, and receive no payment other than normal travel and subsistence expenses. Where members do receive remuneration, this can vary between an annual salary, an honorarium or an attendance fee (which itself can be a daily rate or a half-daily rate, or calculated on a per meeting or per case basis). Individuals' remuneration therefore is not directly comparable.

Full details of all payments to board members of non-departmental bodies, by gender, are given in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies". Copies of "Public Bodies 1997" are available in the Library.

Public Appointments

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when his Department's action plan for increasing the number of women holding public appointments will be published; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [42840]

Dr. Howells: The Department's action plan will be published shortly. Copies will be placed in the Library.

Class Sizes

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the impact of compliance with the Government's target for reducing class sizes to 30 or fewer on the extra funding attracted by class sizes of 30-plus in circumstances where it is used to support specialist staff; and how schools will be compensated for the loss of this funding. [43099]

Mr. Byers: The Government will provide the funding required for schools to implement our pledge to reduce infant class sizes to 30 or below. We intend to bring forward the date of implementation to September 2001 at the latest. We have already allocated £22 million in revenue funding for 1998–99 and are now considering applications for the allocation of a further £40 million for capital work.

New Deal (Disabled People)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what will be the minimum population size eligible for a bid for funding under the new deal for disabled people. [43098]

Mr. Alan Howarth: There is no minimum population size required for a bid for funding under the new deal for disabled people programme.

The personal adviser service of the programme will be piloted in 12 areas linked to Benefits Agency districts. In those six areas which are open to competitive tender, the client groups range in size from 11,380 to 22,780.

Innovative schemes are being developed within this new deal programme to learn more about the most effective approaches for helping disabled people into work. In order to draw valid conclusions about them, we will need about 100 participants in each scheme, although we will consider bids for projects with a minimum of 50 participants.

Beacon Schools

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many schools have been awarded beacon status; what representations he has received on the decision to award schools beacon status; and by what means his Department will inform hon. Members of proposals to award beacon status to schools in their constituencies. [43103]

Mr. Byers: There are no beacon schools at present. I have invited those 177 schools recently identified by HMCI as "best performing" to consider beacon school status and to respond by 1 June. A number of other schools have also expressed interest in becoming beacon schools. A list of schools awarded beacon status will be published before the end of the summer term.

Pre-schools

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps his Department is taking to ensure that pre-schools are not disadvantaged by changes to LEA admission procedures for four-year-olds. [42115]

Ms Estelle Morris: We expect proposals to change admission policies for maintained schools in respect of 3 and 4-year-olds to be discussed in the newly established early years development partnerships which include the private and voluntary sectors as partners in the planning and delivery of good-quality early education. We will consider whether any other measures are necessary to sustain co-operation, collaboration and partnership between sectors.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures his Department is taking to reduce the amount of administrative work having to be undertaken by pre-schools. [42116]

Ms Estelle Morris: Through abolition of the nursery education voucher scheme, we have substantially reduced the administrative work of pre-schools and other providers.

Teachers (In-service Training)

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his policy regarding training of in-service teachers. [42172]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Government are clear that their targets and agenda for raising standards can be achieved only if there is a substantial programme of re-skilling and updating the knowledge and techniques available to serving teachers.

For this reason, we are investing heavily in in-service teacher training. The Government are supporting £505 million for 1998–99 through the standards fund, at least a third of which is available for teacher training. Most of this is ring-fenced for specific priorities including the training for raising standards in literacy and numeracy and training for head teachers.

The Teacher Training Agency also provides approximately £21 million annually to providers of INSET. For the first time this year, this funding was allocated on the basis of competitive bids from providers to deliver in-service training for teachers. The bids were judged according to their capacity to meet identified national priorities.

Additionally we are investing £230 million from the national lottery between 1999 and 2002 in information and communications technology teacher training. We expect these resources to come on stream from spring 1999.

Higher Education Provision

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many Teacher Training Agency-funded higher education providers there are in each Government office region; and how many will remain in each Government office region following decisions to re-direct in-service funding from some higher education providers. [42134]

Ms Estelle Morris: The table shows the number of HE providers currently in receipt of TTA INSET funding in each Government Office region.

Government Office region	Numbers of HE providers with TTA INSET funds 1997–98
South West	7
South East	11
London	10
West Midlands	8
Eastern	6
East Midlands	8
North West	4
Merseyside	3
Yorkshire and Humberside	12
North East	5
Other (the Open University)	1

The number which will be in receipt of TTA funds in three years' time, at the end of the current allocations cycle, cannot be estimated because there will be interim bidding rounds relating to 1999–2000 and 2000–01.

Higher Education (South-west)

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the locations of the Teacher Training Agency-funded higher education providers in the south-west region. [42171]

Ms Estelle Morris: The providers in 1997–98 are as follows:

The University of Bath, Bath;

Bath College of Higher Education, Bath;

The University of Bristol, Bristol;

Cheltenham and Gloucester College of Higher Education, Cheltenham;

University College of St. Mark and St. John, Plymouth;

The University of Plymouth, Plymouth;

The University of the West of England, Bristol.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Police and Military Forces (Support)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the support currently provided by his Department for (a) police and (b) military forces, broken down by country. [40613]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: FCO support for the police and the military in FY 1997/98 under the United Kingdom Military Training Assistance Scheme (UKMTAS) and through other programme budgets is as listed. The list shows support for personnel of other countries attending training courses in the UK and countries to which UK training teams or loan service personnel were deployed.

For 1998/99, the UKMTAS programme has been replaced by Assistance to Support Stability with In-Service Training (ASSIST), on which I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave to my hon. Friend Member for Chorley (Mr. Hoyle) on 26 March 1998, Official Report, columns 235–36.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) when Lord Avebury's letter reporting allegations that arms had been flown from Bulgaria was (a) received at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, (b) seen by officials in the Private Office of the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd), (c) seen by officials in the private office of the Secretary of State, (d) seen by the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Manchester, Central and (e) seen by the Secretary of State; [41723]

(2) when Lord Avebury's letter reporting allegations that arms had been flown in from Bulgaria was drawn to the attention of the Foreign Office's legal advisers; and who recommended this course of action; [41728]

(3) pursuant to his oral answer of 6 May 1998, Official Report, column 722, on arms sales to Sierra Leone, what the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd), was told on 1 May that he had not been told in mid-April relating to Sandline's involvement in Sierra Leone; [41759]

(4) if he will publish details of the information received from Britain's High Commissioner to Sierra Leone relating to Sandline, indicating (a) the dates when information was received and (b) if the information was seen by (i) the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd), and (ii) the Secretary of State; [41730]

Mr. Robin Cook: I refer the right hon. and learned Member to my statement in the House during the debate on 18 May 1998, Official Report, columns 604–11, in which I announced the investigation by Sir Thomas Legg KCB QC into allegations about Government involvement with the supply of arms to Sierra Leone by UK citizens and firms, and said that the Terms of Reference would be placed in the Library of the House. I intend to publish the report of the investigation.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the oral statement of the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd), of 12 March 1998, Official Report, column 841, on the tribute paid by President Kabbah to the role of the British Government, if he will list the acts of support and assistance to which he understood President Kabbah to be referring. [41760]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 12 May 1998]: I refer to the statement by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, during the debate on 12 March 1998, Official Report, column 840, and the statement I made during the debate on 18 May 1998, Official Report, columns 604–11.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what dates in 1998 (a) the issue of Sandline's involvement in Sierra Leone was discussed by ministers and (b) officials raised that issue with ministers. [41725]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 12 May 1998]: I refer the right hon. and learned Member to my statement in the House in the debate on 18 May 1998, Official Report, columns 604–11, in which I announced the investigation by Sir Thomas Legg KCB QC into allegations about Government involvement with the supply of arms to Sierra Leone by UK citizens and firms, and said that the Terms of Reference would be placed in the Library of the House. I intend to publish the report of the investigation.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what departmental oral and written briefing material was submitted directly to him before 28 April concerning Sandline's involvement with arms sales to Sierra Leone; [41600]

(2) what oral or written submissions he received from his Minister of State, the hon. Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd) before 28 April concerning Sandline's involvement with arms sales to Sierra Leone. [41598]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 12 May 1998]: None.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) which member of his private office is responsible for policy relating to arms sales to Sierra Leone; [41609]

(2) which member of his private office was responsible for the safekeeping of the letter from Sandline's solicitors to the Foreign Secretary, noted by his special adviser on 28 April. [41597]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 12 May 1998]: The Principal Private Secretary, assisted by two Private Secretaries and the other staff of the Private Office oversees the handling of all papers received in Private Office.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the letter from Sandline's solicitors concerning arms sales to Sierra Leone, first noted by his special adviser on 28 April, was contained in a departmental file within a ministerial box. [41599]

Mr. Robin Cook: I refer the hon. Member to my statement in the House during the debate on 18 May 1998, Official Report, columns 604–11, in which I announced the investigation by Sir Thomas Legg KCB QC into allegations about Government involvement with the supply of arms to Sierra Leone by UK citizens and firms, and said that the Terms of Reference would be placed in the Library of the House. I intend to publish the report of the investigation.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance was offered by the Government to President Kabbah of Sierra Leone during his period of exile. [41801]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 13 May 1998]: I refer to the statement by my hon. Friend the Minister of State in the debate on 12 March 1998, Official Report, column 840, and the statement I made in the debate on 18 May 1998, Official Report, columns, 604–11.

Rwanda

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been Her Majesty's Government's contribution to the United Nations Special Commission on Rwanda in each of the last three years. [42389]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The UK's annual contribution to the UN Regular Budget in 1996–97 was 5.32%. Expenditure on the United Nations Commission of Inquiry into Arms Flows to Rwanda from the UN Regular Budget in the biennium 1996–97 was $520–506. The Commission completed the first phase of its work in November 1996. It was reactivated by Security Council Resolution 1161 of 9 April which encouraged UN Member States to make voluntary contributions to finance the work of the Commission. In response, the Government have announced a contribution of £100,000.

Mr. Gerald Bull

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he or his officials have had with the Belgian authorities concerning the investigation into the murder of Mr. Gerald Bull; and if he will make a statement. [42608]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Belgian magistrate who is investigating the death of Gerald Bull has recently been informed on official channels that a visit to Brussels by a team of British scientific and technical officials had been planned for 19–21 March 1990 but did not in fact take place.

Kashmir

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he intends to take to encourage the international community to broker a resolution of the Kashmir issue. [42764]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer I gave to her on 19 May 1998, Official Report, column 363.

Departmental Energy Use

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of his Department's energy usage was from (a) renewable energy and (b) combined heating in each year since 1989–90. [42552]

Mr. Fatchett: None.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the quantity of (a) oil, (b) gas and (c) electricity purchased for the heating, lighting and powering of all accommodation occupied by his Department within the UK in each year since 1989–90; and what was the total cost in real terms of (a) to (c) in each year. [42549]

Mr. Fatchett: The quantities and costs of oil, gas and electricity purchased by my Department since 1990–91 are as follows:

Year	£	kWh
Electricity
1990–91	704,368	11,901,826
1991–92	926,380	12,624,474
1992–93	817,900	12,638,949

India

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his Indian counterparts on India's defence policies. [42564]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had no recent discussions with Mr. Vajpayee on India's defence policies. I summoned the Acting Indian High Commissioner on 13 May to register our dismay and concern at the nuclear tests in India. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary made clear in his statement to the House on 14 May 1998, Official Report, column 312, that the UK condemns the tests. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister spoke to Mr. Vajpayee in similar terms during a telephone conversation on 15 May.

Sudan

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations with Sudan; and if he will facilitate discussions between the Khartoum Government and the SPLM/SPLA. [42346]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Sudanese Government and the Sudan Peoples Liberation Army meet at the Inter-Governmental Authority on Development (IGAD) peace talks, the last session of which was held in Nairobi on 2–6 May. We support these talks. To maintain their momentum, we are presently discussing with members of the IGAD Partners Forum, the convening of an urgent meeting of the Forum. The intention will be to follow up on the outcome of the 2–6 May talks.

GCHQ

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what factors his Department is taking into account in the relocation of GCHQ. [42491]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 20 May 1998]: GCHQ's PFI project is being operated in accordance with standard public sector procurement practice in order to ensure value for money. The main factors taken into account are operational flexibility, the requirement for a single site within 10 miles of Cheltenham town centre, environmental considerations and the impact of planning restrictions. The results of the evaluation process are expected to be announced later this year.

Deportations

Mr. Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many United Kingdom citizens convicted of murder or homicide abroad have been deported back to the United Kingdom in each year since 1990. [41737]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 19 May 1998]: Foreign jurisdictions are not required to inform us of the deportation of a British citizen. The information in the following table on the number of British citizens deported to the UK after completing a sentence for murder or homicide is therefore incomplete and relates only to those cases where we have become directly involved.

Mr. Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many United Kingdom citizens, convicted of criminal offences abroad, have been deported back to the United Kingdom in each year since 1990. [41734]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 19 May 1998]: Foreign jurisdictions are not required to inform us of the deportation of a British citizen. The information in the following table on the number of British citizens deported to the UK after completing a sentence for a criminal offence is therefore incomplete and relates only to those cases where we have become directly involved:

Sanjiv Kumar Nandra

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the file of Mr. Sanjiv Kumar Nandra, ref IMM/ECR/98/S, whose wife resides in Burfield Street, Leicester will be passed to London. [43082]

Mr. Fatchett: We have asked our High Commission in New Delhi for a detailed account of the position. The Migration and Visa Correspondence Unit will write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

BBC World Service

Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on future funding for the BBC World Service. [42899]

Mr. Fatchett: We are examining with the Treasury how we deploy all our resources, including those dedicated to the World Service, as part of the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review.

Indonesia

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on the safety and security measures being taken to move UK nationals from their homes in Jakarta to the airport for evacuation; [42921]

(2) if he will make a statement on the evacuation of British citizens from Jakarta. [42920]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer my hon. Friend to the Statement I made in the House on 19 May 1998, Official Report, columns 731–32.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the safety of Clare Brooks, a constituent, currently in Jakarta. [42922]

Mr. Fatchett: We understand Clare Louise Brooks left Jakarta for the United Kingdom on 19 May.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will request the Argentinian Government to provide compensation to fund the clearance of mines laid in the Falkland Islands. [43044]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Argentine Government offered in 1993 to assist with demining and to meet the cost. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has asked them if, as a first step, they would be willing to help fund a British-led study to assess the feasibility and cost of demining the Falklands.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will request compensation for the Falkland Islands from the Argentinian Government for devastation caused during the Falklands conflict. [43043]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We have no plans to ask the Argentines for compensation for the damage done during the Falklands conflict.

Argentina

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what new exceptions there have been to the arms embargo on Argentina. [43580]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: This Department has recently granted two exceptions to the embargo, one in respect of the sale of two hunting rifle barrels to a private individual in Argentina, another in respect of the sale of twenty deactivated weapons to an Argentine importer. These represent exceptions but not changes to the embargo.

UN Register of Conventional Arms

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the United Kingdom submitted its 1997 return to the UN Register of Conventional Arms; and if copies of the return will be placed in the Library. [43581]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: This Department submitted its return to the UN Register covering conventional arms transfers in calendar year 1997 on the 7 May. Copies have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Our return includes information on types of weapons transferred, details of procurement from national production and details of military holdings which, for the first time, include the types of weapons held in six of the seven categories of weapons included on the Register.

We attach great importance to the Register as a confidence building and transparency measure. We will continue to work with our EU partners to encourage as many countries as possible to make a return to the Register.

Federal Republic of Yugoslavia

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the approval of a licence for the temporary export of aeroengine parts to the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. [43582]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: This Department has approved a licence for the temporary export of aero-engine parts to the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia for machining and assembling into more complete units. These units will be returned to the UK for inclusion in engine kits for export to Italy. As the export of the goods concerned is controlled under Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, this licence was an exception to our interpretation of the EU arms embargo on the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. This decision does not affect the Government's continued support of the EU common position on arms exports to Bosnia-Herzegovina, Croatia and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

European Structural Funds

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the President of the European Commission concerning the future size of European structural funds; and if he will make a statement. [42430]

Mrs. Roche: I have been asked to reply.

The Government believe that the Structural Funds need to be fair, affordable, durable, simpler, and more efficient. The overall budget should be well below the 0.46 per cent. of Community GNP proposed by the Commission, before and after enlargement.

Representations by UK Ministers and Officials have been made to the Commission, outlining our support for containing the cost of the Funds.

Discussions on finance are likely to take place towards the end of the year and will continue into early 1999. It is too early in the negotiations to comment on the size of the European Structural and Cohesion Funds.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Low Pay Commission

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she will publish the recommendations of the Low Pay Commission and announce her response to its recommendations. [43102]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Low Pay Commission was asked to make its recommendations by the end of this month and it is on course to do so. We will publish its report and the Government's response as soon as possible once we have considered the recommendations.

More Group

Mr. Burstow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received in respect of the takeover bid by J. C. Decaux for the More Group; and how many of these were from local authorities. [43039]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade and the Director General of Fair Trading have received a considerable number of representations, for or against the merger, from competitors, customers, and others. Many of the representations from customers have been from local authorities.

Secondments

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is her policy on the secondment of individuals from private companies to her Department. [41069]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 12 May 1998]: It is DTI policy to encourage the use of temporary secondments to bring into the Department specialist expertise or experience to assist the Department in achieving its objectives.

All inward secondments from industry are arranged in accordance with the Civil Service Commissioner's recruitment code. Secondees fulfil roles within the Department's management structure and report to Civil Servants. Our agreements with their employers set terms and conditions which closely mirror those of Civil Servants.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what role individuals on secondment from private companies to her Department have in advising Ministers; and what access such individuals have to Ministers on issues concerning their company. [41070]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 12 May 1998]: A secondee may, from time to time, contribute to advice put to Ministers by Civil Servants and meet Ministers during the course of their work. Measures are in place to ensure that there is no conflict of interest.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many individuals are currently on secondment from private companies to her Department; and if she will list them, indicating their responsibilities. [41071]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 12 May 1998]: There are, at present, 138 individuals on temporary secondment into the DTI from private companies. I have two lists; the first lists those working under the Department's Export Promoter Scheme, the second lists those seconded elsewhere into the Department and includes the Directorates within which they are working. Details of precise responsibilities are not held centrally.

Astra

Mr. Cohen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what matters were covered by the public interest immunity certificates used in connection with the disqualification proceedings against Mr. Gerald James and the directors of Astra Holdings. [41874]

Mrs. Beckett: No public interest immunity certificates were sought by my Department or were issued in connection with the disqualification proceedings against former directors of Astra Holding plc. Despite press reports that it was intended to use a PII to suppress the 'Moulsdale letter' in that case, the letter was in fact brought to the attention of the court by my Department.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what advice DTI inspectors have given on the prosecution of Mr. Gerald James. [38920]

Mrs. Beckett: DTI inspectors appointed to investigate the affairs of Astra plc offered views on disqualification but not on prosecution.

EU Industry Council

Mrs. Humble: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the outcome of the EU Industry Council held in Brussels on 7 May. [43434]

Mrs. Beckett: I chaired a meeting of the EU Industry Council on 7 May.

The Council adopted a Regulation on new rules on aid to shipbuilding. Operating aid will be eliminated from end 2000 and remaining forms of support will be re-focused to improve the industry's competitiveness. There will be new aid for innovation and the opening up of regional aid. A strict limit will be placed on restructuring aid and strengthened monitoring provisions will be introduced. These measures will lead to an overall reduction in the level of European shipbuilding subsidies. The new aid regime is an achievement for our Presidency and meets the interests of UK shipyards.

The main outstanding questions before the Council were the date when operating aid should be abolished and the restrictions that should be placed on the existing system of regional aid to reduce distortion in competition. After a long and thorough discussion, a compromise was finally agreed with the abolition of operating aid at the end of 2000 and regional aid ceilings of 22.5 per cent for "A" regions and 12.5 per cent. for "C" regions (the so called "A" regions are Europe's poorest and "C" regions are less poor). The regulation does not affect the treatment of FPSOs. There will also be Commission declarations on the following: the strict application of the regional aid rules; the aid cumulation rule; and the viability criterion for restructuring aid, and a Council statement that the agreement on regional aid is without prejudice to the Community regional state aid policy.

The Council had an in-depth discussion on a proposed Regulation laying down detailed rules for the application of state aid rules in general. The Presidency put forward a compromise text and the debate focused on the three main issues still to be settled, namely; time limits for Commission action; Commission powers in respect of recovery of unlawful aid and a period of limitation on Commission action.

Good progress was made with a clear political will in favour of a Regulation and the Presidency concluded that further work should be undertaken by officials to enable the Council to reach a political agreement.

As a new initiative, I invited Industry Ministers to have dinner with representatives of industry, on the eve of the Council to discuss competitiveness. I see this as an important step in developing a real dialogue between industry and the Council of Ministers. The Council meeting held a debate on the competitiveness of European Industry, mainly focusing on the key factors at national and supra-national level influencing competitiveness of EU industry and how they can be achieved. The meeting also discussed one of the key factors, namely the availability of appropriate finance for innovative companies.

I concluded that there had been agreement on the importance of competitiveness and on the key factor as identified by the dinner and confirmed by the Council's discussion, namely: encouraging competition, efficient functioning of the Internal Market, a framework for innovation, continuous development of skills and labour adaptability, efficient markets for risk capital, improved environment for business start-up and entrepreneurship. There was strong support for continuing the Council's work on competitiveness with Austria and Finland pledging to do so in their forthcoming Presidencies.

The Council took note of a progress report by the Commission on the Business Environment Simplification Task Force (BEST) and a Commission communication on Fostering Entrepreneurship in Europe. The Presidency noted that there was agreement on the importance of entrepreneurship for competitiveness, growth and jobs.

The Council also agreed conclusions on the competitiveness of the Construction Industry and a plan of action to increase the competitiveness of the European Textile and Clothing Industry.

There were Commission presentations on a proposed directive on late payment, the year 2000 computer problem, delocalisation, restructuring of the steel industry in Central and Eastern Europe, Six-monthly report on the monitoring of steel aid cases and a report on the work of the high level group dealing with the implications of industrial change.

Civil Service

Helen Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the Department of Trade and Industry recruitment for calendar year 1997, with particular reference to the use of permitted exceptions to the principles of fair and open competition and selection on merit, as required by the Civil Service Commissioner's Recruitment Code. [43433]

Mrs. Beckett: It is DTI policy that recruitment is carried out on the basis of fair and open competition and selection on merit, subject to the exceptions permitted by the Civil Service Commissioners. My Department has systems in place which ensure that the principles of fair and open competition are understood and followed, in accordance with the provisions of the Civil Service Commissioner's Recruitment Code. These systems are subject to internal check by The DTI's Internal Audit and to external check by the Commissioner's approved auditors.

The DTI's Executive Agencies and the Government Office network make separate arrangements for publishing recruitment data, and the following table and narratives describe only Headquarters recruitment:

Notes:

1. ethnic data have been suppressed for those grades where numbers recruited are 5 or less, to avoid the possibility of identifying individuals
2. from 1 August 1997, the department's grades became expressed as pay ranges. For consistency, we have used grades for this exercise. Information will be presented as Ranges next year

The number of occasions on which the permitted exceptions to fair and open competition and selection on merit have been used at each level (except for appointments of up to 12 months), are categorised as below. Please include details of any exceptions underneath the relevant category:

extensions of appointments of up to 12 months up to a maximum of 24 months: none recurrent short term appointments

1 EO former civil servant brought in for a few weeks at a time when needed

2 AOs and 1 EO in Queens Award Office where the work is seasonal short term appointments where highly specialised skills are required:

2 Grade 7s and 1 Grade 6 on standby appointments, 1 Grade 7 on a fixed term contract. All were for specialist posts that would have been difficult to recruit from industry and it was regarded as too expensive to employ consultants extensions of short term appointments beyond the initially publicised period, including conversions to permanency:

1 EO on a fixed term contract and 1 AO casual appointment converted to permanency secondments: none

extensions to secondments: none

re-appointment of former civil servants:

1 Grade 7 previously employed by Crown Prosecution Service

1 AO now employed on a fixed term contract

2 EOs and 2 AOs on recurrent temporary appointments

transfers of staff with their work (not under TUPE):

1 AA, 3 AOs, 4 HEOs transferred from Cabinet Office with their work transfers of staff from other public services without work (unless from a public body staff exclusively by civil servants): None appointments of disabled candidates under modified selection arrangements any use of the exceptions reserved for the Commissioners: None.

Export Licences

Mr. Paterson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many export contracts she estimates have been cancelled because of the withholding of export licences as a result of the ethical foreign policy; and if he will estimate the number of jobs lost in consequence. [42578]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 18 May 1998]: Where an application for an export licence is refused, applicants do not routinely inform the Department whether such decisions have resulted in the cancellation of contracts. I am not therefore in a position to make the estimate requested. As my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary said when announcing the new export licence assessment criteria on 28 July 1997, Official Report, columns 26–29, we are committed to the maintenance of a strong defence industry which is a strategic part of our industrial base as well as our defence effort. Defence exports can also contribute to international stability by strengthening bilateral and collective defence relationships in accordance with the right of self-defence recognised by the UN Charter, but arms transfers must be managed responsibly, in particular so as to avoid their use for internal repression and international aggression.

European Structural and Cohesion Funds

Mr. Sawford: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the recently published proposals by the European Commission for reform of the European Structural and Cohesion Funds. [43435]

Mrs. Roche: The draft regulations for the Structural and Cohesion Funds covering the operation of the Funds from the years 2000 to 2006 were published on 18 March as part of a wider Agenda 2000 package.

It is important that the Structural and Cohesion Funds be reformed to make them more effective and to provide better value for money. The Funds' procedures are in need of substantial simplification and the prospect of enlargement of the EU to include Central and Eastern European countries makes this reform vital in any event.

During the long negotiations ahead we will be striving to achieve three main aims for the UK and its regions—these are fairness, affordability and durability.

Fairness means that no Member State should receive more than at present. Regions which continue to be eligible under the reformed criteria should not see an increase in per capita receipts while others face cuts. The cost of enlargement must be shared fairly between all Member States. It is not clear that the Commission's proposals achieve fairness. The UK is willing to take its fair share of cuts but could not accept an obviously unfair allocation.

In order to achieve affordability and durability, the total budget for the Funds should be well below the 0.46 per cent. of GNP proposed by the Commission. It will be vitally important to reduce the cost and per capita receipts before accession in order to make enlargement of the EU affordable and therefore long lasting and durable.

The Commission has proposed that the current 7 Objectives be reduced to 3 new ones. The proposed Objective 1 eligibility criterion is 75 per cent. of average EU GDP. The Government agree that a cut off is needed. There should, however, be flexibility around this level to allow for statistical margins of error. We also feel that any special cases should be translated across the EU. For example, the Scottish Highlands and Islands Objective 1 area, with a population density of about 9 people per sq km, should receive the same treatment as similar areas in northern Sweden and Finland.

The special circumstances of Northern Ireland and the ongoing political developments there should be recognised. Northern Ireland should certainly receive treatment at least as good as the richer Republic of Ireland.

For the new Objective 2, the Commission is proposing using unemployment as the main eligibility criterion. The last-minute concession of safety net limiting the reduction of population coverage to one third is an improvement on the initial proposals. But in our view GDP would be the most equitable and transparent basis for distributing Funds between Member States and determining total eligibility in each Member State.

Regional unemployment and other factors are better used to allocate money within Member States. There is a far greater range and quality of deprivation indicators for local areas available nationally than at EU level. The length of reference period is important; measures of unemployment should take account of business cycles.

Transition periods for those areas losing eligibility under the new regime should be of equal length for all Objectives—six years for Objective 2 and 5b, the same as for Objective 1.

The new Objective 3 would apply only outside Objective 1 and 2 areas. It would provide a policy framework for the development of human resources across the UK. We believe that Objective 3 must support Member States' employment strategies as set out in their National Employment Action Plans.

We support the objective of simplifying the Funds and making them more effective and better value for money. The Commission proposals are a good starting point. Administration must be improved, ensuring adequate appraisal monitoring and evaluation, and more subsidiarity should be introduced.

The Funds make an important contribution to economic development in the UK regions. The Government are consulting widely and will be working to ensure that the detailed arrangements for the allocation of the Funds take account of the UK's regional interests, and that they are fair to the UK as a whole. It is, however, too early to estimate the impact on individual UK regions. Publication of the Regulations marks the start of a long negotiation initially under the UK Presidency and continuing possibly into 1999. The Regulations will have to be agreed in the Council of Ministers and approved by the European Parliament.

Dounreay

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list (a) the number of safeguards visits made, (b) the reports made and (c) the duration of each visit by (i) Euratom and (ii) International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards inspectors, to (1) D1202, fuel fabrication facility, (2) D1203, highly enriched uranium recovery plant, (3) D1204, research reactor reprocessing unit and (4) D2700, radioactive materials cementation plant, at the UK Atomic Energy Authority establishment at Dounreay since 1980. [40671]

Mrs. Roche: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply of 19 December 1997, Official Report, column 342.

The safeguards reports made by all UK nuclear operators, including Dounreay, are in accordance with the procedures set out in Commission Regulation (Euratom) No. 3227/76. Copies of the Regulations are available in the Library of the House.

No facilities at Dounreay are currently designated for inspection by the IAEA.

The detailed information sought on safeguards inspection visits could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Radioactive Isotopes

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much material was available in the United Kingdom on 23 April to make medical radioactive isotope targets for use in cancer treatment; and how many such targets could be manufactured from that quantity of materials. [40752]

Mr. Battle: On 23 April, the UKAEA held sufficient Highly Enriched Uranium (HEU) of the necessary enrichment, greater than 90 per cent. to produce 7,800 targets which will then be used to produce 39 million doses of Technetium-99m for use in the treatment of cancer and other diseases. This inventory comprised 39 km of HEU in a number of different forms; only 7 km was available as stock material for immediate target manufacture. The use of Technetium-99m continues to grow, currently some 30,000 procedures per day are carried out in Western Europe using this isotope. A wide range of other radioisotopes are used in the treatment of cancer, however the UKAEA play no part in their manufacture. The Government do not have central records of the overall amounts of radioisotopes used for medical purposes.

European Structural Funds (Wales)

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the scope and nature of her responsibilities in relation to the review of European structural funds in respect of Wales, indicating the timetable for action by her Department. [42470]

Mrs. Roche: The Department of Trade and Industry is the lead Department on the reform of European Structural and Cohesion Funds. Our responsibility is to co-ordinate UK policy on the reform for all Government Departments including Welsh, Scottish, and Northern Ireland offices.

Administration of Structural Funds programmes within Wales is the responsibility of the Welsh office. The Department of Trade and Industry has responsibility for co-ordination of issues affecting the UK as a whole.

During our Presidency, we intend to take the negotiations forward as efficiently and effectively as possible, focusing on the general regulations which deal with administrative simplification of the Funds. Discussions have started on the proposed regulations by Member States at working group level. These will then need to be negotiated in the Council of the Ministers and approved by the European Parliament.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Lone Parents

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if she will make it her policy to ensure that home visits remain a major feature of the New Deal for lone parents when it becomes a nationwide scheme; and if she will make a statement; [40206]

(2) what estimate she has made of the effect on the number of home visits under the New Deal for lone parents of the move to a nationwide scheme under the primary responsibility of the Employment Service. [40210]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Government intend that the quality of the nationwide service will be at least as good as that currently available in the prototypes, within a service tailor-made to individuals' needs. Home visits are currently a feature of New Deal for Lone Parents and will continue to be so.

Pension Review

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when she intends to announce the conclusions of the current pension review. [43087]

Mr. Denham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for West Dorset (Mr. Letwin) on 24 April 1998, Official Report, column 731.

Consultation Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the consultation papers published since 1 May 1997 giving the date of publication, closing date for submissions and the number of respondents. [42255]

Mr. Field: The information is set out in the table.

Consultation paper	Start date for consultation exercise	End date for consultation exercise	Number of responses to completed exercises
First stage of Pensions Review	17 July 1997	31 October 1997	over 2,000
Stakeholder Pensions: A Consultation Document	19 November 1997	31 January 1998	over 200
Green Paper, "New Ambitions for our Country: a New Contract for Welfare"	26 March 1998	31 July 1998	—
Joint Green Paper with the Department for Education and Employment, "Meeting the Childcare Challenge"	19 May 1998	28 July 1998	—

In addition, the Department has undertaken a number of consultations with interested organisations and people on specific technical issues.

Correspondence

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when she expects to reply to the letter of 7 January from the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed on behalf of Mr. M. Gee of 38 Gloster Park, Amble, about benefits for disabled people. [42867]

Mr. Field: A reply was sent to the hon. Member on 18 May 1998.

National Insurance

Mr. Plaskitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps she is taking to reform employers' national insurance contributions. [41711]

Mr. Denham: In his Budget statement on 17 March, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced the most radical reforms of National Insurance contributions for over 20 years; reforms which support the Government's welfare to work policies and cut red tape for employers.

From April 1999, the level of earnings at which employers' contributions become payable will be increased from the lower earnings limit (£64 a week for 1998/99) to an amount equivalent to the single personal tax allowance (currently £81 a week). Employers' contributions on earnings below this new threshold will be abolished, and the four different rates of contributions they currently pay for employees not contracted-out of the State earnings-related pension scheme will be replaced by a single 12.2 per cent rate. Contribution rebates for employers with contracted-out schemes will not be affected. They will continue to be entitled to contribution rebates on earnings between the lower earnings limit and the single personal tax allowance. These changes, which are revenue neutral for employers as a whole, are contained in the Social Security Bill for which we will be seeking Royal Assent today.

Public Appointments

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when her Department's action plan for increasing the number of women holding public appointments will be published; and if she will place a copy in the Library. [42813]

Mr. Field: This Government are committed to widening the range of candidates applying for public appointments and encouraging more women and members of the ethnic minorities to put themselves forward for public office. This Department is currently drawing up an action plan which will set robust targets for increasing the number of women and members of the ethnic minorities holding public appointments. This will be published shortly and copies will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Benefit Integrity Project

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on the progress of the DLA/Benefit Integrity Project in the Hereford constituency. [40775]

Mr. Denham: The Benefit Integrity Project aims to ensure that those in receipt of DLA are entitled to it. While it is right to check that people are receiving the correct amount of benefit, we are determined that those checks should be undertaken as sensitively as possible. Also, we should ensure all decisions taken as a result of the project are right. We have, therefore, acted to introduce an extra safeguard to improve the quality of, and the confidence in, benefit decisions made by the project.

The administration of the Benefit Integrity Project is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Paul Keetch, dated 21 May 1998.

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking for a statement on the progress of the Disability Living Allowance Benefit Integrity Project (BIP) in the Hereford constituency.

Information on the BIP is not available in the format requested. To provide geographical information routinely would incur high costs and disrupt the processing of ongoing casework.

As at 31 March 1998, a total of 172,026 cases, including 27,991 renewal cases, have been selected for action under the BIP. A total of 72,470 cases have been examined. Of the total cases dealt with 1,699 have resulted in an increase in benefit, 56,272 have remained unchanged, 9,168 have resulted in a reduction in benefit and 5,331 have resulted in benefit being stopped.

The total includes 14,815 renewal cases, of which 462 have resulted in an increase in benefit, 7,633 have remained unchanged, 3,992 have resulted in a reduction in benefit and 2,728 have resulted in benefit being stopped.

A monthly statistical report can be found in the House of Commons Library.

I hope that this is helpful.

Social Fund Commissioner

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she has appointed a new Social Fund Commissioner to succeed Mr. John Scampion when his appointment ends on 31 May. [43578]

Ms Harman: I am pleased to announce that Mr. John Scampion has agreed to serve as Social Fund Commissioner for Great Britain and Northern Ireland for a further period of three years from 1 June 1998.

Since taking up the post of Social Fund Commissioner in June 1995, Mr. Scampion has successfully developed the Independent Review Service (IRS) into a customer focused organisation which aims to get the decision right first time. An important step for the IRS in this new approach has been the development of staff to realise their full potential, leading to the award of the Investors in People accreditation in July 1997.

Mr. Scampion has also agreed to take part in the general monitoring of the effectiveness of the new Budgeting Loan scheme.

I am confident that I can rely on Mr. Scampion to maintain and even improve upon his excellent record to date.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 312

SESSION 1997–98

11th May—21st May 1998

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
